Select Reading. Use Plain Words. Little boys sometimes put on their fathers' boots or their big brothers' clothes, and act as though that had made them larger and more important; but nobody is deceived, and they are only laughed at. Young writers and speakers should remember this when clothing their thoughts with language. Never try to find large or high sounding words. They are not natural, they will be awkwardly used, will often show mis-fits, and expose the author to ridicule. An ambitious young student, in writing his composition, thus attempted to describe a very dark night; "tenebrious gloom obscured the darkening shade." The teacher, on reading it, remarked, "this being translated into plain English, means 'dark darkness darkened the darkening dark'; that is, I suppose, it was very dark." A young lady thus expressed the idea of a fine sunrise; "the royal king of day, clad in glorious golden panoply of dazzling effulgence, flooded the earth with gorgeous brightness." "It is easier to swallow a dictionary than to digest it," remarked the teacher, on reading that outbreak. In all writing, strive to express the thought most clearly. Nobody cares to unwrap a dozen or more coverings to get at a small parcel of candy. If you have a pleasant idea, out with it in as few and plain words as possible, and do not oblige the reader to strip off a pile of waste word wrappers. Use the language in which you think and converse; that will be entirely natural. In time you may learn to make it elegant. Strive for excellent thoughts, and to express them clearly; they will be valuable even in the homeliest words, just as a beautiful face is attractive in the plainest garb. THE French papers announce the death of two noted personages—the oldest prisoner and the oldest executioner in France. The former individual was eighty-four years of age, forty-five of which he had passed in prison walls. He opened his career in 1815, by personating Marshal Breme, of whom he was the valet, and reviewing the French troops at Valenciennes. Railroads and telegraphs not then being in existence, the imposture was not discovered until the imposter had received the homage of the whole city. Six years ago, when seventy-eight years of age, this hardened sinner managed to get possession of a large sum of money and a horse and carriage belonging to a commercial traveler, but was caught and committed to prison, saying as he entered, that he had finally retired from business. His conduct during his various sequestrations from a more extensive and social existence was most exemplary, and he was always on the best of terms with the jailors and their assistants. The deceased executioner, in his later years, evidenced the fireside of his grandchildren by boastful accounts of the part he took in the scenes of the Revolution, and especially delighted to dwell upon the latter days of Robespierre, as during that time he was assistant executioner at Paris, and claims to have aided the chief headman in guillotining Robespierre himself. SOME of the Bohemian letter writers give us this story of Longfellow: "He was staying a few years ago at Newport, shut up in seclusion, deeply intent upon the production of some poetical work. A man demanded admittance, but was refused by the servant. He was importunate, and Longfellow was consulted, and admittance again denied. At last the man broke through all obstructions, and burst into the poet's study. Said he, heedless of the poet's frown, 'Mr. Longfellow, you must excuse my interruption, but I have business that is of more importance to you even than me, and I have come down from Boston on purpose to see you. You know them English blacking fellows, Warren, and then others kept a poet, and their blacking went off because of their verses. Now, I'm in the blacking business, and I thought that if we were to go partners, you could make the rhymes and I the blacking, and we could divide and make a good thing out of it.' 'Put him out! put him out!' shouted Longfellow, in an excess of indignation; and the indiscreet blacking maker left the room with greater speed than he had anticipated for sale of his blacking." TALENT AND TACT.—Talent is something, but tact is everything. Talent is serious, sober, grave and respectable; tact is all that, and more too. It is not a seventh sense, but it is the life of all the five. It is the open eye, the quick ear, the judging taste, the keen smell and the lively touch; it is the interpreter of all riddles—the surmounter of all difficulties—the remover of all obstacles. It is useful in all places and at all times; it is useful in solitude, for it shows a man his way into the world; it is useful in society, for it shows him his way through the world. Talent is power—tact is skill; talent does what it can—tact knows how to do it; talent makes a man respectable—tact will make him respected; talent is wealth—tact is ready money. For all the practical purposes of life, tact carries it against talent—ten to one. NEEDLES were first made in London by a negro, from Spain, in the reign of Queen Mary. He died without imparting the secret of his art. The art was recovered in 1565, Elias Groves first taught the English to make needles, but the art was again lost for nearly a century, when it was again recovered by Christopher Greening, who settled at Long Crndon, in Buckinghamshire.

Miscellaneous. HORSES THAT OVERREACH. A western correspondent of the Prairie Farmer gives the following rule for shoeing horses that overreach: Make the forward shoes long, and the toe-calks short and standing a little under, and set them as far back as convenient, in order to let the feet roll over as soon as possible, to get out of the way. And in setting the shoes on the hind feet, reverse the order to keep them back, to give time for the forward feet to get out of the way. Make the toe-calks high, and the hoof calks low, to keep the feet back, then he will travel like other horses. This may be remedied in part in the mode of paring the hoof. This is essential in all cases, and where too many horses have been made cripples. Great pains should be taken at all times in shoeing horses. CAN ANY ONE TELL.—Can any one tell why men who cannot pay to buy liquor, can always find money to buy liquor, and treat when happening among their friends? Can any one tell how young men who dodge their washerwoman and are always behind with their landlord, can play billiards night and day, and are always ready for a game of poker or seven-up? Can any one tell how men live and support their families who have no income and do not work, while others who are industrious and constantly employed, half starve? Can any one tell how it is that a man who is too poor to pay for a newspaper, is able to pay a dollar or two a week for tobacco, whisky or cigars? TO THE POINT.—An editor who seems to have lost his temper, gets off the following well merited hit: "Those fellows who don't take their home paper, watch them! they are always on the alert on publication day, and when the paper comes around to your place of business, are the first to snatch it up; falling in, they read it over your shoulders, too impatient to demean themselves in a respectable manner. Stop these fellows. They are a small souled, stingy handful, who go through the world on other folks' money." We have many of the same kind in this "intelligent" community. COOL FOR THE SEASON.—A verdant couple were married in Shepherdstown, West Virginia, a few days ago. The Register says that when all things were in readiness, the couple on the floor, the preacher proceeded with his work, asking the groom if he would take this woman to be his wedded wife; and before anything more was said by the preacher, the happy groom exclaimed, "I will, in the cool!" The question was then asked the blushing bride if she would take this man to be her wedded husband, to which she instantly answered, "You bet I will!" A MAN in a blouse once said, "I have no more influence than a farthing rushlight." "Well," was the reply, "a farthing rushlight can do a good deal; it can set a hay-stack on fire; it can burn down a house; yea, more, it will enable a poor creature to read a chapter in God's book. Go your way, my friend; let your farthing rushlight so shine before men that others, seeing your good works, may glorify your Father which is in Heaven." EDITORIAL COURTESY.—The editor of the Foxtown Fusilier is a generous fellow. In his last number he says:—"Postscript—We stop the press with pleasure to announce the decease of our cotemporary, Mr. Snaggs, editor of the Foxtown Flash. He is now gone to another and better world. Persons who have taken the Flash will find the Fusilier a good paper." A MAN inquired at the post-office in Erie, New York, the other day, for a letter for Ery Hogden. He was told there was none. "Look ere," he replied, a little angrily, "you've hexamined a hod letter for my name. Hit don't commence with ha haich! Hit begins with ha ho! Look in the ole that's got the ho!" "NOBBY" French and English young gentlemen sometimes use pin-cers to take off their clothing, which is so tight-fitting that it cannot be otherwise removed when wet. It takes three editors to start a paper in New Orleans—one to get killed in a duel—one to die with the yellow fever, and one to write an obituary of the defunct two. THE only true way to health is that which common sense dictates to man. Live within bounds of reason. Eat moderately, drink temperately, sleep regularly, avoid excess in anything, and preserve a conscience "void of offense." JOSH BILLINGS says, that a good way for a man to bring up a child in the way it should go was to travel that way occasionally himself. BONNER is erecting a magnificent marble building on William street, New York, costing $250,000. It is for a publishing house. A COQUETTE is a rose from which every lover plucks a leaf—the thorn remaining for her future husband. PUNCH says it is dreadful to hear of a child only one month old, taking to the bottle. THE editor of a paper in Indiana wants to know if Western whisky was ever seen "coming through the eye." THERE are eight papers in the United States edited by colored men. It has been the misfortune of many to live too long.
