FROM THE FAR NORTH.

The Swedish Riksdag Appropriates Money for Battleships.

Eyvind Astrup's Death and a Remonstrance Pole—Royal Weddings—Notes.

Correspondence of the NEWS.

STOCKHOLM, May 2, [Special.]—The Swedish Riksdag has just granted heavy appropriations for the navy. Within the course of the years two big iron-clad of the imported Swedpatters, four large in owners and six larger boats of the first class are to be built. Two million crowns have also been granted for the purchase of several giant guns for the fort Oscar Fredrikstahlberg, which defends Stockholm from the sea side, and four and a half million crowns for the purchase of new rifles for the army. The radical party within the Riksdag strongly opposed the granting of these appropriations, but nevertheless the government proposals were carried through with a considerable majority.

THE ROYAL FAMILY SICK.

Reports have been received here that King Oscar, who has been traveling on the continent, has been compelled to curtail his Spanish journey on account of ill health. The king was just arrived at Hyeres, then many, where Queen Sophia is sojourning, when he was taken ill and confined to his room. His malady will spend about fourteen days at Hyeres in order to regain his usual strong vigor.

The Swedish-Norwegian crown prince has for some time been confined to his room in the royal castle of Stockholm, suffering from a severe attack of influenza. The crown prince is still staying in Italy, being, according to rumor, a victim of consumption.

PREPARATIONS FOR THE POLAR TRIP.

The goodies to be attached to Andree's polar balloon is at present being manufactured here in Stockholm. It will have an internal diameter of two meters and a height of 1.8 meter and will be provided with two high circular houses, which can be changed into beds. The goodies the bottom also different state-rooms for provisions.

Your correspondent was shown the other day a working apparatus invented by Engineer Knut Gerstrom and delivered to Mr. Andree on a gift. When to be used the apparatus is sunk down about 10 meters under the goodies from which, by the pulling of a string, the lighting as well as the extinguishing takes place.

AN AMERICAN DUEL.

The Copenhagen Politiken publishes a sensational rumor to the effect that Eyvind Astrup, the young Norwegian who as recent death caused such excitement, fell victim to a so-called "American duel." The name of the adversary is given as Lieutenant Peary, the Arctic explorer, and the lovely Mrs. Peary, who accompanied the expedition, is said to have been the cause of an agreement between the two gentlemen, that only one of them should go to life.

THE ROYAL DANISH WEDDING.

The wedding of Prince Carl of Denmark to the Princess Maud of Wales will take place some day between July 22 and 25. Prince Carl of Sweden and Norway leaves Stockholm for Copenhagen next Sunday in order to attend as the representative of King Oscar, the wedding of Princess Louise of Denmark to Prince Frederick of Schleswig-Holstein.

THE STOCKHOLM EXPOSITION.

Prince Eugene of Sweden-Norway, who has some time been staying in London in order to interest English artists for exhibition, on the great international exposition to be held in Stockholm in 1897, will pay a visit to Brussels and Paris for the same purpose, before he returns to the Swedish capital.

A REMARKABLE INVENTION.

America is the land of the inventions par preference. But in proportion to the population it goes without saying that Sweden stands ahead of any European country in regard to new inventions.

One of the Swedish inventions which has attracted general attention in Europe during the last few years is the new dairy separator, the existence of which extracts the cream directly from the pure milk as the milk comes from the cow. In Sweden one rather dirty after another has been sold, but yet other contemporaneous countries as Germany, Holland, France and England have also begun to use the Swedes. On account of the cleanness and firmness the cleanest butter commands a much higher price in the market than other kind of butter.

At all exhibitions where the inventor has been on exhibition it has always received the highest awards and attracted great attention both from experts and the public in general. The necessity for where a patent can be taken out in the United States, it must be worked by a wealthy stock company.

The most important articles of import to Sweden are materials for coloring (principally cotton and wool), colonial produce, minerals (coal and salt) and crude industrial products. The exports, again, mostly consists of timber products, the total value of the item amounting to more than 40 per cent of the entire value of exports, further of butter, cattle, metals, etc.

HUGO BERG.

An international art exhibition will be held in Copenhagen during the summer of next year.

Prof. E. M. Wiegs, the celebrated Swedish painter, died at Stockholm.

Colonel J. F. G. Von Heinack has been appointed Dutch minister of war, vice Lieutenant General Van Thomsen, resigned.

Lieutenant Colonel H. J. Rye, who fought cruelly in the Danish-German war of 1848, died at Cambridale at the age of 76 years.

EARNEST LUNDSTROM.

The Power of Hurting Others.

Perhaps of all the powers that we possess, the use of which we are generally the least conscious is the power of hurting other people. We do not have recur to the rank and patent injuries which ruthlessly rob men of life, liberty or possessions, but of the thousand petty slights which we so frequently inflict upon our brethren. Without any deliberate intention of being wicked, and often without realizing at all what we are doing. I mean the power of irritation and of hurting are often both developed in the same person; and while one is fully aware of the former, and gladly exercises it, he has not yet even have arrived the latter is engaged in exactly the contrary direction. Perhaps he is totaleers in the work of benevolence. He rises to relieve poverty and suffering, to promote education, to encourage merit, and he is generous with his money and his efforts in all these endeavors. Yet he is constantly hurting some whom he helps, wounding their independence, interfering with their privacy, roughly injuring their feelings, and inspiring from them not a kindness and a gratitude which they are not feel disposed to give. That is to say, the man of whom we speak is a man of kindness, unfortunately, and his intentions generally distinctly one from enlightening him. The one that is made of authority is often of little account.

The father of a family loves his children, and wants lay down his life for them. He provides for them generously, educates them liberally, and their support in every emergency. Yet in little things, without intending it, he is often cruel. He may be unnecessarily authoritative and peremptory, or he may forbid the innocent amusements of youth, or give many reproofs and cutting sarcasms, or assume a coldness which pains and a dignity which repels them. Yet of all this he may be unconscious, and when he sinks down groaning up to bed and wants him he is grieved and astonished. In a similar way some of the most conscientious teachers estrange their pupils, and even low employers alienate from them those of whom they think in the meantime they feel quite sure that the fault of the enemy lies wholly on the other side. Generally they fail to see how very weight in the homelier or in intimate connection, before whom an offenceant is unknown. Without any intentions such persons are perpetually stinging and wounding their best friends and destroying the peace and harmony of life. Some people are built all out of thorns. They never have a kind word, never a smile, never a sympathetic expression and consequently they are not in general of delicious manner.

It is a duty to think of and for others, in small things as well as great, to carry their feelings, to cultivate sympathy, forbearance, good will, tender love. We should be responsible to Heaven where the influence of these around us is concerned. We should accustom ourselves to the habits of acting so it, and with the feelings which induce it, and ever our motives are sensitive. It is quite possible to worship God and keep perceptions of our people's feelings, and that to oneself we are offending them by our conduct. Let us, then, ever bear in mind that this power of hurting and the love which we have outlines work. It is a word that, left to itself, will grow rank and strong, choking the cultivated and potent fruit the love. Let us be second the potent love, leaving room for the growth of all the sweet and gracious instincts, for sympathy, the tought and the love which are ever kind and purify, which they relate and bless all with some Within their sway of influence.
