Banner of freedom, by freemen unfurled!
Beacon of hope to a waiting world!
Shining above is the starry throng,
A rifle in the murky clouds of wrong—
Clouds that shall roll from their beams of light,
Till the whole round dome is blue and bright.

The High Prices.

It is a matter of surprise that goods, wares and merchandise, of all descriptions, which run up so rapidly and so high, as coin went up, are so slow in coming down. There is no cause for keeping up these high and extravagant prices of commodities. Gold has fallen from 290 to 135, and gold must and will continue steadily to decline, until it reaches 125, if not lower figures; and on the other hand, greenbacks will continue to appreciate in value, as they are doing. The great reduction of the army and navy, and the consequent curtailment of the national expenses, are bringing down gold, and putting up greenbacks, and these together have reduced the prices of dry goods, groceries, and all other commodities of daily consumption. Notwithstanding the efforts to keep up prices by interested holders, they must come down with gold, and with the increased value of greenbacks. As the army is reduced, and hundreds of thousands of officers and privates are mustered out, paymasters will cease to distribute millions per month, money matters will become tight, and prices are obliged to come down. Large government contracts will no longer collect together all the products of the country for army uses, at high prices, and every commodity will come down. The supply will exceed the demand, and down will come prices.

The war is really at an end, and there will be no more fighting. The prudent and sensible rebels coming in will not encourage bushwhacking, but will return to their allegiance, and aid the Unionists in restoring order and the good old days of prosperity. On our part, as loyalists, we should all labor to have the whole system of military government collapse as soon as possible. Our authorities will, as a matter of course, sell out to our people, at public outcry, thousands of horses and mules, and many half-worn wagons and harness. Soon thereafter our farming operations will be extended, and our whole country will come right into life. May peace, plenty, prosperity, and low prices for the necessaries of life, speedily come upon our whole land.

Crushing Treason.

A severe blow for the suppression of rebellion in East Tennessee was given last week, at Cleveland, in Bradley county. This charge and rout of the enemies of the Federal Government was made by Hon. Elijah T. Hall, Judge of this Judicial Circuit, and the jurors of the county of Bradley.

We refer to the suits brought by loyal citizens of Bradley county against their rebel neighbors for having them incarcerated in rebel jails for their patriotism.

Dr. Wm. Hunt, Local Agent of the Treasury Department in this city, recovered, for false imprisonment, the sum of twenty thousand ($20,000) dollars in a suit brought against W. H. Tibbs, (member of the Rebel Congress,) James W. Gillespie, Colonel of the deceased Confederate States Army, and Elijah F. Johnston.

Stephen Beard, Colonel 5th Tennessee Mounted Infantry, recovered twenty thousand dollars from this same Wm. H. Tibbs and Wm. L. Brown, Captain of the defunct Confederate States Army. Major J. S. Bradford, United States Army, recovered the same sum from the same parties.

Sam Hunt recovered ten thousand dollars from the same Southern rights gentlemen.

Wm. Gamble recovered twenty-two thousand five hundred dollars off John B. Carmichael, Captain William Snow, Confederate States Army, and Caswell Luttrell. James Kirby recovered ten thousand dollars off several rebels whose names we have not learned. Several other Union men recovered sums similar to those mentioned, from their rebel neighbors. All these men were in prison with Dr. Hunt.

Andrew Johnson has said, since to commencement of the war, and in a speech at Washington recently reiterated the same, that "treason must be made odious and traitors impoverished before we can have permanent peace."

From the first of Genesis to the last verse of Revelations, no declaration in the Holy Evangelist contains more truth than the declaration of the President quoted above.

A few men, by virtue of large estates, drove the multitude into rebellion as a shepherd drives his flock.

Since the defeat of the rebel armies, we hear of rich rebels returning to their homes in every county in East Tennessee. There is scarcely one of this class who has not caused the imprisonment or death of a loyal man. Let the loyal men of the county bring suits for damages, and they will be remunerated, to some extent, for their loss of property and health, as Dr. Hunt and others have been. Let the wives, daughters, sons, sisters and brothers of men who have died from the effects of imprisonment, bring suits against the men who influenced the rebel authorities to imprison them. The law and the facts are with them, and the jurors of the country will give verdicts in accordance therewith.

"Money is power," and if the wealthy men who inaugurated this rebellion retain their property, the day is not far distant when they will attempt to regain political power in East Tennessee.

"He who is forewarned is forearmed." Unless Union men beware and exercise the power they now have to destroy the power of rebels, the day may come when they and their children will be at the mercy of their unscrupulous enemies. Judge Hall's Court at Cleveland did more for the suppression of rebellion than the capture and paroling a rebel brigade.

In conclusion, we will say that all the rebels were wealthy from whom damages were recovered in Bradley county.

Editors Knoxville Whig:

I take this method of informing those who have friends and relatives in our regiment of the blowing up the steamer 'Sultana,' with all the men of our regiment who were not in hospital on board.

I give below a list of names as near, and hope sincerely that we may soon hear of more making their escape. I have taken great pains with this list, making the names so that they may be recognized by their friends.

I have seen comrades bleeding and dying, struggling with death in almost every imaginable horrible form, but never in my thirty-three months' service have I seen or heard anything that affected me so much as the news of this disaster, taking the lives of so many gallant men with whom I have been almost a constant companion since I have been a soldier.

Last September I wrote a letter, with a heart filled with grief, of the capture of the regiment at Athens and Sulphur Trestle, Alabama and now I write one, with my heart overflowing, of the terrible disaster, making the graves of half, and probably more, of the men who fought so gallantly at Sulphur Trestle, in the Mississippi river.

Returning Rebels.

Rebel officers and soldiers are returning to this city almost daily, some of whom live here, and others reside in the neighboring counties. Our authorities are very liberal towards them, in allowing them to go quietly to their homes, and in permitting their friends to furnish them and make them comfortable, with the permit of the Treasury Agency here.

These privileges are extended to all who frankly claim to be satisfied, and resolve to become loyal citizens, and none others ought to apply for such privileges, or desire to return. The future in regard to these men, and the loyal citizens, will all depend upon their conduct. If they demean themselves as good citizens, and show that they are acting in good faith, they will be protected, and left alone to enjoy their homes and quietly pursue the peaceable avocations of life, but if they conceive that they are free, in the much abused sense of this term, and undertake to abuse the Federal authorities, and to justify their connection with the rebellion, they will suffer the consequences, they may rest assured. We repeat, the future of their condition and safety depends upon their own conduct.—They can get themselves into trouble, or they can keep themselves out.

Important Order from Gen. Thomas---His Terms to Guerrillas.

HEADQ'RS DEPARTMENT OF THE CUMBERLAND, Nashville, Tenn., May 1, 1865.

To Major General Rousseau:

Send a summons, under a flag of truce, to all and every band of men in your vicinity which you may know of, who are operating nearer to you, than to any other command, and call upon them to surrender to you or to any other officer you may name for that purpose, upon the same terms as Lee surrendered to Gen. Grant. If they disregard your summons, and continue acts of hostility, they will hereafter be regarded as outlaws, and proceeded against, pursued, and when captured treated as outlaws.

[Signed] GEO. H. THOMAS,
Maj. Gen. U. S. A., Com'd.

$5,000 Reward.

The Legislature of Tennessee, now in session, having adopted the following proceedings in both Houses with absolute unanimity, therefore, I, WILLIAM G. BROWNLOW, Governor of Tennessee, do hereby issue this Proclamation, and offer a reward of five thousand dollars for the apprehension and delivery to me at Nashville, of the fugitive Isham G. Harris:

Whereas, Treason is the highest crime known to the laws of God and man, and none men is presumed to understand the true meaning of the term better than Congressmen of States, and certainly no one should be held to a more strict account for the commission of the crime of treason, and, whereas, the State of Tennessee before the rebellion enjoyed a high social, moral and political position, and bore the well earned reputation of the Volunteer State; and, whereas, by the treason of one Isham G. Harris, Ex-Governor of Tennessee, the State has lost millions of dollars and thousands of her young men, who have been killed in battle and died of disease, while thousands of the middle aged and old men have been murdered or imprisoned, and defenceless women and children driven from the State, heart-broken and penniless; and, whereas, the Voters of Tennessee did, in the month of February, 1861, by a majority of sixty thousand, repudiate treason and rebellion, but the arch-traitor Isham G. Harris, well knowing the true sentiment of the people on treason and rebellion, and entirely disregarding the overwhelming expression of popular sentiment, did use his position as Governor of the State to precipitate it in rebellion and hostility to the government of the United States; and, whereas, by such acts he is guilty of treason, perjury and theft, and is responsible, to a great extent, for the misery and death of thousands of the citizens of the State, and the devastation of the same from east to west, and from north to south—the cries of the wounded and dying, the wail of the widow, and weeping of the orphan, are wafted on every breeze, imploring a just retribution on the instigators of this rebellion; be it therefore Resolved, By the General Assembly of the State of Tennessee, that the Governor of this State is hereby authorized and instructed to offer a reward of five thousand dollars for the apprehension and delivery of the said Isham G. Harris, to the civil authorities of the State. He shall fully describe said fugitive from justice, and cause the publication of the same to be made for three months or longer, as he may deem proper, in one newspaper in each of the three grand divisions of the State, and in papers published in Richmond, Va., Raleigh, N. C., Savannah, Ga., Little Rock, Ark., New Orleans, La., and publish these preambles and resolutions with his proclamation.

Passed May 1, 1865.

WM. HEISKELL,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.
SAMUEL R. RODGERS,
Speaker of the Senate.

The aforesaid refugee from justice, without the authority of law, and in violation of all law, human and Divine, was the chief instrument in thrusting upon Tennessee this terrible rebellion, and its innumerable ills; a rebellion which has stormed the very citadel of order, every defense of virtue, every sanctuary of right, and every abode of decency. When these villainous but frantic efforts was astonishing mankind with her success, as much as appalling them with their atrocity; when the fairest portion of this great Commonwealth had been made hideous by the triumphs of this arch-traitor and his corrupt and treasonable associates, and their predatory organs had profaned our churches, like daring they ingloriously fled, as the approach of the national flag of beauty and glory, carrying with them to the hearts of treason the funds and other valuables of the State. From that period until now, the said Isham G. Harris has been roving through the South, swept along by the unparalleled hurricane of treacherousness and furious tempest of anarchy, never before equaled upon earth! Said Harris has been periodically venting the border counties of this State, issuing bogus proclamations, and collecting revenue, falsely pretending to be the Governor of Tennessee.

This said Harris is about five feet ten inches high, weighs about one hundred and forty-five pounds, and is about fifty-five years of age. His complexion is sallow—his eyes are dark and penetrating—a perfect index to the heart of a traitor—with the scowl and frown of a demon resting upon his brow. The study of mischief, and the practice of crime, have brought upon him premature baldness and grey beard. With brazen-faced impudence, he talks loudly and boastingly about the overthrow of the Yankee army, and entertains no doubt but the South will achieve her independence. He chews tobacco rapidly, and is inordinately fond of liquor. In his moral structure, he is an unscrupulous man—steeped to the nose and chin in personal and political profligacy—now about lost to all sense of honor and shame—with a heart reckless of social duty, and fatally bent upon mischief.

If captured, he will be found lurking in the rebel strongholds of Mississippi, Alabama, or Georgia—and in female society, alleging with the sheep-faced modesty of a virtuous man, that it is not a wholesome state of public sentiment, or of taste, that forbids an indiscriminate mixing together of married men and women. If captured, the fugitive must be delivered to me alive, to the end that justice may be done him here, upon the theatre of his former villainous deeds!

The city papers of Nashville and Memphis, as well as the Chattanooga Gazette and Knoxville Whig, will each insert three times, in addition to the other papers suggested by the Legislature.

{S. L.} In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the seal of the State, at the city of Nashville, this 3d of May, 1865.

WM. G. BROWNLOW.

By the Governor:
ANDREW J. FLETCHER, Secretary of State.

GENERAL ORDERS.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF EAST TENNESSEE, Knoxville, Tenn., April 29, 1865.

General Orders No. 27.

I.—By decision of the Attorney General of the United States, no Confederate is entitled to come into a loyal State by virtue of his parole. He will have to take the oath of allegiance to the United States to enable him to remain in any of the loyal States.

II.—Those persons who have belonged to the service, either civil or military, of the so called Confederate States, and who are now within the limits of this District, or who may hereafter come within the same, will be expected to take the oath of allegiance to the United States, or be subject to be sent beyond the boundary line of East Tennessee.

III.—Hereafter all persons belonging or who may have belonged to the Confederate service, or who have owed allegiance to the Confederate States, and who come into East Tennessee from Virginia or North Carolina, will present themselves to and be retained at Strawberry Plains until their cases are reported to and disposed of by these Headquarters.

IV.—All persons mentioned in the preceding paragraph, who have not their homes in East Tennessee, or who may decline to take the oath of allegiance, will, by direction of the General commanding the Department of the Cumberland, be sent by railroad to Dalton, Georgia, and there turned loose. They will not be allowed to stop or delay by the way.

V.—The Subsistence Department will issue rations to them while in the hands of the United States military authorities.

VI.—All persons now in military prison at Knoxville, and against whom there are no charges, will at once be released in accordance with the above instructions and turned loose.

By command of Major General STONEMAN.
