COTTON PRICES OFF TO LOWER LEVELS

Market Still Steady but Quiet and Fluctuates Slightly Below Saturday Bids.

Despite the strong undertone of securities, grain and foreign exchange, yesterday's cotton market continued steady and quiet and fluctuated for the most part on a level that represented a slight loss from Saturday's final bids. The best that the market was able to do was to reach its last previous closing prices for a brief period. It finished with a loss of a point in December to one of 12 in July. Among the most prominent factors opposing an advance was the favorable weather in the Cotton Belt. Liverpool's disappointing action and reports of an easier basis for spot cotton in the South. Labor troubles in Massachusetts mills increased bearish feeling.

From the action of yesterday's market it was evident that the public was not in a mood to buy or sell decisively. It was strictly the professional element which made the market, which was willing to take a chance on frequent changes in weather conditions. Price movements continued unattractive, the market being about as narrow as markets of last week.

Exports of cotton yesterday were 33,013 bales, bringing the total for the season to 4,228,883, in contrast to 3,776,240 in the preceding corresponding period. It was reported that in the eastern belt not a little unhedged cotton was finding its way to the market. According to local comment, the pressure of those hedges was a temporary market influence.

The local spot market was steady, 10 points net lower at 18 cents flat. The New Orleans market was net units sales were 919 bales. Delivery changed at 16.63 cents for middling, on contract in the local market was 200 bales.
