EIGHTH EPISODE

"IN BOHEMIA."

CHAPTER XV.

The Irrepressibles.

FIRST DAY.

One evening at dusk John Burton was seated in his study killing the half-hour which intervened before he must go to his dressing-room and change his clothes for dinner. For some reason his thoughts were tinged with an unusual melancholy. He found himself reviewing the by-gone years, and the singular conclusion was borne in on him that he had never been really happy since he ceased to earn a living by manual labor.

He was now a marquis and a man of great means, yet, in the midst of a palatial establishment, with a troop of servants ready to obey his slightest wish, and an expensive French chef even then preparing his solitary meal, he suddenly realized that the last genuine pleasure within recollection had nothing whatsoever to do with titles and luxuries.

He remembered the occasion perfectly well. He had been five years at work in a foundry when the manager of his department stopped him one morning as he passed the check office and said off-handedly:

"Burton, in future, you take charge as foreman, and draw down $25 per week. Make good, and it will be $30 at the end of a month."

Although John had deserved promotion, it was none the less sweet when it came. Now, after the full years, came the bitter thought that not only had he not really earned a cent since by honest toil, but that all the joy seemed to have gone out of life. Moved by an uncontrollable impulse, he sprang to his feet and ran upstairs two steps at a time. His valet was arranging the suit in a dress shirt.

"Quit that," cried John cheerfully. "I'm off on a trip. Take charge here till I come back. My lawyers will attend to the necessary expenses."

"For what period shall I pack, sir?" inquired the man.

"Nothing doing," grinned John. "I'll fix things for myself."

Producing a bunch of keys, he unlocked a drawer which the valet was never allowed to open, and astonished his servitor by bringing forth an old and worn suit of blue serge, the "everyday best" rig of his working days, which, with a thick flannel shirt, he proceeded to don forthwith.

The man smiled. He believed his master was bent on some Haroun al Raschid escape, and the Marquis of Castleton was sufficiently erratic in his behavior at times that the incident should pass without comment.

Beyond a plentiful supply of money, John brought nothing with him which savored of the dignity he was leaving behind. He meant giving himself a genuine test. He took train for a neighboring town, ate a meal at a small restaurant (to be candid, he found the food coarse and unpalatable) and set about finding a lodging such as would be suitable to a mechanic out of work. A friendly policeman directed him, and the man's sunburned face looked so kindly and sympathetic that John asked him where he might seek employment with some prospect of success. Just then a row in the street called for the intervention of the law.

Two men were fighting, and the policeman was about to grab the pair of them when an elderly, wizened man, fully sixty-five years of age, ran from a dilapidated building labeled "Mission Hall," and thrust himself between the pugilists.

"Come, now, Jim, and you, Tom!" cried the peacemaker, amiably, "what's all this about? Why should two good pals like you try to settle a dispute like a couple of snarling curs? All right, officer," he went on, winking at the policeman. "I'll fix things. This stupid scrap ends here and now. Neither of 'em will hit Brother Billy—will you, mates?"

The combatants looked sheepish. One volunteered an explanation, which the other capped by demanding fiercely:

"Why didn't you tell me that sooner?"

So the row was settled. Incidentally, John made the acquaintance of one who had devoted his whole life to the service of his fellows. Brother Billy invited him to enter the mission hall, and looked puzzled on hearing that his new friend was in search of work. The missionary was a judge of men. One glance at the young millionaire's clean-cut, thoughtful and self-reliant face told him that here was no waster, but a man well able to take care of himself.

"I could do with your help here," he said instantly. "Sometimes my lambs grow troublesome sheep, and require rather strenuous handling."

But the offer was not to John's liking. It savored too much of the very inquiry which was torturing his soul, and he knew from sad experience that he had been an abject failure as a philanthropist. The missionary promised to give his case some consideration on the morrow, and John was about to depart when a poor woman entered, sobbing pitifully. She was in urgent need of a loan to save her children from starvation.

The missionary looked pained. He searched his pockets. They were empty. He lived like the ravens, trusting to Providence to provide the wherewithal for the morrow. John's soft heart melted, of course. He followed the weeping supplicant and pressed a $5 bill into her hand, whereat Brother Billy smiled. He fancied he had taken the measure of his man correctly.

Brother Billy rendered his new friend an immediate service by directing him to a lodging slightly superior in quality to any place which Burton might have found otherwise. It had been erected as a studio building, but an industrial wave had submerged the district, and art is a tender flower which seldom thrives in such conditions.

Still, the muses had not wholly departed, as John learned while bargaining with the janitor for a sparsely furnished room. A pretty girl passed on the landing. She was carrying a bottle of milk and a box of crackers, and John was vastly surprised by noting the way in which the man scowled after her.

WHEN WEAKENED, RUN DOWN, TAKE TANLAC----IT'S GOOD FOR YOU

Reasons Abound in the Following Why Any One With Such Troubles Must Wisely Conclude Tanlac is Worthy Thorough Test Recommended.

ARMY OF INDORSERS NEARING MILLION MARK

The reader must by now have read a Tanlac advertisement, yet there is still a message awaiting the man, woman or child run down, weakened and sick which should not be passed by and for the person strong now, but apt to feel badly later, the following has a special significance:

As the whole world knows, most ailments and disease arise through nature's inability to throw off poisons as fast as they accumulate. We were provided with vital organs which, when normal, keep the system well. High living, modern methods of hustle and bustle, crowding and shoving without exercise to assist nature handle the rich foods we eat and overcome the late hours and other dissipations of the day, however, tax those vital organs to the limit, and ailments and disease creep in. Perhaps one of the most common complaints and first experienced by most people is that of a bloated, sore, sour, gassy stomach, belching spells, constipation, pains in side, chest and pit of stomach after meals. Looking inside, we find food is becoming clogged in the intestinal tract, it ferments and generates foul gases. Toxins (actual poisons) permeate the system, crowd the other organs, kidneys and liver to their utmost capacity. Uric acid and other poisons get into the blood past the filtering process of overworked kidneys. Maybe you blast a passage with calomel or a pill, but the cause stays there. We must go deeper and remove the cause before more serious complications come. It seems as though the whole system is wrong: dull headaches, nervousness, loss of sleep, energy, appetite and weight attest to the breakdown. The brain gets sluggish, and so does the blood, the liver works irregularly, the bowels are not right. Like a blow in the stomach, the whole system doubles up with pains, dizzy spells and the usual symptoms.

People watchful of their own condition know these symptoms, and as Tanlac's merit is now generally acknowledged, the reason for the prejudice of a few seems all the more unreasonable. This great remedy, it must be remembered, is the product of a great laboratory and the result of the combined experience of a corps of experts headed by the eminent chemist, Herr Joseph Trimbach, perhaps the foremost thinker and most highly respected man in his line in this country. They, with unlimited facilities, brains and funds, were as able to create a good medicine as a bad, and to make one costs no more than to make the other. No organization in this country was better equipped than they. For years they centered every thought upon the ailments of stomach, kidney and liver, the cause and the best means of combating and correcting them. The result was a new and wonderful, purely vegetable preparation which, after thousands of tests, was pronounced perfect and named Tanlac. These thousands of tests are a matter of record. Now, as this army of indorsers nears the million mark, and thousands in this vicinity attest to the truthfulness of claims made for it, every man, woman and child so troubled must wisely conclude Tanlac is at least worthy the thorough test recommended. Read testimonials on this page. Then get a bottle.

TANLAC FINE OLD AGE TONIC

Elderly Folks Find New Remedy, Splendid Tonic and System Builder as Proven Below.

Here below is told the story of a lady past seventy years of age, who received wonderful results from taking Tanlac. She states it gave her more strength and gave her a better appetite than any medicine she has ever taken. She also said it caused her to feel rested on rising in the morning, which was something that had not been the case for many years.

"I want all sufferers to use this great tonic and system builder. If it will do all it has for me, who has lived the allotted time, it surely will do all that or more for those younger than I," said Mrs. F. E. Marks, 2612½ Clay Street, Richmond. "I was suffering from a run-down condition, weakness and general debility. I had a very poor appetite, but after taking two bottles of Tanlac I can truthfully say it made me feel strong and good again, although 70 years old."

Elderly folks or those weakened by illness or other causes, in need of a tonic, system restorer and remedy for deranged vital organs, will find that Tanlac has wonderful rejuvenating powers. Hundreds of elderly folks right here in this vicinity attest to its efficiency and neighbors all around the reader doubtless know of its genuine merit. Ask them, read what others say, get a copy of the Tanlac Times at nearest druggist listed below, or better still, a trial bottle to-day.

WHOLE FAMILY ENDORSES IT

Richmond Lady Says Remedy Is Accomplishing Wonders for Sick, Run Down People.

"The Tanlac people are doing a great amount of good. I hear this in conversation with friends and neighbors, and inasmuch as several of my family have been greatly benefited as well as myself, I cannot say too much for this great medicine," said Mrs. Elizabeth Baggett, of Richmond, residing at Forty-first and McCaul Streets.

"Before taking Tanlac I suffered with indigestion in its worst form. My food did not digest properly. Gave me a most uncomfortable feeling. I had awful headaches, lacked energy and a generally weakened run down system made me take the advice of others in the family who had been relieved by Tanlac, and since taking I too feel like my old self once more and recommend it to all."

Mrs. Baggett is just one more among thousands long troubled with stomach trouble, headaches and similar ailments, but now relieved by this remarkable preparation which is so heartily indorsed by druggist, doctor and nearly a million users. Get a bottle to-day.

STOMACH TROUBLED HER FOR YEARS

Indigestion, Torpid Liver and Stomach Trouble Relieved at Last By Tanlac.

"For many years I suffered with indigestion, torpid liver and stomach trouble. I could scarcely eat anything that would not disagree with me. As a result I was forced to exist on a diet continually," said Mrs. W. G. Duke, of Richmond. "Years made my case a desperate one and difficult to treat successfully, and if you suffer as I did and begin taking Tanlac, which I strongly advise, don't get discouraged if one bottle doesn't make a complete cure. If you take it, it will do all that is claimed for it by the makers."

How true the above statement is! If only people would remember that it takes months to make an invalid, and almost as long to recuperate, they would not be so impatient. They would not stop just because they felt good again after a few doses.

"I was advised by a friend to take Tanlac, and after I had taken one bottle I felt relieved and better than I had for some time," continued Mrs. Duke, yet had she failed to continue the treatment awhile longer, after so many years' suffering, she might not be among the thousands in this vicinity who now indorse Tanlac.

A glance back over the files of the daily papers here will prove that hundreds of similar cases have been relieved, and that Tanlac has won the unqualified indorsement and recommendation of men and women, old and young, who through actual tests know themselves what it will do. They readily knew they felt badly, stomach was sore, sour, gassy, bloated and deranged. Their digestion was troublesome. Constipation added to their troubles; perhaps headaches, sluggish kidneys and liver menaced their health, and when they took Tanlac they experienced relief. They knew what brought that relief, and they have given a message for others' benefit.

HAD LAME BACK FOR MANY YEARS

Kidney and Bladder Trouble Caused Untold Suffering Until She Took Tanlac.

RELATIVE RECOMMENDED IT.

"I suffered from kidney and bladder trouble for many years until one day a relative recommended Tanlac, and though at first it didn't seem to do me much good, I persevered, knowing my case was one of long standing and I did not despair. After taking three bottles I was rapidly improving, and on finishing the fourth bottle I felt good and all right again," said Mrs. J. W. Tomlin, 1708 North Twenty-second Street, Richmond.

"I would suffer intense pains across the small of my back in the region of my kidneys. No one really knows the terrible pain I bore, and at times the suffering seemed more than I could bear. What Tanlac did for me was nothing short of wonderful, and I cheerfully recommend it, for I felt better than I had felt in years, and stronger and much improved all over on finishing the fourth bottle. A thorough trial is what I recommend."

Kidney troubles cause more deaths annually than any other disease except tuberculosis and pneumonia, and these intricate filtering tubes which clear the blood of impurities are easily deranged. Colds, chills, fevers, exposure, tonsilitis, pneumonia, grip, typhoid and other diseases, drinking of intoxicating liquors, tea, coffee, lack of exercise, over-eating of rich foods, working on jolting cars, driving autos, pregnancy and change of life in women are some of the causes of kidney weakness. This causes sharp pains in the small of back or when stooping, lifting. Lame backs are common, soreness, rheumatic pains, neuralgia, neuritis, nervous troubles, headaches, etc., etc., are more than apt to result.

For this thousands have recommended Tanlac. Get a bottle to-day.

MRS. MITCHELL PRAISES TANLAC

Wants Everybody In Need of Tanlac to Try This "Master Medicine," Tanlac.

Tells of Wonderful Results After Long Years of Suffering.

"I had all the ills and symptoms that come with indigestion. I was troubled all the time with a fullness in the region of my heart. At times this was very painful and I could scarcely get my breath. I had periodical headaches, was nervous and all, but on reading the testimonials of friends who praised Tanlac I began taking it, and the results from one bottle were so decidedly apparent and my digestion especially was so much improved I took two bottles, and found it certainly will do everything claimed for it. I talk Tanlac every day to neighbors and friends, as I consider it a wonderful tonic and system builder and cannot praise this 'Master Medicine' too highly. I want everybody that needs a tonic to take Tanlac," said Mrs. S. A. Mitchell, 1237 Taylor St., Richmond.

If we could line up the thousands of people who have given testimonials similar to that of Mrs. Mitchell in the downtown section of Richmond, the crowd would block traffic for hours in passing. In this paper Richmond testimonials are published for easy verification. Nearly every city in this country has now been reached, and from them all come words of praise for Tanlac. Get a bottle to-day.

Druggists, and thousands of homes indorse this remarkable preparation, created, sold and recommended by the great Dayton Laboratory of the Cooper Medicine Company. It has the indorsement of the eminent German chemist, Herr Joseph Trimbach, and of the many nearby drug stores listed below. Be sure to buy only of authorized agents to avoid disappointment and possible substitution. Their names are given below.

TANLAC TABLETS SPEED UP SLUGGISH LIVER AND BOWELS. THEY COME WITH EACH BOTTLE OF TANLAC OR MAY BE PURCHASED SEPARATELY. BE SURE TO GET THEM.

BROTHER INDORSED TANLAC TO HIM

Now Mr. Kidd, of Richmond, Joins Army of Others Praising it as Tonic and Stomach Remedy.

TELLS WHAT IT DID.

"My brother recommended Tanlac to me, and though I was at that time suffering from serious stomach, kidney and liver trouble, I began to notice a marked improvement in my condition before taking all of one bottle. My stomach felt better, my appetite improved and after taking two bottles to date, I consider it a wonderful tonic, and those suffering from stomach disorders will be greatly benefited if they take my advice and give it a trial. I cheerfully testify that it helped me wonderfully," said J. C. Kidd, grocer at Thirtieth and Clay Streets, Richmond.

Folks troubled with poor digestion, food disagreeing with them, headaches frequently, heartburn, acidity of the stomach and a weak, run-down condition, with disturbed rest nights, as Mr. Kidd was, may wisely conclude Tanlac really merits a thorough test as recommended.
