MARINE CATASTROPHE AT FLORIDA WOODENWARE CO. When Jim Hart and Eddie Waite started out to the office of the Florida Woodenware Co., yesterday morning in the genial secretary's chariot to give Eddie a chance to sell more or less white soap in South Atlantic Ports to the powers that be, they failed to provide themselves with life preservers as required by marine law and came near paying dearly for their dereliction.

Driving along the skids into the yards Secretary Hart noticed the pier seemed to be about level with the water. He proceeded cautiously. When he was almost out of sight of land he noticed that the front end of the old buss was beneath the surface of the water and emitting bubbles. It then and not until then, occurred to him that he was sinking.

The supposed pier was merely a few floating skids.

Mr. Waite suggested that he reverse gears and back out. Seizing on the suggestion Mr. Hart threw the lever over and found that water had seeped into his shoes, and while he was trying to dry his feet the vessel came near sinking. Mr. Waite climbed over from the poop deck and quickly backed the vessel to safety.

Mr. Waite made a funny crack about his previous thoughts that Palatka was dry, but this paper declines to publish it.

TURKEYS ARE WEARING COATS BECAUSE OF BOUT (By Associated Press) Dewar, Pa., Oct. 27.—Mrs. Chas. Reichenbach's prize flock of plumed turkeys are wearing overcoats to cover up an extremely September Morn appearance, due to an encounter with some home brew, it is said.

Mrs. Reichenbach discovered that a barrel of cider in the cellar of her home had a "kick" that wouldn't come out even when run through a jelly strainer. Then she learned that a lot of rye had been put in the barrel, in accordance with an old-time belief that rye adds to alcoholic contents of cider. No one knew who put the rye in the barrel.

Mrs. Reichenbach emptied the barrel and dumped the rye on the ash pile. The turkeys ate the rye and became as gloriously intoxicated as ever were any toppers who sat around a keg in the olden days. When they became paralyzed and Mrs. Reichenbach found them lying on the lawn she thought they were dead, and proceeded to salvage the feathers, picking them "dry."

Burial was postponed until the next day, however, when the Reichenbachs found the whole flock strutting Kissimee for several weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Wright, whose marriage here was a brilliant event of the twelfth of October, are expected to return from their wedding trip the early part of next week.

Mr. and Mrs. Wright visited relatives at Hopkinsville, Ky., and enjoyed trips to other cities of the north and east.

Miss Alice Thomas and Miss Mary Ruth Woodruff will be among Palatkans attending the foot ball game in St. Augustine tomorrow afternoon.

about the lawn, wearing nothing but their birthday clothes, which in turkey talk is pin feathers. Mrs. Reichenbach and her daughter made overcoats from blankets for the plucked birds, which appear to like these "latest fall styles."
