Ohio Democrats Puzzled Over Calling Their Convention.

The Date Must Be Changed Owing to the Extra Session of Congress and Leaders Do Not Know When to Set the Time.

Special Dispatch to The Evening Star.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 11.—The Ohio democrats are in a quandary as to what to do about changing the date of their state convention. It was fixed for August 9 and 10. Now that Congress has been called in special session, just prior to that time, it is generally conceded that the date of the convention must be changed, but the committee in charge is not agreed as to whether it should be advanced or postponed. The Congressmen are influential in the party councils and their presence is desired. Of course they cannot be in the convention if the date is not changed. Some of the members of the committee advise that the convention be postponed two weeks; that if the convention is held before the special session opens and takes its stand on the coinage question it will be in danger of forestalling the administration. Others say that there is no certainty that the special session will finish its work in two weeks, or even four weeks, and that if the party waits until it adjourns it may not get its ticket in the field before election day.

The chairman, C. D. Crites, has not called the central committee together yet to settle this question, but is expected to do so within a week.

REPUBLICANS DOING NOTHING.

In the mean time the republicans are doing absolutely nothing in the way of campaign work. Maj. C. W. F. Dick of Akron, the chairman of the state executive committee, was in the city yesterday consulting with Gov. McKinley and other candidates, and left saying that nothing definite had been decided upon in regard to opening committee work here.

Gov. McKinley was asked when he thinks he was anxious to get into the work of the campaign, and said: "No, indeed. I rather like the prospect that there will be no active campaign work to do before cool weather comes again."

POPULIST CONVENTION A FAILURE.

The convention of the people's party of the state here on July 4 was a greater failure than was expected. The actual number of delegates present was only 243. The ratio of representation on last fall's vote should have brought here over 700 delegates. Judged by this representation the convention does not indicate more than 5,000 populists in the state. The candidate for governor, E. J. Bracken, has long been a labor agitator, and has been identified for the last three years with the local nationalist organization. He has no particular strength, but will probably make a better candidate than John Seitz did two years ago.

A NEW DEMOCRATIC POSSIBILITY.

Special Dispatch to The Evening Star.

BELLAIRE, OHIO, July 11.—A new candidate for the democratic nomination for governor of Ohio has come into the field, and the rate at which his boom is growing promises to place his name before the convention with a respectable following if it is not successful in securing for him the nomination. This new Richmond is none other than Congressman A. J. Pearson of this district, who last fall demonstrated his running abilities by defeating Col. C. L. Poorman, the most popular republican in the district, by 200, while the district, as at that time arranged by the republican legislature, had a republican majority of over 2,500.

Judge Pearson is a man of most pleasing personality and a peculiarly strong magnetism. During his canvass last fall he worked early and late from the day he was nominated, and at every meeting he held he gained votes. It was due to his personal efforts that he rounded up so many opposition votes, and to his success in that campaign is due the desire of the democrats of this district to put him forward. His friends have made a canvass of the eastern Ohio counties and are confident he can have solid delegations from all these counties. Judge Pearson is not seeking the honor, and it is understood that nothing but a unanimous call from his party would induce him to give up the sure thing he has in Congress for the very problematical possibilities of defeating Gov. McKinley.

Judge Pearson is not extensively known in Washington, his ability not having had an opportunity to display itself, though he has been much inquired about on account of the work he did in the last campaign. In Ohio nearly every one has heard of him as a judge and lawyer, and the suggestion of his name for gubernatorial honors is not treated as a surprise or a joke.
