A Crank who Wants Santa's Daughter.

NEW YORK, March 28.—John J. Lingeman, the crank who on December last demanded the brains of Chauncellus Vanderbilt and was committed for examination as to his sanity, has been annoying the family of Jay Gould by ringing the bell at the residence and demanding to see Helen, the eldest daughter of the financier, whose lover he declares himself to be. He was arrested and committed.

Bill in Congress.

ATLANTA, March 28.—David B. Hill started in the race for control of the Georgia State Democratic convention by endorsing the platform of Tom. On first county ballot. In David B. Hill they recognize a statesman of broad mind, who has not prejudiced their cause and from whom they could get ardent sympathy, if not relief.

The Pacific Mail Subsidy.

CHICAGO, March 28.—Some time ago the Northern Pacific asked to be relieved of its proportion of the Pacific mail subsidy, on the ground that there was no competition at the port reached by its line. The Santa Fe claimed a similar exemption at Southern California ports. The commissioners of the Western Traffic association decided to relieve the Northern Pacific and Santa Fe of the 30.16 per cent of their proportion each.

Anti-Prohibition Speeches and Resolutions.

DES MOINES, Ia., March 29.—This evening the Republican members of the legislature indorsed by speeches and resolutions from the anti-prohibition Republicans of different cities, and, after a caucus, appointed a committee to reply. This reply will be in line with the action already taken in the house, saying that they cannot go back on the pledge given by the party last year, to allow prohibition to remain the law of the State.

A Scandal Over the Property of Louis Heller.

CITY OF MEXICO, March 28.—A scandal has arisen over the property of Louis Heller, who died suddenly in Tucson, Arizona, recently, while on route to California. Heller had large interests in Mexico and had been heavily interested in the International company of Lower California (Ltd), and in many related concessions. He married a Mexican lady. His estate is large, and by his will he left certain property to his children in Germany. Immediately unknown to another wife has appeared, an American, who claims a portion of the property. Heller was married in the United States and never divorced from her there. However, the Mexican wife is, by Mexican law, the legal spouse in this country. The whole here will contest the will, and sensational developments are expected.

Vestlichen's Resignation Refused.

BERLIN, March 28.—The Freisinnige Zeitung says that the Emperor has refused to accept the resignation of Minister Von Vestlichen.

Murdered His Father-in-Law.

HILLSBORO, Tex., March 28.—Shortly after 12 o'clock last night, W. L. Fisher, one of the best known citizens of Hill County, was shot and killed by Thomas W. Nash, his son-in-law. An air of mystery pervaded the affair and developments of an interesting character are expected. Nash is already indicted in the district court for assaulting and attempting to murder a Mexican some two months since.

More Forged Paper.

CLEVELAND, O., March 28.—The friends of John Huntington have just discovered $285,000 of forged John Huntington paper afloat in the city among banks, traceable to the Painesville bank failure. It is probable that A. C. Hard, Huntington's assignee, will leave for Europe at once and consult with Mr. Huntington.

A Quarrel over a Girl.

CHICAGO, March 28.—J. C. Fiest, a Pullman car conductor, was shot in the eye last night by Michael Hogarty, a bookmaker, in a quarrel over Rose Nelson, to whom Hogarty was to be married this evening. The shooting took place at a social gathering, and, in order to reach Fiest, Hogarty had to climb over the shoulder of one of the girl friends of his affianced. Frost will probably die.

Another Supposed Boodler Indicted.

CHICAGO, March 28.—Just before adjournment for the day, the grand jury in the boodler cases voted to indict Hately, who, besides being a member of the board of education, is an ex-member of the State Senate. The indictment voted will not be returned into court until tomorrow. Testimony was given today by Otto Jones, who swore to paying Hately, through third parties, over $2000 for contracts.

Electrocuted.

SING SING, N. Y., March 28.—Jeremiah Cotto, the Italian Italian, who murdered Louis Frasheim in Brooklyn last July, was electrocuted this morning at 10:40. The preliminaries of the execution did not differ any from those in the past. Five shocks were given the condemned man. His right leg, where the electrode was applied, was severely burned, and his face was horribly discolored, even more so than any previous electrocuted criminal.

A Centenary of Mourning.

This year's whole nation, the people of the country that was once Poland, wears mourning. The season will appear cold in black garments, the sun ... all year long ... bands, till the year has gone ... It was ... ago, in 1791, ... Poland ... Russia ... Prussia ... Russia ... Poland ... Russia had ... to ... in order to quiet them she consented to divide.

As for back as 1764 Russia was at work to get Poland. An army sent by the great Catherine watched over the polls at the election which placed Stanislaus upon the throne of Poland in that year.

Stanislaus was the lad of Catherine and the favorite of her soldiers kept him on the throne. An army of 18,000 Russians remained in the country. Polish patriots, at the head of Count Count Pulaski, rose in arms to drive the Russians from their land. Catherine called this revolution and rebellion and opposed it on the ground that the patriots were "brigands." The strength better and peculiar diplomacy that have characterized Russia ever since were exercised to bring to bear with all their force against unhappy Poland. In 1792 Russia took the lead and forbid all the force of Indeed Poland against Russia. But it was in vain, and Poland's star went down.

Three generations have passed since then, yet today the love of liberty is as strong among Russian, American and German Poles, and the sorrow for their lost autonomy is as long as ever. It ought to be a lesson and a warning to great states that take possession of little states and blot them out of existence by simple right of being the stronger. Russia will have a black reckoning to pay some day.

To Get Rich.

Mr. Erastus Wiman has been telling young men how to get rich again. First of all you must never go to debt, never, unless you can thereby certainly secure immediate and probable secure. Then use your credit. But otherwise the person who goes in debt pawns his future.

Having determined to keep out of debt, then begin to save regularly and systematically. For this purpose nothing is better than to lay up your savings in a bank and building association, called in Massachusetts a cooperative bank which is a good name. The combined capital of building associations in this country exceeds that of the national banks. The next step is to get hold of some land, a plot near a growing town or city. If you live in the country and cannot get a town lot get a farm or portion of a farm. Agricultural lands are bound to become valuable soon, because there are three new living when will see in this country a population of 120,000,000, all of whom must be fed.

If, however, it is not convenient to get land in any shape, then invest your savings in industrial stocks of some kind, as, for instance, the great oil, sugar and lead industries. Combination is the order of the day in the business world, and these will make fortunes who seize on the spirit of the time. Then, says Mr. Wiman, watch the first symptoms of economic changes and go in on the big wave. This is all very fine and wise. At the same time many of the large fortunes have been made by disregarding every one of the rules laid down by Mr. Wiman. On the other hand, thousands who have observed his most important rules all their lives are as poor as a church mouse and likely to remain so. One can't always tell.

It is a wonderful process, that by which barrels and casks are now made directly from the wood without the staves being first made. A tree is cut into lengths suitable for the height of the barrel. The short log thus formed is boiled three hours in water through which a current of electricity is constantly passing. The softened wood is then cut into layers of sheets the right size for the barrel. The sheets are glued for the heads and are pressed in a form which gives the proper taper. Last of all the single joint is fastened together and the barrel is complete.

From June, 1891, to January, 1892, 345,855 hogs were examined under the new meat inspection law. Nearly 2 per cent of the swine were affected with trichina, which shows the need of the new hog law. Of cattle, 2,049,705 passed the rigid examination now demanded by the United States government, and of these less than one-tenth of 1 per cent, were found to be unhealthy. What country could make a better showing than this in the matter of healthy beef? No wonder our meats are getting a good name abroad at last.

What builders want now is a strong white cement, to be used in the making of white artificial stone. Portland cement gives a gray color to the stone always. Where is the man who can discover a white cement?

An executive Texas twins are connected from the waist up, one is nervous and lazy but one pair of legs. But they have distinct stomachs, hearts and pairs of lungs.

The best matches were pieces of wood about six inches long tipped with sulphur. They caught fire easily with a piece of flint.

It is estimated that in the last twelve years Paris has invested $150,000 in statuary and $5,000 on ornamental fountains.

WIVES SOLD CHEAP.

LOVELY BRIDES OF NEW GUINEA BY ... FOR AN AX AND ...

Acts of an American Missionary Show the Payment Done a Brisk Native Never Earned a Spoon—A Pressing Invitation to Marry.

Such opportunities for matrimony as were offered me in New Guinea ... for ... I have never enjoyed in ... My journey through the island of the Papuans was made for the purpose of selling specimens of all sorts, such as a collection could be gotten, into the people themselves are the most interesting to men I have ever met. The men and children go about entirely naked, and the women are almost entirely naked, yet modest. I employed a young black native around Rabaul to help me in my work. His hair was a mass of kinky fuzz and stood up on his head in a mass as big as a half bushel basket. I found yet that he was in love, but he admitted with a sigh that he was too poor to marry the girl of his choice.

"You are young and strong," said I. "Why do you not go to work and earn money to support yourself and your sweetheart?"

"You do not understand," he replied. "I have a good garden that needs nothing but food to be planted, hoeing, I can do in half an hour a day. Food grows so easily that my chief work is to keep the pigs from rooting in the garden, so that I can get plenty of bananas and pigs. But they will not buy the girl. Her mother wants an ax for her, and that I cannot give to my sweetheart or food to the friend with my spear."

The poor fellow paused, made several despairing remarks on the perversity of mothers-in-law, and finally said that if I would let him have the young woman so dearly he would go away and never come back again.

SLAPPING A NATIVE TO MARRY.

"But, my boy, you need not despair," said I. "If the possession of an ax will secure your happiness I will give you one. I want my paradise bird, for in my country people think more of that than of axes. If you will help me get as many birds with the long plumes as you have, I promise you that the bird shall have an ax on the day we get the last one."

He accepted this proposition delightedly. At length, with his assistance, the two good birds were procured and I gave him the ax. He left me to get Rabaul bought his wife with it. They were married the following evening, the ceremony being concluded with a wild dance and singing by a chorus of girls.

As we were preparing our dinner one afternoon a little girl, a couple years younger than my friend's wife, came to our camp. Looking around she beheld Lohier in the shade of a grouped fellows or twenty girls, many of them of superior beauty, who were laughing and joking with the young men of the village. They all were flowers in their hair and bands of green leaves adorned their arms and ankles. Each maiden had on her best stripped petticoat and some were necklaces of dogs' teeth.

As I caught Lohier, one of my most pickes, stepping forward, said that he had been a long way, had visited the biggest towns of his country and had brought back with him the most beautiful woman of his nation. He hoped we would each select one that would please us, marry her and settle down in New Guinea. The parents of some of the girls had come also and were standing in the background. Our friend exploded to us that the prices were high, as they were the finest girls in the land.

LEGS UP FOR PROPOSALS.

He arranged them all in a circling line, that they might be seen to the best advantage, then in a gruff voice, like a bear, he told their names and gave their different accomplishments.

I noticed a beautiful girl whom I had met while out shooting among the wonder of maidens, and I was anxious to hear what Lohier would say of her. She still wore the string of beads I had given her, and looked so pretty and modest as a violet. When he came to her he said:

"This is Lorena. In she not lovely? Her cheeks are like the petals of a rose, her form is supple as the climbing vine, her skin is smooth as a young banana leaf, her hair is soft as spiders' webs, her eyes are bright as dew in the morning, she can sing like a bird and cut fast as a kangaroo, she is a good housekeeper, an affectionate daughter and comes from a good family, for her father is a great warrior."

The value set upon the beauty was an ax, a knife, a piece of calico and strings of beads. We stood admiring her, and Lohier thought he had made a bargain. We realized that the affair might turn out seriously, perhaps, but we turned the matter off by the hoping that we were too late to make a choice among those lovely creatures and proceeding to distribute presents liberally. To most of the girls we gave any colored handkerchiefs, with a brass ring and a brass button to each. To Lorena we offered a looking glass, and the young women danced for our amusement while we ate our dinner, and sang a song, which they composed as they went along, describing the white ones and commentating on the ugly ones generally. Toward evening they bade us goodby and started for their homes.—Pub Commissioner Sherman F. Denton in Washington Star.

Volcanoes That Belch Forth Silver.

It has been discovered that silver exists in the sides of two volcanoes in the Andes of Ecuador, in South America. The quantity of silver is exceedingly minute, however, being about two fifths of an ounce in a ton of ashes at Cotopaxi, and about three-tenths of an ounce at Tungurugua.—New York Journal.

When Mice Leave.

In Germany all the mice quit a house when the family living in it is threatened with extinction, but whether the deserters are the souls of the departed inhabitants or merely ordinary house spirits never satisfactorily.—London Notes and Queries.

A Bit of National Pride.

Do you know what a "pea jacket" is in marine parlance? It is a boat made in Belmont county, the Maine lobster fisherman, being able at both ends and about forty-seven feet long on top, built of cedar with oak timbers.—Lewiston Journal.

"August Flower"

Mrs. Sarah M. Black of Seneca, Mo., during the past two years has been afflicted with Neuralgia of the Head, Stomach and Bowels, and writes: "My food did not seem to strengthen me at all and my appetite was very variable. My face was yellow, my head dull, and I had such pains in my left side. In the morning when I got up I would have a flow of mucus in the mouth, and a foul, bitter taste. Sometimes my breath became short, and I had such queer, troubling, palpitating sensations around the heart. I ached all over under the shoulder blades, in the left side, and down the back of my limbs. It seemed to be worse in the wet, cold weather of Winter and Spring; and whenever the spells came on, my feet and hands would turn cold, and I could get no sleep at all. I tried everywhere, and got no relief before using August Flower. Then the change came. It has done me a wonderful deal of good during the time I have taken it and is working a complete cure."
