LARGE EASTERN SHOE REPAIR SHOPS "HAVE NOTHING ON THE GOPHER" SAYS LOCAL CRAFTSMAN

"I have visited some of the largest shoe repair shops while East, but found none that had anything on the Gopher," declared John Veater upon his return as delegate to the Boot and Shoe Workers convention at Buffalo, N. Y. "There are a number of large shoe repairing establishments down east, but the Gopher has most of them beat for equipment, cleanliness and system." Mr. Veater is secretary of the local Boot and Shoe Workers union and has been identified with the Gopher Shoe Repair Co. for a number of years. He is manager of their shop at 12 Fourth Ave. West. Before leaving for the convention, Mr. Veater was instrumental in unionizing the three Duluth shops owned by the Gopher Shoe Repair Co.

ORGANIZE LAUNDRY WORKERS. LITTLE ROCK, Ark., July 9.—Laundry workers in this city are conducting a successful organizing campaign. One of the largest laundries in the state has been completely unionized, and the list is rapidly increasing. It is always advisable to swat the fly. Another good way is to keep the garbage pail covered.—Detroit Free Press. MAILERS RAISE WAGES. CINCINNATI, July 9.—Members of the Mailers' union are alert to improved industrial conditions. Several months ago they agreed to a seven months' renewal of their old contract with managers on the theory that business would improve. The mailers presented a demand for betterment the first of June. This was agreed to and a three years' contract with increases of $1.50 a week was signed by both parties. $10.00 Suit Sale, values up to $25. Big Suit Sale at The Big Duluth.

PENROD By BOOTH TARKINGTON Copyright, 1914, by Doubleday, Page & Company

(Continued from Last Week.) sisters, Magsworth Bitts nor her daughter acknowledged the salutation of the boy in the yard. They disapproved of him as a person of little consequence, and that little bad. Snubbed, Penrod thoughtfully restored his cap to his head. A boy can be cut as effectually as a man, and this one was chilled to a low temperature. He wondered if they despised him because they had seen a last fragment of doughnut in his hand; then he thought that perhaps it was Duke who had disgraced him. Duke was certainly no fashionable looking dog.

The resilient spirits of youth, however, presently revived, and, discovering a spider upon one knee and a beetle simultaneously upon the other, Penrod forgot Mrs. Roderick Magsworth Bitts in the course of some experiments infringing upon the domain of Dr. Carrel. Penrod's efforts, with the aid of a pin, to effect a transference of living organisms were unsuccessful, but he convinced himself forever that a spider cannot walk with a beetle's legs. Della then enhanced zoological interest by depositing upon the back porch a large rat trap from the cellar, the prison of four live rats awaiting execution.

Penrod at once took possession, retiring to the empty stable, where he installed the rats in a small wooden box with a sheet of broken window glass, held down by a brickbat, over the top. Thus the symptoms of their agitation when the box was shaken or hammered upon could be studied at leisure. Although this Saturday was startlingly splendid. After a time the student's attention was withdrawn from his specimens by a peculiar smell, which, being followed up by a system of selective sniffing, proved to be an emanation leaking into the stable from the alley. He opened the back door.

Across the alley was a cottage which a thrifty neighbor had built on the rear line of his lot and rented to negroes, and the fact that a negro family was now in process of "moving in" was manifested by the presence of a thin mule and a rumsack wagon, the latter laden with the semblance of a stove and a few other unpretentious household articles. A very small darky boy stood near the mule. In his hand was a rusty chain, and at the end of the chain the delighted Penrod perceived the source of the special smell he was tracing—a large raccoon. Duke, who had shown not the slightest interest in the rats, set up a frantic barking and simulated a ravaging assault upon the strange animal. It was only a bit of acting, however, for Duke was an old dog, had suffered much and desired no unnecessary sorrow, wherefore he confined his demonstrations to alarms and excursions and presently sat down at a distance and expressed himself by intermittent threatenings in a quevering falsetto.

"What's that coon's name?" asked Penrod, intending no discourtesy. "Aim gomme mame," said the small darky. "What?" "Aim gomme mame." "What?" The small darky looked annoyed. "Aim gomme mame, I heil you," he said impatiently. Penrod conceived that insult was intended. "What's the matter of you?" he demanded, advancing. "You get fresh with me and I'll—" "Hyah, white boy!" A colored youth of Penrod's own age appeared in the doorway of the cottage. "You let 'at brythun mine alone. He-ah! do nothin' to you."

"Well, why can't he answer?" "He can't. He can't talk no better'n what he was talkin'. He tongue tie." "Oh!" said Penrod, mollified; then, obeying an impulse so universally aroused in the human breast under like circumstances that it has become a quip, he turned to the afflicted one. "Talk some more," he begged eagerly. "I hoe you ackoom aim gomme mame," was the prompt response, in which a slight ostentation was manifest. Unmistakable tokens of vanity had appeared upon the small, swart countenance.

"What's he mean?" asked Penrod, enchanted. "He say he tote you 'at coon ain' got no name." "What's your name?" "I'm name Herman." "What's his name?" Penrod pointed to the tongue-tied boy. "Verman. Was three us boys in ow family. O'est one name Sherman. 'N 'en come me; I'm Herman. 'N 'en come him; he Verman. Sherman dead. Verman, he de little's one." "You got'n to live here?" "Umhugh. Done move in I'm way outen on a farm."

He pointed to the north with his right hand, and Penrod's eyes opened wide as they followed the astray. (To Be Continued.)

TO AUTOMOBILE DRIVERS

During the last few weeks there have been many collisions and near collisions between street-cars and automobiles. Fortunately these have not been attended with any serious results. Most of these collisions have been between street cars and automobiles crossing the track on steep avenues. Our motormen are warned to keep a sharp lookout for automobiles at such intersections, but at many corners their view is obstructed until they reach the corner.

Again, there are cases where an auto may be hidden from the motorman by a low obstruction, like a fence, billboard or bushes, but where the larger and higher street car is visible to the automobile driver. Remember the motorman may not always be able to see your automobile when you can see the upper part of his car. We would respectfully ask automobile drivers to use great care in driving across streets where there are car lines. Slowing up when approaching the street would prevent many collisions. Remember that a STREET CAR CAN'T DODGE. When a motorman is suddenly confronted with the possibility of a collision, he can only go ahead or stop. He cannot change direction. Our streets are becoming so congested that the number of collisions is showing a decided increase, and unless greater care is exercised fatal accidents are very likely to occur. We will try to do our share, Will you do yours?
