GROWING TRADE DRIVES FIRM TO LARGER OFFICES

Fradkin, Mehlman & Stuart Relocate in Continental Trust Bldg.

LOCAL ISSUES DULL

American Institute of Banking Debate May Be Held Here February 11.

Fradkin, Mehlman and Stuart, specializers in high-class investment securities, formerly located in the McGill Building, have taken over spacious office quarters in the Continental Trust Building, and began operations at that place yesterday morning.

This brokerage firm was founded some years ago by T. J. Mehlman, present member, and J. D. Kynaston, jr., under the firm name of Mehlman and Company. A short time later Mr. Kynaston found it necessary to withdraw from the company in order to give his entire attention to his oil interests in Texas. J. J. Fradkin was then admitted to the firm, which changed its name to Fradkin and Mehlman.

Due to the rapid growth of the business from that time on, it became necessary to secure larger office space, at which time the present location was decided upon.

Col. E. A. Stuart, prominent in banking circles in Dallas, Tex., recently became affiliated with the above firm, necessitating a further change in name.

Fradkin, Mehlman and Stuart are one of the few Washington houses which deal exclusively in unlisted securities, and they have established adequate connections which will enable them to give latest quotations.

Carl Robertson Kurtz, head of the local house of Stroud, Kurtz and Company, Colorado Building, has returned from a two weeks' trip through Florida.

Washington Stock Exchange transactions yesterday reached an almost pitiful stage of listlessness, when only two issues were traded in.

A 6 per cent mortgage bond of the Potomac Electric Power Company was disposed of in the opening sale at 91. This single sale represented entire dealings in bonds.

Washington Gas, the only stock to command purchasable attention was fairly active at 38. Four sales, aggregating 64 shares, were recorded in this issue.

After a layoff of two weeks, the elementary class, American Institute of Banking, will resume operations tonight. H. T. Boswell, paying teller of the American National Bank, will address the assembly on "Duties of the Paying Teller."

The committee on public speaking and debate of the American Institute of Banking has arranged for a debate between New York and Pittsburg chapters, and, if present plans materialize, Washington will be chosen as the neutral city where the argument will be staged.

Information to this effect is contained in a letter received by President of the local chapter, from W. L. J. Conway, president of the New York organization. The debate is to take place February 11, 1921, and the subject will be "Resolved, That Congress Replace the Excess Profits Tax by a Tax on Sales."
