COTTON MARKET HAS HEAVY TONE

Holds Well, However, in Spite of Bearish Statistics and Weakness in Stocks.

The cotton market showed heaviness yesterday, selling off about ¼ of a cent a pound, and closed around the low with a loss of 19 to 25 points. Local spot was down 20 points to 11.40 cents. Considering the generally unsettled and weak stock market, easier foreign exchange rates, bearish week end statistics and pessimistic textile news, many thought that the list acted well. Sufficient Wall Street buying was on hand to prevent the market from developing weakness. The South was a seller and professionals hammered the list at times. According to the New Orleans Cotton Exchange, the amount of cotton brought into sight during this week was 132,769 bales, against 183,272 during the corresponding week of last year. Spinners have taken 177,000 bales during this week, against 278,000 bales in the corresponding 1920 week.

Price fluctuations were again narrow and business was virtually at a standstill at times. The ring crowd did a little on both sides and Liverpool was a small seller. Liverpool cables were better than due up to the time of our opening, but later showed a downward tendency on the drop here. Spot business in Liverpool was quiet. The market opened steady with unchanged prices to an advance of 8 points. The small starting gain was due to firmer Liverpool cables and lack of immediate pressure. Business on the call was light and meaningless.

The three March notices in circulation made no impression on values. In the first hour the market was off around 20 points in most options, but recoveries of 5 to 12 points took place at the bottom. Prominent operators were disposed to await new developments and remained out of the market. Bears stressed the downward revision of certain lines of cotton goods by the Amoskeag Manufacturing Company and unfavorable Manchester advices. The tone was barely steady in the middle of the day, trading being neglected and price movements small. Not until the last half hour was there an increase in pressure. At the session's low the list was off 19 to 29 points. The finish was within a few points of the low.
