Garden City Notes.

Harry Hayes went to the State prison yesterday. He was feeling well and stated that he expected soon to come home. He objected to having his picture taken, but Mr. Anderson, the photographer, took a snap shot at him as he left the court house jail.

Notice of intention to move to a new trial has been filed in the Fourth district in the case of Harriet Hunter et al vs The U. P. Coal company, in which plaintiffs were nonsuited on the 14th.

Seventh Judicial District.

MANTI, Sanpete County, Jan. 22.—The district court of the Seventh judicial district convened Monday, Jan. 18th. After some preliminaries, a venire was ordered for a jury to be called for Monday Jan. 25.

At 2 p.m. the case of Annie Mumie Christensen vs Christen Christensen was called. There was considerable attention paid to the case, a full house being quite occasional when letters were read by plaintiff's counsel which were written by the defendants and which explained the cause of their domestic misery. A decree was granted awarding the custody of the children to plaintiff and allowing a judgment against defendant for fifty dollars attorney fee; the court inquired if any further relief was asked, and Attorney M. E. White, plaintiff's counsel, stated that alimony had been stricken out under stipulation.

The court no doubt will be in session over two weeks, as two criminal cases are to come up next week.

A case of shooting took place at Ephraim last Saturday, between two young men of that place. It appears that they were in a rabbit hunt and got into a scrape, which wound up with a one-sided duel. They stepped off thirty paces, and at the trigger demanded the slider to drop his gun, which he did. At once the younger shot him in his face and caused him into town, determined to take his life. The young rough was arrested in the district court Monday and plead not guilty. He will be tried on Monday, the 25th. W. E. WHITE.

The Irrigation Problem.

The Orange Judd Farmer says: "Our own judgment is settled, while there is a certain undefined field for federal effort, the main part of the irrigation problem must be worked out by each state and by the individuals and corporations whom aid is enlisted. Within wise and prudent lines, governed by strictly business principles, we believe the state should own, build and operate the main canals and reservoirs in each of the mountain states, leaving minor canals only to corporate, co-operative or individual effort and recouping itself by the sale of public land thus reclaimed, so as to furnish water at cost.

"Both in these mountain states and further east on the plains where artesian and surface supplies are depended upon, the main reliance must finally be upon the individual farmer. He can accomplish a comfortable competence through his own unaided efforts in irrigation while waiting for state and federal governments to move. This has been the case in Kansas and Nebraska, and it is found to be the case elsewhere. It will long be true, in large measure, that in irrigation as in other affairs every man is the architect of his own fortunes."

In the Farm Workshop.

In a workshop, illustrated and described in Farm and Fireside, is an arrangement which will be useful to many readers. Along the wall were tin cans. The tops were cut with flaps, which were bent back and nailed to the wall. Into this were held various sizes and kinds of nails, spikes, screws, bolts, etc., each kind by itself, and the can labeled with its contents. Thus any desired nail, etc., was instantly found and easily picked out. It would be a help to have each can nailed up before any kind of nail that is contained, though the labels are readily prepared with white paper, black ink and white of egg paste.

Farm Mortgages.

It appears from Secretary Morton's report that the farms of the country are by no means encumbered with mortgages. In point of fact 72 per cent of the farms in the United States compiled by their owners are absolutely free from mortgages or other incumbrances. An analysis of the 28 per cent of farms whose farms are mortgaged a large proportion are entirely solvent and are getting much more benefit out of the money they have borrowed than the rate they pay for it in the shape of interest.

Mere Sentiment.

The important decision on the constitutionality of the Wright irrigation district law has been rendered and the dispute ended as to the main points of the law, that the use of water for irrigation is a public use.

At the Indiana station experiments to the proper state of moisture to harvest the grain, repeated every year since 1890, indicate that the sooner wheat is cut after it reaches the full dough state the better.

It has been announced that the various state societies of Nebraska, acting in concert with the State university, have perfected arrangements by which speakers will be supplied to 60 or 70 farmers' institutes throughout the state.

A correspondent of The Orange Judd Farmer tells that the leading varieties of celery grown near Salem, Salamazoo, Mich., are White Plume and Perfection. Both are easy to blanch, two take the lead for profitable crops.

No other oil and no other medicine has ever been discovered which can take the place of Cod-liver Oil in all conditions of wasting. New remedies come, live their little day and die, but Cod-liver Oil remains the rock on which all hope for recovery must rest. When it is scientifically prepared, as in Scott's Emulsion, it checks the progress of the disease, the congestion and inflammation subside and the process of healing begins. There is the whole truth. Book about it free.
