RAS MAKONNEN.

The Field Marshal of Abyssinia Visits Lazarist Convent.

Paris Correspondence London News.

The Lazarists, whom Ras Makonnen visited at their central convent in the Rue de Sevres, have twelve establishments in Harrar, and one at Alitlena. They date from the early years of the seventeenth century, when St. Vincent de Paul founded the order for missionary work, and lived among the young men that he educated to evangelize the barbarous and savage parts of the world, chiefly in Africa. The first central house, in the Faubourg St. Denis, is now a house of detention for female prisoners, but is soon to be pulled down. The actual central house in the Rue de Sevres has not any characteristic feature viewed from the street, but the facade hides a wide cloister, at the end of which a chapel stands. Just now this house contains over two hundred novices, who entered at ages ranging from seventeen to nineteen, and leave at the end of six years' residence to go on missions.

They were all drawn out in the cloister when, two minutes after the time appointed for his visit, the carriage of the Ras entered it. The superior, Father Fiat, received him, and had on his staff Monsignor Crouzet, former vicar apostolical to Abyssinia, and Monsignor Coulbaux, superior of the mission to Abyssinia (whom I interviewed the day the Ras arrived in Paris), and three Lazarist fathers bowed with age, who had spent the best years of their lives in Ethiopian missions. With them were Monsignor Lesne, apostolical delegate to Persia; Monsignor Charmetant, whose voice rang through Europe six years ago in trying to awaken its conscience against the sultan, whose hands then were red with Armenian blood. The Ras was able to converse with the higher members of the community and with several novices in his own language. He showed deep reverence for the statue of Vincent de Paul and relics of him preserved in the chapel; inquired into the nature of the studies, and impressed on professors and superiors the necessity of giving the novices a training that would enable them to act not only as evangelists, but as pioneers of civilization. Abyssinia wants vine dressers, agriculturists and gardeners.

Jews and Christians.

From the Christian Register.

Some Jews and some Christians are discussing with interest the question whether Judaism and Christianity can be united. So long as no practical action is taken the discussion will be useful, but union must come by natural means. When Jews and Christians, living together, working together, thinking together and voting together recognize a common ideal of duty and character they will some time awake to the consciousness of unity and rejoice in it. Before that time any effort to push them together will fail. Two young people who may be made for each other will refuse to marry if the match is insisted upon before nature has taken a hand in the courtship. If severe pains and penalties could be threatened against Jews and Christians to prevent their coming together it would soon be difficult to keep them apart.
