MRS. NELDEN IN UNENVIABLE LIGHT

Paper from Mrs. Coulter on Vexed Question Now Agitating Local Women's Clubs.

FATAL COLLISION ON O. S. L.

Engineer John C. Van Why Killed—Divorce and Other Court Cases—School Board Meeting.

The recent airing, in the columns of the press, of an "individual" interjangle is deplorable only to the extent that it menaces the larger good women may hope to accomplish through organization and the reputation they covet for tact, the propries, good will, graciousness and poise.

In fact women collectively, via organization, cannot hope to inject any perceptible measure of goodness into the turgid stream of life unless they freely surrender all personal bias and pettiness to the paramount purpose of their organizations. To be widely helpful, organizations, and individuals as well, must have an abiding, heaven-born faith in humanity, a rational tolerance of human fallibility, and a charity which shines out like the sun, gilding even the meanest objects.

Whenever we indulge in hateful tendencies we are gravitating, by so much, toward a downward and groveling course. It is from an alliance of the worthieth qualities in womanhood, from a merger of the highest capabilities of good women everywhere, that the dominating women's associations, world, national, and state, may expect widely beneficent results.

The individual must be dense indeed who does not recognize that there is no spot in this wide world where a really beneficent work can be carried on if political and religious differences are kept constantly flying in the air. Human nature is so constituted that both subjects in agitation are capable of bringing out as many bristling points as the porcupine, and of inflicting as many stings on the handling.

The affairs of the human race as recorded in history show the seasons of serious political and religious disturbances to have been so many periods of cessation in the advancement of the fine arts, invention, education, and the practise and extension of the common industries upon which the fundamental well-being of society rests. The national and healthy growth of community life is necessarily impeded where differences in religion and politics are always uppermost. If we would buy accord that sincerity to others which we claim for ourselves, we would be slower in magnifying and emphasizing the points upon which we cannot agree, to the exclusion of the possible unanimity in that public enterprise which makes for human well being and community progress.

Paradoxical as it may sound, club women the world over are agreed to be united in their differences, that is, the diversities of nationalities, creeds, social conditions, etc., are to yield to a higher common purpose of "combined strength for the good of mankind." Accordingly the organization applying for membership in the General Federation of Womens' clubs "must show that no sectarian or political test is required for membership in its body." This provision of the constitution of the General Federation of Womens' clubs was incorporated into the constitution of the Utah State Federation, and it has been the supreme effort of the many good women of Utah to adhere cleanly and clearly to this broader policy. The requests from large political clubs of women for admission to the Utah State Federation have been promptly refused, although the strength of such reinforcement in a state where women have the full suffrage becomes at once apparent.

In view of the facts immediately preceding, the thoughtlessness of the individual who zealously drags items of political record into the National club committees and thence back again into the state becomes likewise apparent. In the articles recently published, Mrs. Nelden throws a very unenviable light upon herself, womens' clubs, and womankind in general. She reveals within herself a gross misconception of, and a total disregard for, the lofty aim of the club movement a callous indifference for the opinions and feelings of its sincere and noble women, coupled with the basest ingratitude toward the state organization which has made her present national position possible.

To the end that the women of Utah may not visit undue censure upon Mrs. West and Mrs. Neville, Mrs. Nelden is asked to publish her letters to these ladies, together with her verbal statements to Mrs. West. That Mrs. Neville was not a class-mate of the undersigned, nor a student at any of the colleges which she has attended, is but another confirmation of the series of misstatements, in the attack, which have already been replied to by the recording secretary of our State Federation.

It somewhere develops in the brief of the plaintiff that two letters of request were sent to the program committe of the General Federation of Womens' clubs, in Mrs. Coulter's behalf. Since this has been made to constitute one count in the complaint, it will be answered. Club women will recall that two years ago at the sixth biennial Mrs. Nelden was accorded a secondary place on the national program, and also, after a protracted and most unselfish effort, on the part of Utah women, the office of director in the national body, to secure these honors for Mrs. Nelden, fully 100 letters went out from Utah during the year preceding—letters of commendation, information, and solicitation; some 20 of these having been sent to the program committee direct.

Unfortunately for the harmony of the Utah delegation, the preferable place on the program at that time was not accorded to Mrs. Nelden, who speedily found ready reason for visiting her wrath upon the recipient of the greater honor, spurning all amicable adjustment, and parading her injured feelings before the members of the Utah delegation at Los Angeles in persistent refusals to counsel or sit with that body. Thus were the gala days of the sixth biennial convention clouded for Utah; and again the incubus threatens us as we are about to set out for the brilliant event of the seventh biennial. Since the fourth biennial at Denver, Mrs. Nelden has strewn the same sort of wreckage all along the route—thorns, bitterness, and ill-repute where roses, kindly feelings, and high regard should have bloomed to the fullest.

Now these statements are not the things "I was told," "I told," "have heard rumored," "have said," "somebody said," they are matters of record in club annals, even of the latest records read before the executive board of the Utah state federation.

That all club women greatly deprecate indulgence in the personalities which Mrs. Nelden has so urgently solicited, goes without saying. The discernment of Mrs. Nelden does not, evidently, reach out to the broad result, and the full harvest of her zeal; but is entirely satisfied in courting methods of the direst present notoriety. In the entire Nelden transaction there is no trace of a conception of the possible courtesy due the women of Utah and a fellow club woman. To be the recipient of the highest courtesy one must, at least, deal with others according to recognizedly courteous business methods. This involves, first of all, the recognition of the fact that "there are others." And secondly, it involves a code of business ethics, the knowledge of which no thoughtful reader would impute to the parties accessory in the Nelden complaint.

The "individual" whose individualities individualize into one woman up and many women down, is destined to large disappointment in the progress of the movements which declare for humanity and for all women up.

FATAL COLLISION ON O. S. L.

In a collision last night between a switch engine and a chair car in the Oregon Short Line yards John C. Van Why, engineer, was instantly killed and Dr. Covern of Salt Lake was painfully injured and several of the passengers were shaken up. The locomotive and the chair car were both wrecked and the tracks were blocked most of the night. The wreck was one of the worst that ever happened at the Ogden yards, and occurred in daylight while a number of experienced yardmen were in charge of the car. John C. Van Why engineer and Fireman Daly and Foreman John Satchell were on board engine 1036. The switching crew was in charge of Foreman John Boyle, and Switchman Whitehead was riding on the front end of the chair car, which was being pushed ahead of several other cars. The two crews missed seeing the danger and the switch engine dashed into the chair car with tremendous force. Fireman Daly jumped in time to save his life. The engineer was caught and crushed between the tender and the boilerhead and was scalded with escaping steam. The locomotive tipped over to the west and Van Why was wedged in the wreckage so that they had to cut the engine cab to pieces in order to relieve him. The chair car was hoisted up and partly over to the south. About a dozen passengers were thrown from their seats and badly shaken up. Several women had to be carried out of the coach and were hysterical, but were able to walk over to the depot. Dr. Cavern appeared to be hurt in the small of the back and was taken to the hospital. His injuries are not serious. The locomotive was reduced to a heap of twisted scrap iron and splintered woodwork.

John C. Van Why, the engineer who was killed, leaves a wife and four children residing at 2273 Adams avenue. Justice Howell impaneled a jury, which will hold an inquest.

DIVORCES AND OTHER CASES.

The divorce suit of Anna O. Hancock against Walter Hancock was heard by the court. The testimony being to the effect that the couple were married Feb. 11, 1904, less than three months ago, that the defendant deserted the plaintiff immediately after the marriage and has refused to live with her or to provide her with the common necessaries of life. The court granted the decree of divorce and ordered the defendant to pay the plaintiff $300 alimony.

The action for divorce brought by Ferne Johnson against Thube Johnson was heard by the court. The testimony of the plaintiff and other witnesses that the defendant had deserted his wife and child was taken and a decree of divorce entered as prayed for and custody of the minor child awarded the mother.

By stipulation the suit brought by Francis A. Byanski against the Southern Pacific company was settled for $511.60. The action was brought to recover dainages for personal injuries.

In the matter of the estate of Maria K. Becker, deceased, against the Quincy Mining company et al, involving the value of 800 shares of the stock, the court granted permission to compromise the action for $1,000.

The Winslow citation contempt proceedings were continued to May 18.

SCHOOL BOARD MEETING.

At the regular meeting of the board of education, held last evening, the board transacted the following business:

The teachers' committee reported that it will be able at an early date, possibly at the next meeting, to present a list of the present force of teachers who will be employed for the next school year. The board in years gone by have experienced considerable trouble in getting contracts signed when it has left the selecting of teachers until just before school should convene, so many teachers being out of the city. But by deciding on the teachers now before the schools close, contracts can be signed, and much difficulty overcome, and the teachers will not be left during the summer in a condition of uncertainty as heretofore.

Thirty-eight applications were received for positions as teachers, which were ordered filed.

The sanitary committee reported eight cases of contagion in the city during the past week, four of scarlet fever, two of measles, and two of chickenpox.

The finance committee reported cash on hand $20,000.

Bills amounting to $1,200 were approved and ordered paid.

The committee on commencement reported that the arrangements are being fully completed, and the preparing of the program is progressing satisfactorily. It is expected that Hon. F. J. Cannon will deliver the address to the graduates.

PROF. BALLANTYNE'S RECITAL.

The pupils of Mr. Joseph Ballantyne will give a recital in the Tabernacle next Thursday night, assisted by the Tabernacle choir, of which Mr. Ballantyne is conductor. The program will be made up of piano and vocal solos, trios, duets, and the sextet and chorus from "Lucia," by Danizetti, the pupils will sing the sextet and the choir the choruses. Miss Verna Van Dyke, who is but nine years of age, will be a feature of the recital. Her piano work has in previous recitals been highly commended. She is making rapid progress under Mr. Ballantyne's teaching, and has the promise of becoming a great artist. The last recital Mr. Ballantyne gave he had 71 pupils take part in solos and concert work, but this one takes more of the form of informality and will be representative of the work done in the studio.

The admission tickets have been given to Mr. Ballantyne's pupils, who will distribute them among their friends gratis.

FUNERAL OF MISS BRYNER.

Close of a Beautiful Young Life—Burial Of Roe Ferguson.

Special Correspondence.

Price, Carbon Co., May 5.—The remains of Miss Annie Pearl Bryner, who has been attending the state academy at Castle Dale, and died there last Sunday, were brought here for burial. The funeral was held Tuesday morning. The teachers of the academy, and 40 of the students came over to attend the funeral. The district schools here were closed that the teachers and pupils might attend the services, and although it had been raining almost incessantly since Sunday morning, the funeral was one of the largest even held in Price. Forty vehicles followed the deceased to the cemetery. The services were presided over by Bishop Horsley. The choir rendered some beautiful music.

Principal Harris, of the academy, Elder Horace Merrill, a teacher in the same institution, Prest R. G. Miller, Supt. of Sunday Schools Levi N. Harmon, C. R. Johnson, Pearl's former teacher in the Price school and Bishop E. S. Horsley, were the speakers.

All spoke in highest praise of Pearl and the work she has accomplished in her short life. Her teachers voiced the sentiment of all who knew her, when they said they had never known a young lady who would stand as high in purity of soul, nobleness of character, and other qualities that go to make a good woman.

Annie Pearl Bryner was born in Price April 7, 1887, where she has lived ever since to the time of her death. She was associated with all the organizations in the ward, filling important offices in nearly all, and was uuiversally beloved.

Tuesday afternoon the funeral services over the remains of John McIntire, were held. Mr. Mcintire is an old resident of this place, having come here in the early 80's. He was found dead in his bed last Monday morning. He has been helpless for a long time and has been taken care of by friends. One son and two daughters are left to mourn the loss of a father.

Wednesday at 2 p. m. the funeral of Roe Ferguson, the young man who was shot on Monday, was held under the auspices of the Woodmen, Roe being a member of that lodge. The services were very impressive.
