

TOLSTOI WILL RESIGN.
His Projects for the Reform of Local Government.
St. Petersburg, Jan. 23.—Count Tolstoy's project for the reform of the local government being opposed by a majority of the Council of the Empire, he offers to resign. The czar, however, who does not consider the opinion of the Council final, has instructed Tolstoy to await his personal decision. The withdrawal of Count Tolstoy would leave M. Pobiedonostzoff supreme in the councils of the czar and augment the strength of the Pan-Slavists.
Slander reports that come from Bulgaria keep the Government on the alert for developments. Prince Ferdinand's activities in the question of the Jews. The orthodox bishops are preparing to denounce him as an oppressor of the faith. The Grahdanin says that the Jesuits, under the shelter of the Prince, are conducting an active propaganda among the peasantry, promising them various privileges that are not accorded to the orthodox. The Slavonic Society sends daily telegrams, directing the movement against Prince Ferdinand.
The bishops are confident of ousting the Prince. They will be taken with Ferdinand abdicates to prevent the return of Alexander without the assent of the czar.
A ukase has been issued applying the law of March 30, 1887, relating to foreigners engaged in the mining industry to Poland. Foreigners must not prospect for minerals beyond their own property. Persons or companies that obtained rights prior to 1887 in the districts assigned to them retain such rights. The ukase aims to check German and other foreign speculation in Polish mines. Henceforth new mines must be worked and owned by Russians.

STORIES OF FEARFUL CRIMES.
Tales Told by Sailors of Deeds in Spanish Town.
The crews of the various steamers plying between this city and Kingston, Jamaica, are telling fearful stories of crimes committed in Spanish Town, a village near Kingston.
The first of a series of diabolical and mysterious murders took place, so the sailors say, November 23, 1888, in St. Catharine's parish, a few miles distant from Spanish Town. The victim was a negro of the lowest and most vicious class, whose name has never been discovered.
She was found early in the morning lying in a fence corner by the roadside, her throat cut, her eyes closed, her cheeks, nose and forehead slashed in a manner that would indicate it to be the work of a skillful butcher. Her clothing had, as in the case of nearly all the Whitechapel murders, been thrown over her head, and the little crowd which had gathered there upon the discovery of the body were horrified to see that it had been mutilated exactly as had been done in London cases.
If anything further had been needed to make the horror-stricken crowd attribute the crime to the Whitechapel fiend, it was found on a card pinned to the unfortunate woman's body by the blade of a small penknife. The card bore this inscription:
"Jack the Ripper. Fourteen more, then I quit."
Of course, a diligent search was made for the murderer, but he was not found.
On the morning of December 13, in a field, lying by and partially concealed under an old shed was found a second body. In this case the woman was a notorious creature of the lowest class—a negro called "Mag." Her wounds were of the same nature as those inflicted upon the other. The authorities made a hurried investigation and buried the body as speedily as possible, giving no one an opportunity to examine it.
No mention of the crime was made in the newspapers at the time, the officials endeavoring by every means in their power to hush the matter up and have it talked about as little as possible. No trace was ever found of the murderer, and it was forgotten, save by a few of the wretched women who belong to that class among which the unfortunates moved.
The third body was found on the Friday before New Year's Day. This time the newspapers were compelled to notice the discovery. The scene of this third murder was about midway between the places where the former discoveries had been made, and the sailors insist that the crime was in every way analogous to the other.
There are comparatively few women of this class about Kingston or Spanish Town, but those who do live there are in a state of abject terror. The murderer has eluded the authorities, and the sailors expect to learn of further atrocities on their return.—[N. Y. Sun.]

A MINE THAT CAN'T BE WORKED.
$300,000,000 Worth of Metal Lies in Philadelphia.
The ground on which Philadelphia is built is one of the richest gold fields in the world. This is a fact. The only difficulty is that the field cannot be worked. Nearly the whole city is underlaid with clay to the depth of about 100 feet—an area say ten miles square.
A cubic foot of clay, weighing 120 pounds, taken from a depth of 14 feet, when the cellar of the Twelfth-street Market House was excavated, was practically demonstrated to contain seven-tenths of a grain of gold, or one pound in 1,240,000.
The experiment was repeated with about the same results with clay taken from a brick yard in the suburbs. Supposing the whole mass of clay to be $180,000,000 worth (and it is a great deal more), the amount of gold would reach in value the enormous sum of $126,000,000.
The gravel is much richer in gold than the clay, but there is not so much of it. Undoubtedly $300,000,000 worth of gold lies within fifteen feet of the surface, and still it cannot be used.—[Philadelphia Times.]

BOULANGIST UNREST.
They are Looking Forward With Anxiety to Sunday.
PARIS, Jan. 23.—Boulangists are showing great energy all along the line. Boulanger will not have himself to blame if he does not head the poll next Sunday. During this week he will keep his house open to all comers, the reception lasting from 7 a. m. to 7 p. m. Yesterday and the day before the General was called upon by a constant stream of uniformed officers of the territorial army, who had come to Paris to attend the military ball. The scene resembled an army demonstration in favor of the General. Royalists are still divided on the question of abstaining from voting. General Antonin Roy, who was lately returned for Somme on the Boulangist ticket, was welcomed in the Chamber of Deputies to-day by Admiral d'Hornoy in an address in which Boulanger was not alluded to. On the other hand, Imperator's secretary, the late Minister of War, M. Barill, denounced abstention as effacement of the party and invokes the aid of every conservative Imperialist.
The language of the press was warm. The National asserts that the death of Boulanger was a martyr, that the executed murderer, Campi, was the General's brother, and that the man murdered, who was named Ducrot, was a business partner of Boulanger here. The squabbles of the general's domestic life, and the intrigues and quarrels, are also detailed.
The Boulangists respond by harping upon the charge that the Government is employing the secret service fund in the interests of M. Jacques. Meanwhile the inactivity of M. Jacques annoys his supporters, who are now even now another candidate. The betting on the Bourne varies daily. To-day the calculators gave Boulanger 215,000 votes against 170,000, and odds were laid against the Republican candidate. The members of the municipal council, who are almost unanimously against Boulanger, is the leading factor in making his success doubtful.

A CRISIS IN AUSTRIA.
The Reichsrath Will Open on January 30th.
VIENNA, Jan. 23.—The opening of the Reichsrath on the 30th instant will be the beginning of a critical period for Count Von Taaffe's ministry. A number of the Government's supporters, notably the Polish members, will insist upon legislative reforms, the consideration of which was postponed during the settling of the army and imperial taxation questions. During the past ten years officers of the government majority of the most composite character has been kept together by incessant appeals to unite on great imperial questions.
This line is played out and there are signs of a general disintegration. Among the liberal and conservative members of the Reichsrath, measures of criminal and civil procedure and industrial taxation and amendments of the agrarian laws. The ministerialists, who have been disinclined to introduce measures which might lead to new groupings, have now warned that the cabinet must venture or see its majority break up through sheer discontent.
The old Czech party's report boasts an extension of influence through moderation in demands and moderation in language. The organs of the German Liberal press see nothing in the report except a declaration of opportunism, and predict that the old Czechs will soon be forced into the active policy of the young Czechs, implying the restoration of Bohemia to the position of a kingdom, upon the same status as that of Hungary. Herr Baquehem will introduce in the Reichsrath a bill levying a small duty upon imported or exported goods in transit through Austria.

VOIGHT THE EMBEZZLER.
A Hearing of His Case Postponed Until Saturday.
PITTSBURG, Pa., Jan. 23.—A hearing of the case of Cashier Henry Voight of the Farmers and Mechanics Bank, who is charged with embezzling the funds of that institution, was to have been held yesterday, but it was postponed until next Saturday. In the meantime it is stated a number of other arrests will be made. Since the arrest of Voight a check for $40,000 drawn upon the bank in the name of William Voight and endorsed by his brother, the cashier, has been discovered in one of the secret holes of the safe.
No trace of the check has been found on the books and its recovery may throw some light on the affairs of the bank. The brother is absent and his relatives do not know where he is or when he will return. It is stated that the assets of the bank will not pay more than seventy-five per cent. of the liabilities.

Profound Chicago Opinions on a Question of Much Moment.
I have been at some pains, said the Chicago Mail man, to get the opinions of the managers on Miss Lillian Russell's suit in New York.
Said Horace McVicker: "The mere fact that Miss Russell won't wear tights is no reason for breaking off contracts. They looked to me as if they were going to be broken off, but I don't think they will be. People do not come to the theatre any more to look at tights, but to see good playing and hear good singing. The stage has reformed since your grandmother died."

A Rather Noisy Worshipper.
There was more trouble in the Fifth Baptist Church, colored, last night, during which one of the worshippers became rather noisy and was ordered out. Brother Robinson did not object, and minor dared him to come outside and put him in a great deal of trouble. The exhibition of bravery was his appearance in the Police Court this morning, where his personal bonds were taken.

A SKULL HEAVIER THAN GOLD.
Our forefathers have told us, gentlemen, said the Afghan chief, that when the great Sultan Secundur Rumi (Alexander the Great), reigned over all kingdoms he and his warriors, as they marched through these mountains, came suddenly upon a clear river, the sweetness of whose waters was such that they all wandered at it, having never tasted the like before.
The mountain shepherd told them that this river was no earthly water, but flowed from the garden of paradise, and that no man could find the way thither, for Allah had hidden it forever from the eyes of men behind the snows of the eternal mountains.
But when the great sultan heard that he was angry, and vowed that he would find that hidden paradise, and never stop seeking it till he died. So he picked out a chosen band of warriors from his army, and with them he set forth.
But evil followed his steps, and it went ill with him and with his men. Very few and weary were they who stood by Secundur's side when he came at length to the source of that strange river, and they saw that it flowed from beneath a vast golden gate, which stood between two mighty rocks.
Then Secundur knew that this could be nothing else than the gate of paradise, and he went boldly up to it and beat upon it with the hilt of his sword.
Then there came a voice from within the gate—a voice mighty as thunder, yet sweet as the softest music—and it said: "Whoever thou art, there is no entrance for thee here; this is the gate of the Lord."
"I am the lord of the whole earth," answered Secundur, proudly; "what lord is greater than I?"
"The Lord of heaven," replied the voice. "Begone, for thou canst not enter here."
Then was Sultan Secundur exceedingly angry. At length he said: "If I may not enter, give me at least some token to show to my people."
Then there came a sound like the low laughter of an infant multitude, and suddenly a small packet was cast forth, which fell at Secundur's feet.
"Here is thy token, madman," said the voice; "it will teach thee wisdom if thou canst be taught."
And Secundur took up the packet, but he staid not to open it, for a great fear fell upon him, and he hastened to leave that place of death. And so he journeyed for many days, till at last he got back to his army.
Then at last he bethought himself of the packet, and made haste to open it; but lo! there was nothing within save a piece of human skull, and Secundur, thinking that he was mocked, flung it upon the ground in a rage.
But a certain wise man stepped forward and said: "Despise not this gift, oh king, for although it may seem worthless, yet it will outweigh much gold. Bid thy people bring a pair of scales, and fill one of them with gold, and put this skull in the other."
Then Secundur commanded that it should be done as the sage had said, and immediately the scale which held the gold flew aloft as if it had been empty, while that which held the skull sunk well-nigh to the ground. More gold was added, and more, and yet more, but the larger grew the heap of gold, the higher rose the scale, and the lower sunk that which held the skull.
"Amazing!" cried Secundur. "Who would ever have believed that this small piece of bone could outweigh such a mass of solid gold?"
"Wonderest thou, oh king," cried the sage. "Thou shalt see a greater marvel than this."
And scooping up a handful of dust, he covered the skull with it, and instantly the scale flew up, while that which held the skull sunk down.
"What means this wonder?" cried the sultan.
"Know, then, oh king," answered the wise man, "that this skull once held an eye man, that this skull once held an eye which coveted all it saw, and the more gold it had the more it craved, for its desires were boundless as thine own. But when once it was laid in the grave and covered for breach of contract, the treasures of the earth were nothing to it. Such is the lesson, oh king, which this gift was meant to teach thee."

"Well, I was saved at the eleventh hour from the commission of a deed which I shudder to think of. A friend advised me to take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. I did so. In an incredibly short time I felt like a new being. The 'Prescription' cured me, and I owe Dr. Pierce a debt of gratitude which I can never repay."
