COMMISSIONERS' NOTICE.

OFFICE OF THE COMMISSIONERS, D. C., Washington, D. C., July 9, 1909.—Ordered: That the Building Regulations of the District of Columbia be, and the same are hereby amended by the addition thereto of the following regulation, to be known as Sec. 83-A, to follow Sec. 83 of the present Building Regulations:

Sec. 83-A. SPECIFICATION GOVERNING THE USE OF REINFORCED CONCRETE.

DEFINITION. Reinforced concrete is a concrete in which steel is imbedded in such a manner that the two act in unison in resisting stresses due to external loading.

SUPERVISION. Reinforced concrete or combination systems of reinforced concrete with other structural material, or any system of flat arch construction, must be installed under the constant supervision of a competent superintendent, whose name shall be submitted in writing to the Inspector of Buildings prior to installing the work.

PLANS. Before a permit to erect any reinforced concrete structure or any structure containing reinforced concrete is issued, complete specifications and plans shall be filed with the Inspector of Buildings showing the details of the proposed construction, including the kind of reinforcing bars and stirrups, their sizes, position and number, their laps, bends and cross sections. All continuity rods shall be clearly shown, with their lengths and dimensions. All beams which have been figured in the designs as T beams shall be so indicated upon the plans.

CEMENT. All cement shall conform to the District of Columbia specifications for Portland cement, in use at the time the permit is issued. If the cement is of a brand in general use in the District of Columbia and known to the Inspector of Buildings, the following tests will be required: for fineness, per cent. to pass 50 mesh sieve; per cent. to pass 100 mesh sieve; for time of initial set and for tensile strength, neat, at the end of 24 hours. If the cement under this test does not appear to be normal for the brand, or if it is of a brand not well known to the Inspector of Buildings, further tests will be required. The tests of all cement must be made not more than six months prior to its use (See section 200, building regulations, for the District of Columbia specifications for cement.

AGGREGATE AND PROPORTIONS. The aggregate shall consist of sand and broken stone, gravel or cinders, as hereinafter described. Volume for volume, the cement shall constitute not less than one-sixth of the aggregate, and the sand shall ordinarily be equal to 50% of the stone or gravel. The proportion of the same to the stone or gravel may, with the consent of the Inspector of Buildings, be varied slightly to secure a concrete of maximum density.

CONCRETE SAND. All sand shall be of an approved quality, clean, sharp, coarse, and siliceous, and shall consist of both large and small grains and not contain over 5% of silt.

BROKEN STONE. The stone must be of an approved quality 1 inch and under, and no stone shall be used that exceeds 1 inch in its greatest dimension. Stone must be machine broken blue granite, trap, or its equal, free from loam, dirt or other foreign substances, and free from an unreasonable amount of stone dust. Stone shall be well wetted immediately before being used.

GRAVEL. All gravel shall be 1 inch and under, clean and free from all foreign substances. Any gravel covered with mud, clay, etc., shall be immediately rejected. Gravel shall be well wetted immediately before being used.

CINDER CONCRETE. All cinders shall be of an approved quality of clean, well burned cinders, free from ash or dust and from particles of unburned coal. No cinder shall be over one inch in any dimension.

REINFORCING STEEL. Reinforcing steel shall have an ultimate strength of not less than 60,000 pounds per square inch, and an elastic limit of at least 50% of its ultimate strength. Steel reinforcement made from re-rolled rails shall not be used. If deformed bars are proposed to be used only the net section (the section exclusive of all projections) of the areas of such bars shall be considered as effective.

Before incorporating the reinforcing steel in concrete, a report must be filed with the Inspector of Buildings showing that the steel has been tested and is in accordance with these regulations for strength and elastic limit. This report must show the dates of tests and must bear the name of the person, firm or corporation by whom the tests were made. The strength of all reinforced concrete work shall be based upon this report which shall be checked by the Inspector of Buildings for accuracy.

Bars showing fractures when bent to the required shapes shall not be used. Round, square, flat or mechanical bond bars (or other mechanical bond steel) or structural steel shapes or wires or combinations of these several classes of steel, may be used for reinforcement, provided that the necessary adhesion is available for developing the strength of the steel reinforcement. Where stirrups are necessary, they may be loose or rigidly attached, provided, that the stirrups be designed so as to transfer the shear increments to the horizontal reinforcement in a manner satisfactory to the Inspector of Buildings. Inclined loose stirrups shall not be used. The connection of inclined reinforcing stirrups to the horizontal reinforcement shall be so designed that at least 75% of the ultimate strength of the stirrups may be transmitted through the metallic connection of the stirrups to the horizontal bars.

All reinforcing steel shall be made free of paint, dirt, oil, grease, scale and rust flakes before being encased in concrete.

All steel shall be straight where so called for on the plans or bent accurately to the shapes called for on the plans.

WEATHER AND PROTECTION OF WORK. No work shall be done in freezing or unsuitable weather, and care shall be exercised in protecting the work against frost and excessive heat. In summer, where the concrete is exposed to the sun, it shall be kept wet, and in the winter the work must be protected from the frost.

FORMS. All forms (and supports for forms) must be strong and stiff, true, out of wind, practically unyielding and sufficiently tight to hold the liquid mortar without leakage, and their interior dimensions must conform to the dimensions of the concrete sections shown upon the approved plans. The lagging of all forms, when lumber lagging is used, shall be of a good quality of lumber dressed to matched sizes. This lumber must be dressed on two edges.

All forms (and supports for forms) must receive the approval of the Inspector of Buildings before the concrete is placed within them. The concrete shall be placed as soon as possible after the forms are erected and approved. Forms that, at any time, become twisted or warped shall be removed or correctly adjusted before concrete is placed within them.

All forms (and supports for forms) must be designed to safely carry the weight of the forms, the liquid concrete (assumed to weight 150 pounds per cubic foot) and a live load, in addition thereto, over the floor slab area of 25 pounds per square foot, and they must be designed to safely withstand a wind pressure of 20 pounds per square foot upon all surfaces exposed to the wind. The unit stresses in the forms and supports shall not exceed the allowable stresses, elsewhere established in these regulations, for various building materials.

If forms are to be hung from steel beams, the hangers and the method of hanging the forms shall be subject to the approval of the Inspector of Buildings, and no hangers that are difficult to remove shall be used.

The forms for beams and girders and lintels shall be so designed that at least one side of each beam and girder may be removed without disturbing the bottom portion of the forms and its supports. All posts supporting forms for slabs, beams and girders must rest upon wedges which may be loosed and removed without producing undue strains in the floor system.

Posts which are to be supported by the ground must have their loads dist
