A GREAT TERRITORY.

A Prospector's Explorations in the Cascade Mountains.

The Forest County of Chehalis—Railroad Building Near Medical Lake—The Selah Valley.

TACOMA, Oct. 8.—(Post-Intelligencer Correspondence.)—Mr. Harry Fruit, an old and well known resident of this city, has just returned from a long and interesting trip in the mountains of Eastern Washington. He gave the Post-Intelligencer correspondent to-day a part of his experience. "My first trip," said Mr. Fruit, "on which I started in May last from the Salmon river country, was to Wallowa lake, a distance about half-way between Ruby City and the British line. The water in this lake has great mineral properties, is very bitter to the taste and of a milky color. The lake is about one and a-half miles long by one wide, and is in the center of the mining district which bears its name. There are about 150 prospectors in this vicinity and so far as I can see, everything has long since been staked off. The character of the quartz found here is principally gold. Returning to Ruby City about the 1st of April, in company with John Rouse I started out to prospect a district hitherto unexplored, in the vicinity of the Cascade Pass.

"Crossing over a mountain chain from the Concomully river, we struck the Methow river about 25 miles from its mouth. There were about 20 prospectors here, meeting with some not very good showings. From this point up the Methow to the mouth of the Twisp river there are some white settlers scattered here and there among the Indian habitations. Our journey by up the Twisp river and from its conjunction with the Methow we passed out of all civilization. From this point we never saw one of human kind until our return, some two months later. Our journey up the Twisp was most laborious, being compelled to cut our way through fallen timber for our riding and pack animals.

"A long twenty miles up this river brought us to Wolf creek, which empties into the Twisp from the south, and twenty-five miles up the smooth between the Methow and Lake Chelan, on the top of which is a small lake of clear, cold water. We cut a trail down the south and west slope of the mountain to Lake Chelan, where we made camp for a day or two to look around. We found plenty of fish in the lake, and saw some of the finest scenery man ever laid eyes upon. The shores of the lake at this point—the northern end, are very precipitous, except a narrow gravelly strip along the immediate shore.

AT CHELAN FALLS.

"From the north end of Lake Chelan we continued our way northward up the Stehekin river, which has its source in a lake on the summit of the Cascade range, and, by the way, we named the Lake Rouse. In the vicinity of the pass we found several good ledges of silver-bearing quartz and located two claims. Along the whole trip, however, this was our first find. It was our intention to return to the head via Cascade creek and the Skagit river, but after a trial of five days through windfalls and slide rock, and making but four miles headway, we concluded to retrace our steps. With nothing to eat for our horses and but small provisions for ourselves, after 25 days we struck the Methow again on our return.

PLACER MINING NEAR THE METHOW.

"At the mouth of the Methow some parties are engaged in placer mining on a big scale. The water of the Methow is flumed down the Columbia some distance and with it the bars of the Columbia are being washed, the help employed being mostly Chinese. In fact, all along the Columbia can be seen Chinese washing out shallow places. We brought our horses with us over the Okoquinsie pass, and in the spring intend to return to our claims to develop them. We have a 16-foot ledge, and would have stayed long enough to know what there is in it, but we were working alongside of

AN IMMENSE GLACIER,

And every now and then could hear a report as of thunder, as immense chunks of it broke off and rolled down the mountain side. At the mouth of the Chelan river there is being built a sawmill, and the company owning it, it is stated, intend constructing a steamer to ply on the lake, as far up, anyhow, as 15 miles, to the mouth of Pierce river, where another mill is to be built."

A SEA OF TIMBER.

Chehalis County a Vast Fir Forest—Farms to Come.

Montesano Vidette.

A gentleman with whom we were conversing a short time ago expressed his dissatisfaction with this part of the territory because of its superabundance of timber. "Why," he declared, "there is a perfect sea of timber; there is timber everywhere; you cannot see anything but timber; and I, for my part, prefer a prairie country, where I can farm."

It is probably true that many others who come from an open prairie country have been impressed much the same as the gentleman above referred to. But it is clearly evident that only the most superficial observation would elicit such an expression regarding Chehalis county. It is true that within the limits of this county are to be found vast bodies of timber of various kinds and of the finest quality. It may grow monotonous to the newcomer to be able to see but little else. But if he has been a resident for even a short time he has not failed to observe that the present wealth and importance of the county is due almost entirely to the lumber interests—the direct product of our timber. He will also notice that with the dozen mills now being operated in the county and which turn out probably a half million feet of lumber a day, the timber has been apparently yet untouched. The question naturally arises: What then must be the future for the lumbering interests of Chehalis county?

But few people as they pass through the county by stage or steamer see but little of the farms and ranches, of which we can boast not a few. But often back of what seems a comfortable farmhouse set down in the midst of an endless forest, is a magnificent farm, of which any man might justly feel proud. It may have taken years of labor and expense and privation, but the owner is possessed of that which always brings a sure return. As the timber gradually disappears before the demands of energetic lumbermen it will leave for the benefit of the tiller of the soil land peculiarly adapted for farming and grazing, and that which is not covered with a sea of timber may yet in time yield a rich abundance of products of the farm. The natural wealth of the present will in the future yield to the acquired wealth of the laborer backed by capital.

AN ANIMATED SCENE.

A Railroad Army Smoothing a Trail to the Big Bend.

Medical Lake Ledger.

Those who take the pains to take a stroll a few rods northeast of town will witness a scene of activity such as has never been observed in this locality. For a stretch of about two miles in an eastern direction there is a cloud of dust, the earth being torn up by spade and plow and blasts, and man and beast move like clock-work to prepare a level highway for the Ironhorse. The activity is occasioned by the approach of the Northern Pacific line, so much talked of, so long looked for and finally at our very doors. About 150 men with a large number of teams are at work between Medical Lake and Mr. King's place and additional forces are constantly being added. On this stretch of the road is the heaviest work for a long distance, being a succession of rock cuts and fills. Of the former, there are eight, the longest, within a few rods of the depot site, is 1200 feet in length and at some points will be 12 feet deep. A side-track passes through the entire length of this cut, making the excavation an enormous bulk, considering almost entirely of solid rock. The work between Cheney and Medical Lake is done by contractors, but directly while sub-contractors are operating beyond this point. John Dorchester has charge of seven gangs east of town and, as they cover a distance of about two miles, it keeps him busy watching the work. Each gang also has a foreman.

To the credit of the company not a Chinaman is employed, and the men engaged are as strong, healthy and robust a lot of laborers as we ever saw. They are a good specimen of American muscle and they receive good pay. Such a lot of men will do short double the work as would a lot of Chinamen or imported ignorant Italians. Though an immense amount of work is yet required before the road-bed is finished to this point, yet the next ten days will about complete it. In the direction of Davenport the scene is a considerably animating one for some ten miles out of Medical Lake, and at many points forces are at work piling up the dirt. It is thought that track-laying from Cheney will begin before the 15th inst., as immense quantities of construction material are arriving daily from the East.

Reclaiming the Selah Valley.

Yakima Democrat.

The Selah Ditch Company have begun work on the Selah ditch. They have a force of about 100 men at work. The gentlemen composing this company are not making any great amount of noise over the undertaking, but have quietly settled down to business, and intend putting water on 25,000 acres of the best land in Yakima county in time for next season's crop. The Selah Ditch Company own 26,000 acres in this valley, a portion of which will be cultivated to grapes, prunes, peaches, etc., while a number of sections will be fenced and stocked with cattle. A large fruit cannery will be erected, and the Northern Pacific will be asked to make a station at a suitable point in this, one of the greatest little valleys in Washington Territory. Most of the land in the Selah valley is held by people who intend improving it and making homes for themselves and families, and a year from the present time will see the bunch land, which looms up on the left as one passes west of North Yakima on the cars, dotted with houses and flourishing orchards and vineyards.

Mineral Wealth in the Big Bend.

Ellensburg Localizer.

A silver and copper lead has been found a short distance above Orondo. An assay of the rock was made in Portland, the assay showing over $3 in silver and 125 pounds of copper to the ton. The assay was made of the croppings and is worth some $18 to $20 to the ton. Sinking a few feet on the copper lode the indications show a change in the rock to silver, and it may turn out to be a genuine silver lode. The doctor informed us that three silver ledges, besides the copper lode, have been located, but no assays have yet been made of the rock. There is also a silver lode up the Entiat about 20 miles, an assay of the croppings of which showed $9.50. These mines are located four on the east and one on the west side of the Columbia. It seems that Orondo is right in the midst of a mining country, and has deposits of the precious metals as well as lime and marble. The last named is said to be of a very fine quality and susceptible of a high polish.

Melancholy Effect of a Voorhees Speech.

Ellensburg Localizer.

On Wednesday, while Voorhees was speaking at the court house, a Portuguese sitting back in the audience was the loudest one to applaud the speaker, and would clap his hands and slap both sides of his head alternately. He became doubly demonstrative when Voorhees wound up on the tariff. It had such an effect upon the poor fellow that it unbalanced his mind. The next day he went about the streets and in a loud voice spoke on the tariff, earnestly and faithfully imitating the gesture and gyrations of Voorhees. To emphasize his words he would strike his hand against the side of a building, tear his hair and throw his hat on the sidewalk and stamp upon it.

An Intelligent Dog.

Ellensburg Localizer.

At the ranch of John G. Olding there is a hound dog that accompanies the children to school every day. The children ride a pony and picket it out on the grass near the school house. Mrs. Olding says the dog will lie down by the picket rope and when the pony crops of the grass within reach the dog will untie the rope and lead the animal to a fresh grazing spot, holding the rope in his mouth all the while. By frequent moving it will keep the pony on fresh grass all the while.

TERRITORIAL TALK.

Lumber shipments from Gray's Harbor during September, 5,770,000 feet.

The new Yakima Democrat is a good looking and newsy paper, all printed at home. The Democrats are a feeble folk in that section, but the editorials of the new journal will be as Bon's milk to the party.

The British Columbia steamers have come down the Okoyoos lake to within a short distance of the Wanicut mines. These trips were made with a view of establishing business relations with the country south of the line.

The gas company at Cealium reached a depth of 600 feet several days ago. When down a little over 400 feet one stratum of coal seven feet thick was struck. The whole town of Cealium is underlaid with coal. It is intended to keep on boring until a depth of 1000 feet is reached.

The sawmill at Wenatchee is sawing from 400 to 500 feet of lumber per day, which is hauled off as soon as cut. Several buildings are in course of construction in the town of Wenatchee. A hotel, a couple of dwellings, and a blacksmith shop are under way. The town is just a half a mile from the river.

Some prospectors wishing to test the value of some placer mines on the reservation in the Okanogan country, made some sluice boxes, set them and made full preparation to work the mines enough to ascertain the amount of pay; but the Indian authorities getting wind of what was going on, detached men to break up their little game and spoil the business they had in contemplation. Their plans were frustrated, and the scheme was abruptly terminated.—Ellensburg Localizer.

SNOHOMISH TERRITORIAL ITEMS.

SNOHOMISH, Oct. 7.—About 150 people attended the Wangler's opening entertainment Wednesday evening, October 3. The programme passed off very successfully and the members of the association could wish for no more interest than was manifest at their opening social. James Burton delivered an able and earnest address of welcome. The two and three-minute speeches occasioned display of much humor and wit. Mr. E. Ferguson, on the subject, "Marriage," introduced Dr. A. H. Eddy, who made a witty speech on the same subject. The essay by W. P. Bell on the subject, "Home and Out," and the select reading by Mrs. Ettie I. Robinson, subject, "The Thurston Bridge," were each a literary treat.

The question: "Resolved, that the home is a greater agency in molding the character of the individual than the school," after a very able discussion was decided in the negative. By an appeal to the house the question was decided in the affirmative. The programme committee have arranged the following programme for Wednesday evening, October 10:

Instrumental Music.

The neighbor whist social was held on Wednesday evening at the residence of Mrs. C. E. Paul, at the East End. More than the usual number were present, Mr. and Mrs. H. F. Jackson becoming members on this occasion. At 10 o'clock a most excellent repast was served, and the company then dispersed. The club has changed its meetings from Wednesday to Thursday evening. The persons winning the most points were: Mrs. C. E. Paul and Mr. H. F. Jackson, scoring each 26 points, while the average score of the other members was 16 points. There are now seven couples belonging to the club who are active members. It is intended to keep up the meetings all winter.

THE NEW FIRST READER.

Detroit Free Press.

"Do you see the man and the fish?"

"Yes, I see them. Did the man hook the fish?"

"He did. It weighs 11 pounds."

"And will he bring that it weighed 15 pounds?"

"Oh, no. He will say that it weighed exactly 10, thus being a clean pound rather than be thought a liar."

LESSON II.

"What have we here?"

"A lady and a woman, who both appear to be excited."

"Can you hear what they say?"

"Yes. The lady says she has never worked in any one's kitchen for less than $4 a week and privileges, and she doesn't propose to begin now."

"And what does the woman say?"

"She says she's sorry she didn't set out the cake and wine for the lady's benefit, but it slipped her mind. If the lady will please forgive her and return to the kitchen she can have the run of the house and a mortgage on the furniture."

"And won't the lady do it?"

"No." She elevates her proud nose another notch, gathers her camel's-hair around her and sails away with the remark:

"I don't have to work, you know. I came simply to oblige you, and you don't put on style enough to suit me."

LESSON III.

"Why does the dog growl?"

"Because he sees the tramp."

"Why does the tramp fly?"

"Because he sees the dog."

"Is this natural philosophy?"

"It is, excepting that the dog ought to have got hold of him."

LESSON IV.

"Does the man blow his horn?"

"He does."

"Why does he blow it?"

"He is a buyer of rags."

"But what has the blowing of a horn to do with the buying of rags?"

"Nothing."

"And yet he blows?"

"Yes."

"And no one hits him with a brickbat?"

"Well, hardly ever. It is only about one citizen in 10,000 who feels that he has any rights in the city, and brick-bats are not always to be picked up when wanted."

LESSON V.

"Do you see the fly?"

"I do."

"Is it the same one?"

"The very same one who was sharking around a month ago as big as an elephant, during anyone in the house to knock a chip off his shoulder."

"And he had a soft thing?"

"He had. He was into the butter, sugar and milk; he bit the baby a dozen times a day; he awoke everybody in the morning by his buzzing. He was boss of all."

"But he looks very tame now."

"Ah! yes, a change has come."

"What is it?"

"The first cold nights. His big head has departed, his gall has fled and his toes will soon turn up to the daisies."

LETTER FROM THE "GRAND OLD MAN" OF THE NORTH PACIFIC, EX MAYOR YESLER.

SEATTLE, Sept. 15, 1888.

Having constantly to answer letters of inquiry in relation to Dr. J. Eugene Jordan and the many cures reported by his Histogenetic system of Medicine, I beg to take these means to answer all such questions, to-wit:

I have had the honor and pleasure of the intimate acquaintance with Dr. J. Eugene Jordan for several years. He is a gentleman of culture and refinement and the peer of anyone in the medical profession. Many of the wonderful cures which are reported in his published volume entitled "The Entire Revolution of Medicine," are personally known to me. Dr. Jordan's success in this part of the country with his grand Histogenetic system is certainly unparalleled, and while I am neither a prophet nor the son of one I venture to predict that the time is not far distant when his Histogenetic system will be the standard medicine of the day with the intelligent classes. Respectfully yours,

H. L. YESLER.

Chattanooga, Tenn., June 27, 1887.—Gentlemen: Some years ago my little daughter, aged five years, was afflicted with a blood disease, which appeared first in a small ulcer on her leg. In spite of all we could do it spread until it was a large sore, and we had given up all hope of her recovery, when we were induced to try S.S.S. Before she had taken half a bottle the sore began to show signs of healing, and we felt encouraged. I am still taking the medicine, and shall continue to do so until I am perfectly cured. I believe S.S.S. to be the best blood purifier in the world. Yours truly,

Cameron, S. C., July 7, 1886.—The Swift Specific Co., Atlanta, Ga.: Gentlemen: I was afflicted with a blood disease for three years, for which I tried many remedies without any permanent relief. I was finally induced to try your celebrated S.S.S., and after using the medicine for a short time I felt that it was doing me good. I persisted in its use until I was perfectly cured. I am still in good health, and I attribute my present good health to the use of S.S.S. Yours truly,

Cameron, S. C., July 7, 1886.—Gentlemen: The wife of one of my customers was terribly afflicted with a bad blood skin disease, which covered her whole body. She was so disfigured as to be the talk of her neighbors. I had heard your celebrated S.S.S. spoken of highly, and induced my wife to try it. She took about a dozen bottles of S.S.S. and was cured. The disease left the skin of the plantation where she had lived, and she has remained in good health ever since. She was formerly quite a beauty, and in a few weeks she was as perfectly well. She is now married and happily with her husband, with no trace of the affliction left. Yours very truly,
