CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET.

Chicago, March 17.—The trend of fighting on the main battle front in Europe is thus on the turn so far as it affects grain futures. Wheat is known that many mills have been closed down in the Southwest because of a lack of a supply of wheat with which to keep the machinery in motion. It points to the power of wheat as holding the whip hand. There is probably another excuse for some of the mills remaining idle at this particular season, and that is the lack of demand for flour.

The cash handlers of wheat at Chicago complain of small offerings from all the States tributary to this market. There is now some wheat that already has been contracted for and which is now coming out of Nebraska and Iowa and some from Illinois. There also is some wheat coming from the Northwest, but the bulk of the offerings from the direct demand here is cut off the question. Millers here, however, are buying little wheat.

Sentiment on wheat was bearish today, and there were price losses of 3c to 2½c for the day. There was more May wheat for sale than for some time past, and this was snapped up eagerly by shorts. The market started out in a strong manner, but high prices were reached early.

A sustaining power in wheat, or a power possibly that kept the bears from attacking the market to a more pronounced way, was the steadiness in seed wheat at Liverpool, following the decline at Chicago. Parts wheat was 3c higher. Liverpool reported the political situation there as offsetting the effect of the decline at Chicago yesterday. The cable was from Bromhall, and he possibly referred to the demands of Italy and Austria. The same authority reported more progress of the allies in the Dardanelles, but said that Russian grain merchants have little anticipation of an early opening of the straits, and that supplies at ports are light and prices advancing.

There was no cash wheat sold at Chicago today, and the 250,000 bushels reported at the seaboard has worked late yesterday and was all durum.

Coarse grains were weak and lower, corn losing 1c and oats were off ½ to ¾c. Both grains showed some recovery from the lowest points reached on the losing by shorts and the tightening up of the offerings. The cash corn situation at the moment is against holders, as sales today were only 47,000 bushels at Chicago and none at the seaboard. Chicago sales of oats were 466,000 bushels, and the seaboard reported 400,000 bushels.

The big situation continues against the prices of the manufactured products, as the receipts at the leading Western markets today were 112,000, compared with 82,000 for the corresponding day a year ago. The cash situation was unsatisfactory to packers, and the stocks of provisions here are large.

"SWEET LAVENDER" REPEATED.

George Washington University Players Score Another Hit.

The George Washington University Players scored another hit last night at National Rifles Armory when "Sweet Lavender," Pinero's popular comedy, was repeated before a large audience for the benefit of athletics at the institution.

Dorothy Wheeler again appeared to advantage in the role of Lavender Rolt, and Detlow M. Marthinson, leading man, interpreted his part admirably. Alden M. Wheeler, director of the show, and Prof. Leslie Cleveland McNemar, faculty director of athletics and in charge of general arrangements for the performances, last night were congratulated on the success of the play.

A dust-laying compound, the basis of which is molasses, has been successfully made use of in the South African mines.

Sketches of Little Old New York by O. McIntyre.

Special Correspondence of The Washington Herald.

New York, March 17.—Gansemayer's is going to move—famous old Gansemayer's, one of the oldest restaurants in the city and the place where the fathers of the junior partners in many big downtown wholesale houses were wont to take the women out-of-town buyers for luncheon in the good old days — Gansemayer's on Thirteenth street, not a long walk from Broadway.

The name Gansemayer's is a little misleading. It is only a trade name, formed by putting the word ganse, which means geese, before the name of Mayer, the original proprietor, thus associating the owner's name with the most popular item on the bill of fare.

Just where Gansemayer's lace curtains will next be seen when the old place is closed has not been decided. It will be somewhere in the newer wholesale dry goods district. Otto Kahn, Jules Bache and other Wall street bankers know Gansemayer's very well.

Broadway has heard from "Tex" Rickard, the former prize fight impresario, and he is now the world's champion cattle king. He has passed up Broadway for cows and he has got 'em in droves.

Most people remember "Tex" as the man who put Goldfield on the map by giving Gans and Nelson $30,000 to fight there and also for giving Jim Jeffries and Jack Johnson $101,000 to come out and fight at Reno.

Rickard's real name is George Lewis and he was born in Kansas City. When he was a cow puncher in Texas he got the name of "Tex" and he just selected Rickard as being niftier than Lewis. He wears soft collars, a crush hat and has never gotten over looking like a cow puncher, although he was one of the best spenders on Broadway.

At this moment he is the owner of the biggest cattle ranch in the world. Down in the Chaco country, extending into Paraguay and the Argentine republic, he has a cattle ranch almost as big as the State of New Jersey.

When Owen Wister wrote that famous chapter in "The Virginian" babies had been mixed more in fiction than in fact. But since that time the palm has been transferred to fact in 125th street.

There it has been the custom of department stores to provide checking facilities which permit mothers to shop without interrupting the airing of their infants. A uniformed boy stands by the curb in front of the store and doles out duplicate brass checks to customers who leave their baby carriages in his care.

The system, like all devised by human brains, not infrequently advertises its imperfections. The other day a lynching was narrowly averted when James Hartnian, one of the check boys, confused his numbers and tried to wish twins on the parent of a single infant.

Why the Socialist party is growing—New York society is giving a dance this week at the Biltmore for stray dogs. Five hundred families were evicted in New York last week for nonpayment of rent.

WASHINGTON PRODUCE.

Quotations given below are for large lots of good marketable goods only. Jobbers' prices are higher. Lower grades sold for less. Fancy goods commanded higher prices.

The receipts of valves were light, and under an active market the quotations ruled firm. Hens continued firm, while other poultry holding steadily. Eggs appearing heavily, continued to command unchanged figures. Pork firm.

Fruits and vegetables were steady. As a whole, the activity was but moderate, and the market was not inclined to move one way or the other. Lettuce and celery more plentiful and market easy. The quotations were:
