COTTON FUTURES NEAR 27C. A POUND

High Record Prices for Year, as Buying Is Based on Bullish Statistics.

A renewal of the buying movement that characterized pre-Christmas dealings on the New York Cotton Exchange carried prices yesterday to new high records for the year. Quotations were boosted 35 to 63 points over Friday's final bids, and at the close showed virtually all their gains. Faced by the traditional decline in January operators added to their long commitments. Considerable profit taking was encountered on the way up but made no impression on values.

The influence of the Liverpool market was lacking, as that exchange remained closed. Shorts, however, were uneasy, fearing some sort of sensational advance in the English market to-day. On the whole, business was unusually active for a session just after Christmas. There were times when the ring presented an animated spectacle, with numerous interests bidding vigorously for contracts. The trade took a fair volume of cotton in the afternoon, the January position, which rose 63 points to 26.59 cents, reflecting this more than any of the other options.

Advices from dry goods markets and spot centers continued in the same bullish strain. Various points in the South reported a big demand for the actual for export shipment after the first of the year. Holders were reported offering little. Domestic cloth and yarn markets were strong. It was said that many mills refused to sell ahead except at higher levels than quoted. Sentiment in most quarters of the trade was predominantly bullish, the strength of yesterday's market being regarded as quite natural and a reflection of the bullish statistical position.

The local spot market was quoted 60 points higher at 26.80 cents a pound for middling. Delivery on local contract was 1,800 bales. The New Orleans market was 25 points higher at 26.25 cents. Its sales were 641 bales.
