Six Thousand Troops Now Gathered at Wady Halfa.

ITALIANS KILL DERVISHES.

Boston Papers Admit England's Claims —British Commanders Start for the Front.

LONDON, March 22.—The Standard has a dispatch from Cairo which says: There are already 6,000 troops at Wady Halfa, but there is no intention of marching upon Dongola until they have 10,000 troops.

The French ambassador, Baron de Courcel, had a long interview with Lord Salisbury at the latter's residence on Sunday. The conference is supposed to have dealt with the subject of the Nile expedition. A visit by an ambassador on Sunday to the private residence of the home minister of foreign affairs is an unusual occurrence, and this leads to the supposition that the subject of Baron de Courcel's call was an important one.

SINGULAR ACCIDENT.

Two Prisoners Pinned in a Church spire by the Lightning.

KANSAS CITY, March 23.—A special to the Times from Guthrie, O. T., says: News of a most remarkable occurrence was received here today from Beaver county. At the little town of Hooker, in Texas, the Baptist church, a large building rather pretentious, which contained a spire seventy-five feet high. The windows of the church were completed Thursday and on Friday morning James Ford and Harry Somers, painters, were employed to do the paint work. They began working from the ground to the top, using circular scaffolding. Yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock, while Somers and Ford were giving the finishing touches to the top of the spire, a thunderstorm came on, accompanied by fierce flashes of lightning. The two painters were seen making efforts to lower their scaffold when a terrific clap of thunder and a blinding flash of lightning fell to the ground and struck the spire, knocking away the scaffolding, splitting the spire and leaving Somers and Ford pinned to the roof timbers. To add to the awful scene, the clothing of the two men was ignited by the flash and for ten minutes the bodies were seen burning and smoldering in the air. Heavy rain finally extinguished the flames and three bodies later the remains of the painters were brought from the steeple, charred and disfigured and almost unrecognizable. Every hair on Somers's head was gone, but there was no other evidence of the lightning's fall on the body. Ford's body was badly burned and lacerated.

As is usual on Sunday, there was a promenade at lighted lighted lighted, and a concert by the municipal band for the enjoyment of the promenaders. A remarkable scene occurred during the afternoon which seemed to be simultaneous by a spontaneous movement of the crowd.

Cries were raised for the playing of the national march by the band, and the regular program of the concert had to be interrupted to satisfy the demands, so importunate were the cries. The crowd then proceeded in a body to the French consulate, where a deputation entered to express sentiments of friendship and esteem for France. The people are confident in their belief that France is pledged to assist Spain in a possible conflict with the United States.

Five hundred persons outside were meanwhile cheering for Spain, Weyler and Cuba.

Some were representatives of the Cuban Junta, some were detectives in the employ of the Spanish government, and others were representing the United States. Notification had been sent from New Haven that seventy-thousand Winchester rifles and an enormous quantity of ammunition had been stored away in the steamer's hold yesterday. The arms had been shipped by the Winchester Arms Co. in this country. There was a great deal observed about the loading of the munitions of war, because it was felt it would be useless.

The cases containing the arms and cartridges were marked with a "C" over a "J" in a diamond, and consigned to New York. When a barge was unloaded on the pier yesterday morning there was no sign of the long cases.
