ADDRESS
Of the Board Organized by Law, to Encourage Emigration to the State of Tennessee.

In addressing the Circular to all who feel an interest in the prosperity of the State of Tennessee, or who may reside in Europe or in this country, the Board desire in the first place, to draw attention to a brief description of the Resources of the State. In doing so they shall speak separately to East, Middle and West Tennessee, the three sections into which the State is divided.

East Tennessee abounds in mountains. On its eastern boundary it embraces a portion of the Alleghany range, the Western portion of the Cumberland range. The mountains are rich in a great variety of minerals. It is also highly favored on account of its rivers and streams. The Holston, or Tennessee, flows through the centre of the valley of East Tennessee, and as many as its tributaries are descending with great rapidity, they, in consequence of it, afford an abundance of water-power. Protected by the chains just referred to, and elevated some hundred feet above the ocean, the valley of East Tennessee is favored with a delightful climate, the winters are short, yet invigorating; the heat of the summer is moderated by the mountain breezes. The many streams which flow into the Holston or Tennessee, have given the valley of East Tennessee a high reputation for its breadstuffs and for its live stock; it abounds in fruit, and from its mountain sides flow many perennial springs. Rich in water, power, in timber and in breadstuffs; blessed with a pure and salubrious atmosphere, and easily accessible by railroads, East Tennessee affords many opportunities for the erection of manufactories. The city of Knoxville, in its central position, partakes largely of the spirit of enterprize for which East Tennessee is distinguished.

MIDDLE TENNESSEE includes a portion of the Cumberland mountains, and an elevated region extending to the Tennessee river and to Kentucky; by the latter, a depressed section of country is encircled, which has been called the "Basin."

Embracing a portion of the mountainous region, and the richest lime stone lands of the State, the resources of Middle Tennessee are remarkable for their diversity, not less than for their richness. In the valleys of the Cumberland mountains, and of the Highlands, it vies with the mineral wealth of East Tennessee, and with its adaptation for grazing and for the growing of fruit. On account of the rapidity with which its rivers descend from the table land, it furnishes many opportunities for the establishing of manufactories; while the basin, above mentioned, is so fertile a region that it has justly been called the "Garden of Tennessee." The city of Nashville, the Capital of the State, is situated in this Basin.

WEST TENNESSEE embraces a portion of the elevated plateau which commences in Kentucky and terminates in Mississippi. It is situated between the Tennessee and Mississippi rivers, and has in general, a smaller and highly productive soil. It is surpassed, however, in this respect, by the cotton lands of the Mississippi river, where for centuries, the rains have washed down the rich soil of the surrounding hills. These cotton lands, in their turn are likely to be surpassed whenever the luxuriant timber in their immediate vicinity of the Mississippi river, to some extent at least, shall be cleared away, and when the swamps of the Mississippi shall be made productive. The commerce of Memphis is greatly on the increase. It is situated on the Mississippi, and by its elevated position, is without a rival for a long distance on either side, and on either bank of the river. In consequence of the abolition of slavery, the planters of West Tennessee are likely to devote themselves to the planting of wheat and corn, and to the raising of cattle, far more than they have done. The climate of West Tennessee is generally healthy, it is only under the swamps of the Mississippi that fevers prevail.

From the facts here presented, it is evident that Tennessee possesses advantages which deserve general attention. Situated in a central part of the Union, Tennessee is able to produce all the cereals common to the North, and with the exception of sugar cane, all the agricultural products growing in the South. Thanks to the mildness of its climate, the long period during which it is capable of pushing the producing, the extent of its railroad communications, and to its superior inland navigation, the people of Tennessee can take their produce either North or South, while in the one case, the cold, and in the other, the heat prevent their injury.

It only remains to raise very briefly to the spirit which animates the people of Tennessee. Heretofore the State relied for its prosperity principally on a partial development of its agricultural resources. A new era has been ushered in. In consequence of the changes which have occurred, the way is opened for a harmonious development of all the resources of the State. Many opportunities are afforded for the purchase of farms of any size, at moderate prices, and many peculiar advantages are held out to mechanics, manufacturers and all others who in any way have it in their power to aid in developing the resources of the State. The unsettled condition of society, connected with the war, and the injuries it wrought to our social condition, are passing away. It is acknowledged among all classes of intelligent citizens, that peace and prosperity depend upon the enforcement of the laws. The courts are open, and the administration of justice is regarded in every county of the State. All necessities and interests are inspiring our citizens with greater industry and more careful attention to improvements in implements and methods of farming, and to the introduction of manufactures and the encouragement of those who come among them, and who desire to make their homes in Tennessee. On the realization of a brighter future for the State the school law, which has been enacted, will so contribute to public welfare. By the means of this law, every child in the State is to have free access to the schools. The Board, then, has no hesitation in inviting every industrious immigrant to take up his abode in this State, in order to take part in developing its resources, and in advancing its prosperity.

Ex-Officio, member of the Board.

Petition.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the State of Tennessee, convened in General Assembly:

The undersigned, citizens of the State, your constituents, and personal and political friends, respectfully but earnestly pray that you will repeal the 16th section of an act passed February 25, 1867, commonly known as the Franchise act, thus giving full effect to the principle on which is based our restored State Government, by obliterating from the statute books the last vestige of legislation which imposes disabilities where there has been no blame, and which neither time nor merit can remove. It would gratify us, and we feel sure it would gratify the body of your constituents, to know that you had acted in this matter promptly and unanimously. And as in duty bound, we will ever pray.

Republican National Convention.

The Republican National Committee, at their meeting in Washington on the 11th inst., appointed the National Convention of the Union Republican party to be held in Chicago, on the 20th of may next, for the purpose of nominating candidates for President and Vice President of the United States.

The undersigned, constituting the National Committee designated by the convention held in Baltimore on the 7th of June, 1864, do appoint that a National Convention of the Union Republican party be held at the city of Chicago, Illinois, on Wednesday, the 20th day of May next, at 12 o'clock M., for the purpose of nominating candidates for the offices of President and Vice President of the United States. Each State of the United States is authorized to be represented in said convention by the number of delegates equal to twice the number of Senators and Representatives to which such State is entitled in the National Congress.

We invite the co-opperations of all citizens who rejoice that our great civil war has happily terminated in the discomfiture of rebellion; who would hold fast the unity and integrity of the republic, and maintain its paramount right to defend to its utmost its own existence while imperilled by secret conspiracy or armed force; who are in favor of an economical administration of the public expenditures, of the complete extirpation of the principles and policy of slavery, and of the speedy reorganization of those States whose governments were destroyed by the rebellion, and the permanent restoration to their proper practical relations with the United States in accordance with the true principles of republican government.

More Bishops.

The Methodist, discoursing on "Plans of Lay Delegation," and predicting a "process of division and subdivision" of the Annual Conference, to accommodate the new state of things, concludes as follows, in regard to an increased Episcopal force:

This process, to be sure, necessitates an increased Episcopate; but so much the better; the increased expense of more bishops is nothing compared to the increased services thus secured to the Church through this most potential office. It is the policy of the English Church—especially in its new, or colonial fields—of the Protestant Episcopal Church, of the Roman Church, of all Episcopal Churches, in fact, to multiply their bishoprics. It is a policy of well-tried experience. It gives efficiency and stability to their ecclesiastical work. The Methodist Episcopate would be five-fold more effective and five-fold more prized by the people, were it manned with five-fold more able incumbents. This is perhaps the capital want of our Church, just now; for the office is just limited enough to be inappreciable, almost impalpable, to the people.—Cincinnati Advocate.

Beecher's Sermon to the Merchants.

The Rev. Henry Ward Beecher delivered a discourse in the Brooklyn Academy of Music on Sunday to the New York merchants, and we are glad to perceive that they attended in large numbers; for they require a little edification and pious counsel. We hope there were some bank directors and managers of railroads and ferry companies in the congregation; for they are more in need of a good stirring up of their consciences than the merchants. But there is another eminent class and that is the preachers, whom Mr. Beecher ought to take in hand, and we hope he will give next Sunday to them. There are no pious people who are more in want of spiritual advice and thorough reformation than the preachers. They are about in the same condition that the monasteries and nunneries were before Luther's time. Beecher selected as a text for the merchants, "Who hath taken this counsel against Tyre, the crowning city, whose merchants are princes, whose traffickers are the honorable of the earth?" We suggest that a good text for the sermon to the preachers would be the 27th verse of the 23d chapter of St. Matthew, "Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees! for ye are like unto whited sepulchres, which indeed, appear beautiful outward, but are within full of dead men's bones and of all uncleanness!"—N. Y. Herald.

They are Known.

Those who are now publishing themselves as opposed to the Union in an acknowledged secession unconverted rebel sheet, are of that class of Juda's who, during the rebellion, under the guise of good Union men, sought and obtained all the information they could of the true Unionists and reported the same to the murderers of such men as Weaver and Hampton, of Polk County, Mackey, Jones, Stepp, Allen, Gilbert, Henderson, and others, of Henderson and Transylvania counties, and the wholesale murderers of fourteen at one time on Laurel Creek in Madison County. A portion of these were mere boys, and there were scores of others who in like manner fell martyrs to the cause of the Union.—Beside these, hundreds of others were manacled, cast into foul prisons and died, or were shot at the stake. These hired dupes are advancing the cause of the Union by the course they are pursuing, because they are well known in their respective neighborhoods. The Union League is well rid of all such.

We are informed by respectable members of the Order that the name, discription and location of each of the parties who actually belonged to the Union League and consented to their names being used for the purpose of placing this loyal organization under false colors will be sent to the Grand Council of the State, thence to the Great Grand Council of the United States, and will then be transmitted to the various Councils throughout the whole country.—Asheville Pioneer.

The Cranberry Crop of New Jersey.

The Trenton State Gazette says:

The cranberry crop on Cape Cod the present year amounts to 10,000 barrels, of which a large portion are said to have been cut severely by the frost. In Ocean county it will reach 16,000 barrels, New Jersey entire will probably produce 40,000 barrels. Other States, Michigan, New York North Carolina, New England and other localities will probably produce 50,000 barrels, making as the proble crop for the United States the present year of 100,000 barrels or 300,000 bushels, of which New Jersey produces nearly one-half, consequently she can control the price of the crop. The value of the crop cannot fall short of $1,200,000, and this immense sum is harvested from what has been considered worthless swamp lands.—Much of this land has been wrested from the possession of wild animals, wild morasses, over which even the light-footed Indian, or still lighter squirrel, could hardly tread without miring. And these worthless swamps, now improved in the cranberry culture with bearing vines, are worth $1,000 per acre.

Quakers at Home.

The Friends present a model of interior home-life. They cultivate the amenities, the consideration, the cheer, and the abundance which make a home happy. They speak to one another with surpassing gentleness; they smile upon one another with a sweet benignity; they welcome the visitor to an astounding hospitality. Their religion consists in creating happiness in the household. They are gentle, loving, and attentive to the children. They seek to promote like docility and cheerfulness among the "rising generation." They are equally attentive to old age, with a chastened respectfulness of manner, which exalts the self-respect of declining years. Whatever can be dome to make a home comfortable and cheery is first to be done. Other Christians deny to themselves home comforts for the sake of preaching the Gospel to the heathen; but the Society of Friends believe that charity begins at home. Their Gospel is one of home peace. Their heaven on earth is to win some foretaste of the "rest which remaineth for the people of God." They exemplify what the Christian fireside ought to be—warm without heat, cheerful witeout excitement, bright without dazzle. Long live the Quaeor homeo.—N. Y. Commercial.

TO CONSUMPTIVES.

IT IS AUTHENTICALLY STATED that one-fifth of the inhabitants of this country and Europe die of Consumption. No disease has been more thoroughly studied, and its nature less understood; there is no disease upon which exists a greater diversity of opinion and no disease which has more completely baffled all medical skill and remedial agencies.

Some of the prominent symptoms are Cough, Expectoration, Shortness of Breath, Irritation about the Lungs and Chest, darting Pains in the Side and Back, Emaciation, and general negative condition of the whole system.

Persons suffering with this dread disease, or any of its consumptive symptoms, should lose no time in protecting themselves of the proper Remedy, in order that they may stay its ravages, and be restored to health. The

REV. E. A. WILSON'S

PREPARED PRESCRIPTION FOR THE CURE OF

Consumption, Asthma, Bronchitis, Coughs, Colds, and

by the use of which he was restored to health in a few weeks, after having suffered several years with a severe lung affection and that dread disease, Consumption, has now been in use ten years with the most marked success.

This Remedy is prepared from the original Recipe, chemically pure, by the Rev. EDWARD A. WILSON, 165, South 2d Street, Williamsburgh, Kings Co., New York.

A Pamphlet containing the original prescription, with full and explicit directions for preparation and use, together with a short account of his case with symptoms, experience and cure, can be obtained (free of charge) of Mr. Wilson, as above, or by calling on or addressing,

PATENTED JULY 2, 1867.

THIS INSTRUMENT IS ONE OF THE most useful improvements yet made in Photography, for it enables the operator to procure a negative without the trouble of fastening or tipping the picture to center it, or moving the camera about, to obtain a focus, as every requisite movement is given by the Board in adjusting the pictures of any size or shape to the camera.

The trouble of copying, enlarging etc., is entirely obviated by this invention, and much valuable time saved thereby.
