

HE IS HERE.

Arrival of the President-Elect at the Capital.

THE SCENE AT THE STATION WHEN THE TRAIN CAME IN.

Disembarkation of the Party--The Trip to the Hotel--Street Scenes--Story of the Journey From Indianapolis to Washington.

President-Elect Harrison arrived in Washington at 2:38 this afternoon. The train instead of coming into the Sixth-Street Station, as was expected, ran across Sixth street and stopped at Ninth street and Maryland avenue southwest...

The train was some twelve minutes later than was expected, and instead of turning up Sixth street to the depot, crossed it and did not stop till the corner of Ninth street was reached.

There were about 300 persons who, by special favor, had been given the privilege of going within the railing to the tracks, but the great crowd of the outside platform...

As the train pulled into the station it was welcomed by thousands of huzzas, and a rush was made by those on the tracks for General Harrison's car, which was on the rear of the train.

THE TRIP FROM INDIANAPOLIS. As stated in yesterday's issue, General Harrison and party left Indianapolis for Washington yesterday afternoon at 3:15. He was given a grand send-off, the whole city apparently turning out to wish him "farewell."

The crowd on the outside could stand exclusion no longer. Hundreds of them clamored for the engines, others carried the crowd and many before them and forced entrance by the gates, until 2,000 people swarmed and crushed on the tracks.

AT THE STATION. The car was followed by the people inside, many clamoring up the brake handles and making a shabby bank with General Harrison, who, with his wife and daughter, Mrs. McKee, stood on the platform.

AT THE STATION. The car was followed by the people inside, many clamoring up the brake handles and making a shabby bank with General Harrison, who, with his wife and daughter, Mrs. McKee, stood on the platform.

AT THE STATION. The car was followed by the people inside, many clamoring up the brake handles and making a shabby bank with General Harrison, who, with his wife and daughter, Mrs. McKee, stood on the platform.

AT THE STATION. The car was followed by the people inside, many clamoring up the brake handles and making a shabby bank with General Harrison, who, with his wife and daughter, Mrs. McKee, stood on the platform.

AT THE STATION. The car was followed by the people inside, many clamoring up the brake handles and making a shabby bank with General Harrison, who, with his wife and daughter, Mrs. McKee, stood on the platform.

AT THE STATION. The car was followed by the people inside, many clamoring up the brake handles and making a shabby bank with General Harrison, who, with his wife and daughter, Mrs. McKee, stood on the platform.

AT THE STATION. The car was followed by the people inside, many clamoring up the brake handles and making a shabby bank with General Harrison, who, with his wife and daughter, Mrs. McKee, stood on the platform.

AT THE STATION. The car was followed by the people inside, many clamoring up the brake handles and making a shabby bank with General Harrison, who, with his wife and daughter, Mrs. McKee, stood on the platform.

AT THE STATION. The car was followed by the people inside, many clamoring up the brake handles and making a shabby bank with General Harrison, who, with his wife and daughter, Mrs. McKee, stood on the platform.

AT THE STATION. The car was followed by the people inside, many clamoring up the brake handles and making a shabby bank with General Harrison, who, with his wife and daughter, Mrs. McKee, stood on the platform.

AT THE STATION. The car was followed by the people inside, many clamoring up the brake handles and making a shabby bank with General Harrison, who, with his wife and daughter, Mrs. McKee, stood on the platform.

of his family stepped out on the platform of the car and were photographed in a group. After leaving Bridgeport the representative of the United Press inquired of the President-elect how he liked the trip.

The General has spent all of his time in his private car, and when not reading or being otherwise engaged has devoted his self to his grand-children, who, Mrs. Harrison says, are "having a great time."

The train from Bridgeport to Newark was without incident. But one stop will be made between Bridgeport and Baltimore, and that will be at the cooling station.

A BIG RECEPTION AT YORK. BALTIMORE, Feb. 25.—At York there were about 2,000 persons on the depot platform and as many more scattered along on either side of the track.

After leaving the last named station the President-elect visited the outside platform, but the crowd of the outside platform was so dense that the distinguished traveler took his place on the rear platform and bowed acknowledgments of the enthusiastic welcome of which he was the recipient.

General Harrison's special train arrived at Union Station at 1:15 p. m. About 7,000 people were on hand, including many negroes, and it may be safely asserted that the President-elect, during his trip from home to the National Capital, received no more kindly greeting and hearty welcome than was accorded him in Democratic Baltimore.

There were about 300 persons who, by special favor, had been given the privilege of going within the railing to the tracks, but the great crowd of the outside platform...

As the train pulled into the station it was welcomed by thousands of huzzas, and a rush was made by those on the tracks for General Harrison's car, which was on the rear of the train.

THE TRIP FROM INDIANAPOLIS. As stated in yesterday's issue, General Harrison and party left Indianapolis for Washington yesterday afternoon at 3:15. He was given a grand send-off, the whole city apparently turning out to wish him "farewell."

The crowd on the outside could stand exclusion no longer. Hundreds of them clamored for the engines, others carried the crowd and many before them and forced entrance by the gates, until 2,000 people swarmed and crushed on the tracks.

AT THE STATION. The car was followed by the people inside, many clamoring up the brake handles and making a shabby bank with General Harrison, who, with his wife and daughter, Mrs. McKee, stood on the platform.

AT THE STATION. The car was followed by the people inside, many clamoring up the brake handles and making a shabby bank with General Harrison, who, with his wife and daughter, Mrs. McKee, stood on the platform.

AT THE STATION. The car was followed by the people inside, many clamoring up the brake handles and making a shabby bank with General Harrison, who, with his wife and daughter, Mrs. McKee, stood on the platform.

AT THE STATION. The car was followed by the people inside, many clamoring up the brake handles and making a shabby bank with General Harrison, who, with his wife and daughter, Mrs. McKee, stood on the platform.

AT THE STATION. The car was followed by the people inside, many clamoring up the brake handles and making a shabby bank with General Harrison, who, with his wife and daughter, Mrs. McKee, stood on the platform.

AT THE STATION. The car was followed by the people inside, many clamoring up the brake handles and making a shabby bank with General Harrison, who, with his wife and daughter, Mrs. McKee, stood on the platform.

AT THE STATION. The car was followed by the people inside, many clamoring up the brake handles and making a shabby bank with General Harrison, who, with his wife and daughter, Mrs. McKee, stood on the platform.

AT THE STATION. The car was followed by the people inside, many clamoring up the brake handles and making a shabby bank with General Harrison, who, with his wife and daughter, Mrs. McKee, stood on the platform.

AT THE STATION. The car was followed by the people inside, many clamoring up the brake handles and making a shabby bank with General Harrison, who, with his wife and daughter, Mrs. McKee, stood on the platform.

AT THE STATION. The car was followed by the people inside, many clamoring up the brake handles and making a shabby bank with General Harrison, who, with his wife and daughter, Mrs. McKee, stood on the platform.

AT THE STATION. The car was followed by the people inside, many clamoring up the brake handles and making a shabby bank with General Harrison, who, with his wife and daughter, Mrs. McKee, stood on the platform.

was not a great deal of a crowd, and what there was of the letter class of people, not so hard to hold in check as the rabble is.

The carriages for the distinguished party arrived about the same time the police did and stood about on the cobblestones in a demonstrative way until the train arrived and the President-elect and his party entered their hotel.

The space between the waiting-rooms and the high fence separating the public from the trains was densely crowded with a good-natured throng, in which were scores of ladies, who stood peering anxiously between the railings for half an hour before the train announced for the arrival of the train.

There were the newspaper correspondents and numerous visitors already in town awaiting Inauguration Day, and there was, apparently, little more than a sprinkling of Washingtonians present.

When at last it was generally understood that the train was right, the locomotive, crossing and funneling in the distance, halted the train which bore the distinguished party, there was a sudden closing together of the multitude, and those nearest the railing counted themselves fortunate.

As the hour when the Indianapolis train was expected to arrive approached a little crowd began to gather outside the gates at the depot. There were probably 250 people there when the train arrived and a large part of the crowd was of ladies.

The first and second sections of No. 43 brought lots of people, and many of those in the crowd outside the gates were their friends. The little crowd was in a fever of uncertainty about where the new President and his party would disembark.

AT THE ARLINGTON. There was a larger crowd than usual in and about the Arlington Hotel this afternoon. They thronged the corridors and stood on the pavement in front of the house waiting impatiently for the arrival of the President-elect.

A woman, who was evidently not long free from an insane asylum, walked into Commissioner Webb's office to-day and demanded to be shown to a private office. She said she was afraid of public places and that she had many ladies right to compel them to wait for the Commissioners while they were holding a board meeting.

THE NEW SENATE. President Cleveland will call a special session of the Senate to convene at 12 o'clock, March 4, immediately upon the termination of the Fifty-third Congress.

A Description of the Special Which Brought Him to Washington. The Presidential train which arrived at the B. and O. Station this afternoon is composed of the engine and four cars.

AT THE STATION. The car was followed by the people inside, many clamoring up the brake handles and making a shabby bank with General Harrison, who, with his wife and daughter, Mrs. McKee, stood on the platform.

AT THE STATION. The car was followed by the people inside, many clamoring up the brake handles and making a shabby bank with General Harrison, who, with his wife and daughter, Mrs. McKee, stood on the platform.

AT THE STATION. The car was followed by the people inside, many clamoring up the brake handles and making a shabby bank with General Harrison, who, with his wife and daughter, Mrs. McKee, stood on the platform.

AT THE STATION. The car was followed by the people inside, many clamoring up the brake handles and making a shabby bank with General Harrison, who, with his wife and daughter, Mrs. McKee, stood on the platform.

AT THE STATION. The car was followed by the people inside, many clamoring up the brake handles and making a shabby bank with General Harrison, who, with his wife and daughter, Mrs. McKee, stood on the platform.

AT THE STATION. The car was followed by the people inside, many clamoring up the brake handles and making a shabby bank with General Harrison, who, with his wife and daughter, Mrs. McKee, stood on the platform.

AT THE STATION. The car was followed by the people inside, many clamoring up the brake handles and making a shabby bank with General Harrison, who, with his wife and daughter, Mrs. McKee, stood on the platform.

AT THE STATION. The car was followed by the people inside, many clamoring up the brake handles and making a shabby bank with General Harrison, who, with his wife and daughter, Mrs. McKee, stood on the platform.

AT THE STATION. The car was followed by the people inside, many clamoring up the brake handles and making a shabby bank with General Harrison, who, with his wife and daughter, Mrs. McKee, stood on the platform.

AT THE STATION. The car was followed by the people inside, many clamoring up the brake handles and making a shabby bank with General Harrison, who, with his wife and daughter, Mrs. McKee, stood on the platform.

THE AQUEDUCT. The long-looked-for Report Submitted To-day. The long-looked-for report of the Joint Congressional Committee on Aqueduct was presented to the Senate by Senator Edmunds, the chairman of the committee, shortly after 2 o'clock this afternoon.

The report is voluminous, and is accompanied by testimony and the report of the committee of experts, which, under direction of the committee, made an investigation of the condition of the tunnel, the committee says that Colonel Casey, who is in charge of the aqueduct, estimated the cost of the aqueduct at $2,447,000.

There were the newspaper correspondents and numerous visitors already in town awaiting Inauguration Day, and there was, apparently, little more than a sprinkling of Washingtonians present.

When at last it was generally understood that the train was right, the locomotive, crossing and funneling in the distance, halted the train which bore the distinguished party, there was a sudden closing together of the multitude, and those nearest the railing counted themselves fortunate.

As the hour when the Indianapolis train was expected to arrive approached a little crowd began to gather outside the gates at the depot. There were probably 250 people there when the train arrived and a large part of the crowd was of ladies.

The first and second sections of No. 43 brought lots of people, and many of those in the crowd outside the gates were their friends. The little crowd was in a fever of uncertainty about where the new President and his party would disembark.

AT THE ARLINGTON. There was a larger crowd than usual in and about the Arlington Hotel this afternoon. They thronged the corridors and stood on the pavement in front of the house waiting impatiently for the arrival of the President-elect.

A woman, who was evidently not long free from an insane asylum, walked into Commissioner Webb's office to-day and demanded to be shown to a private office. She said she was afraid of public places and that she had many ladies right to compel them to wait for the Commissioners while they were holding a board meeting.

THE NEW SENATE. President Cleveland will call a special session of the Senate to convene at 12 o'clock, March 4, immediately upon the termination of the Fifty-third Congress.

A Description of the Special Which Brought Him to Washington. The Presidential train which arrived at the B. and O. Station this afternoon is composed of the engine and four cars.

AT THE STATION. The car was followed by the people inside, many clamoring up the brake handles and making a shabby bank with General Harrison, who, with his wife and daughter, Mrs. McKee, stood on the platform.

AT THE STATION. The car was followed by the people inside, many clamoring up the brake handles and making a shabby bank with General Harrison, who, with his wife and daughter, Mrs. McKee, stood on the platform.

AT THE STATION. The car was followed by the people inside, many clamoring up the brake handles and making a shabby bank with General Harrison, who, with his wife and daughter, Mrs. McKee, stood on the platform.

AT THE STATION. The car was followed by the people inside, many clamoring up the brake handles and making a shabby bank with General Harrison, who, with his wife and daughter, Mrs. McKee, stood on the platform.

AT THE STATION. The car was followed by the people inside, many clamoring up the brake handles and making a shabby bank with General Harrison, who, with his wife and daughter, Mrs. McKee, stood on the platform.

AT THE STATION. The car was followed by the people inside, many clamoring up the brake handles and making a shabby bank with General Harrison, who, with his wife and daughter, Mrs. McKee, stood on the platform.

AT THE STATION. The car was followed by the people inside, many clamoring up the brake handles and making a shabby bank with General Harrison, who, with his wife and daughter, Mrs. McKee, stood on the platform.

AT THE STATION. The car was followed by the people inside, many clamoring up the brake handles and making a shabby bank with General Harrison, who, with his wife and daughter, Mrs. McKee, stood on the platform.

AT THE STATION. The car was followed by the people inside, many clamoring up the brake handles and making a shabby bank with General Harrison, who, with his wife and daughter, Mrs. McKee, stood on the platform.

AT THE STATION. The car was followed by the people inside, many clamoring up the brake handles and making a shabby bank with General Harrison, who, with his wife and daughter, Mrs. McKee, stood on the platform.

AT THE STATION. The car was followed by the people inside, many clamoring up the brake handles and making a shabby bank with General Harrison, who, with his wife and daughter, Mrs. McKee, stood on the platform.

CONGRESS TO-DAY. BUSINESS IN THE HOUSE AGAIN BLOCKED. Mr. Randall Succeeds in Having the Sundry Civil Bill, with Senate Amendments, Reported--The Senate Continues Its Work on the Sundry Civil Bill--The Constitution Centennial.

In the House this morning at 10 o'clock Mr. Bland, in a somewhat high and effective manner, dropped a check under the wheels of public business in the point of no return, and held matters at a standstill until the hour hand on the big clock had moved up to XI. Then, when by the evolution of time, and by no courtesy of Mr. Bland, the public business was allowed to take a step forward, a conference had been ordered on the Sundry Civil Bill.

There were the newspaper correspondents and numerous visitors already in town awaiting Inauguration Day, and there was, apparently, little more than a sprinkling of Washingtonians present.

When at last it was generally understood that the train was right, the locomotive, crossing and funneling in the distance, halted the train which bore the distinguished party, there was a sudden closing together of the multitude, and those nearest the railing counted themselves fortunate.

As the hour when the Indianapolis train was expected to arrive approached a little crowd began to gather outside the gates at the depot. There were probably 250 people there when the train arrived and a large part of the crowd was of ladies.

The first and second sections of No. 43 brought lots of people, and many of those in the crowd outside the gates were their friends. The little crowd was in a fever of uncertainty about where the new President and his party would disembark.

AT THE ARLINGTON. There was a larger crowd than usual in and about the Arlington Hotel this afternoon. They thronged the corridors and stood on the pavement in front of the house waiting impatiently for the arrival of the President-elect.

A woman, who was evidently not long free from an insane asylum, walked into Commissioner Webb's office to-day and demanded to be shown to a private office. She said she was afraid of public places and that she had many ladies right to compel them to wait for the Commissioners while they were holding a board meeting.

THE NEW SENATE. President Cleveland will call a special session of the Senate to convene at 12 o'clock, March 4, immediately upon the termination of the Fifty-third Congress.

A Description of the Special Which Brought Him to Washington. The Presidential train which arrived at the B. and O. Station this afternoon is composed of the engine and four cars.

AT THE STATION. The car was followed by the people inside, many clamoring up the brake handles and making a shabby bank with General Harrison, who, with his wife and daughter, Mrs. McKee, stood on the platform.

AT THE STATION. The car was followed by the people inside, many clamoring up the brake handles and making a shabby bank with General Harrison, who, with his wife and daughter, Mrs. McKee, stood on the platform.

AT THE STATION. The car was followed by the people inside, many clamoring up the brake handles and making a shabby bank with General Harrison, who, with his wife and daughter, Mrs. McKee, stood on the platform.

AT THE STATION. The car was followed by the people inside, many clamoring up the brake handles and making a shabby bank with General Harrison, who, with his wife and daughter, Mrs. McKee, stood on the platform.

AT THE STATION. The car was followed by the people inside, many clamoring up the brake handles and making a shabby bank with General Harrison, who, with his wife and daughter, Mrs. McKee, stood on the platform.

AT THE STATION. The car was followed by the people inside, many clamoring up the brake handles and making a shabby bank with General Harrison, who, with his wife and daughter, Mrs. McKee, stood on the platform.

AT THE STATION. The car was followed by the people inside, many clamoring up the brake handles and making a shabby bank with General Harrison, who, with his wife and daughter, Mrs. McKee, stood on the platform.

AT THE STATION. The car was followed by the people inside, many clamoring up the brake handles and making a shabby bank with General Harrison, who, with his wife and daughter, Mrs. McKee, stood on the platform.

AT THE STATION. The car was followed by the people inside, many clamoring up the brake handles and making a shabby bank with General Harrison, who, with his wife and daughter, Mrs. McKee, stood on the platform.

AT THE STATION. The car was followed by the people inside, many clamoring up the brake handles and making a shabby bank with General Harrison, who, with his wife and daughter, Mrs. McKee, stood on the platform.

AT THE STATION. The car was followed by the people inside, many clamoring up the brake handles and making a shabby bank with General Harrison, who, with his wife and daughter, Mrs. McKee, stood on the platform.

PAINTERS AND DECORATORS. The Fifth Annual Convention in Session at Edin's Hall. It was just 10 o'clock when the zephyr of President McCarty fell sharply on his desk at Edin's Hall this morning and the fifth annual convention of the Master Painters and Decorators' Association was declared convened. The hall was comfortably filled with about 300 delegates and their friends.

There were the newspaper correspondents and numerous visitors already in town awaiting Inauguration Day, and there was, apparently, little more than a sprinkling of Washingtonians present.

When at last it was generally understood that the train was right, the locomotive, crossing and funneling in the distance, halted the train which bore the distinguished party, there was a sudden closing together of the multitude, and those nearest the railing counted themselves fortunate.

As the hour when the Indianapolis train was expected to arrive approached a little crowd began to gather outside the gates at the depot. There were probably 250 people there when the train arrived and a large part of the crowd was of ladies.

The first and second sections of No. 43 brought lots of people, and many of those in the crowd outside the gates were their friends. The little crowd was in a fever of uncertainty about where the new President and his party would disembark.

AT THE ARLINGTON. There was a larger crowd than usual in and about the Arlington Hotel this afternoon. They thronged the corridors and stood on the pavement in front of the house waiting impatiently for the arrival of the President-elect.

A woman, who was evidently not long free from an insane asylum, walked into Commissioner Webb's office to-day and demanded to be shown to a private office. She said she was afraid of public places and that she had many ladies right to compel them to wait for the Commissioners while they were holding a board meeting.

THE NEW SENATE. President Cleveland will call a special session of the Senate to convene at 12 o'clock, March 4, immediately upon the termination of the Fifty-third Congress.

A Description of the Special Which Brought Him to Washington. The Presidential train which arrived at the B. and O. Station this afternoon is composed of the engine and four cars.

AT THE STATION. The car was followed by the people inside, many clamoring up the brake handles and making a shabby bank with General Harrison, who, with his wife and daughter, Mrs. McKee, stood on the platform.

AT THE STATION. The car was followed by the people inside, many clamoring up the brake handles and making a shabby bank with General Harrison, who, with his wife and daughter, Mrs. McKee, stood on the platform.

AT THE STATION. The car was followed by the people inside, many clamoring up the brake handles and making a shabby bank with General Harrison, who, with his wife and daughter, Mrs. McKee, stood on the platform.

AT THE STATION. The car was followed by the people inside, many clamoring up the brake handles and making a shabby bank with General Harrison, who, with his wife and daughter, Mrs. McKee, stood on the platform.

AT THE STATION. The car was followed by the people inside, many clamoring up the brake handles and making a shabby bank with General Harrison, who, with his wife and daughter, Mrs. McKee, stood on the platform.

AT THE STATION. The car was followed by the people inside, many clamoring up the brake handles and making a shabby bank with General Harrison, who, with his wife and daughter, Mrs. McKee, stood on the platform.

AT THE STATION. The car was followed by the people inside, many clamoring up the brake handles and making a shabby bank with General Harrison, who, with his wife and daughter, Mrs. McKee, stood on the platform.

AT THE STATION. The car was followed by the people inside, many clamoring up the brake handles and making a shabby bank with General Harrison, who, with his wife and daughter, Mrs. McKee, stood on the platform.

AT THE STATION. The car was followed by the people inside, many clamoring up the brake handles and making a shabby bank with General Harrison, who, with his wife and daughter, Mrs. McKee, stood on the platform.

AT THE STATION. The car was followed by the people inside, many clamoring up the brake handles and making a shabby bank with General Harrison, who, with his wife and daughter, Mrs. McKee, stood on the platform.

AT THE STATION. The car was followed by the people inside, many clamoring up the brake handles and making a shabby bank with General Harrison, who, with his wife and daughter, Mrs. McKee, stood on the platform.

AT THE STATION. The car was followed by the people inside, many clamoring up the brake handles and making a shabby bank with General Harrison, who, with his wife and daughter, Mrs. McKee, stood on the platform.

OSCAR WASHINGTON'S DEATH. Albert Dodson Placed on Trial For Murder. District Attorney Hoge and Assistant District Attorney Anson presented the case and T. C. Taylor appeared for the defendant. Mr. Lipscomb stated the case to the jury. Washington was an old man, and on the evening of March 31, 1888, had made several purchases. Dodson was with him and remarked to a companion that if the old man had any money he proposed to get it.

There were the newspaper correspondents and numerous visitors already in town awaiting Inauguration Day, and there was, apparently, little more than a sprinkling of Washingtonians present.

When at last it was generally understood that the train was right, the locomotive, crossing and funneling in the distance, halted the train which bore the distinguished party, there was a sudden closing together of the multitude, and those nearest the railing counted themselves fortunate.

As the hour when the Indianapolis train was expected to arrive approached a little crowd began to gather outside the gates at the depot. There were probably 250 people there when the train arrived and a large part of the crowd was of ladies.

The first and second sections of No. 43 brought lots of people, and many of those in the crowd outside the gates were their friends. The little crowd was in a fever of uncertainty about where the new President and his party would disembark.

AT THE ARLINGTON. There was a larger crowd than usual in and about the Arlington Hotel this afternoon. They thronged the corridors and stood on the pavement in front of the house waiting impatiently for the arrival of the President-elect.

A woman, who was evidently not long free from an insane asylum, walked into Commissioner Webb's office to-day and demanded to be shown to a private office. She said she was afraid of public places and that she had many ladies right to compel them to wait for the Commissioners while they were holding a board meeting.

THE NEW SENATE. President Cleveland will call a special session of the Senate to convene at 12 o'clock, March 4, immediately upon the termination of the Fifty-third Congress.

A Description of the Special Which Brought Him to Washington. The Presidential train which arrived at the B. and O. Station this afternoon is composed of the engine and four cars.

AT THE STATION. The car was followed by the people inside, many clamoring up the brake handles and making a shabby bank with General Harrison, who, with his wife and daughter, Mrs. McKee, stood on the platform.

AT THE STATION. The car was followed by the people inside, many clamoring up the brake handles and making a shabby bank with General Harrison, who, with his wife and daughter, Mrs. McKee, stood on the platform.

AT THE STATION. The car was followed by the people inside, many clamoring up the brake handles and making a shabby bank with General Harrison, who, with his wife and daughter, Mrs. McKee, stood on the platform.

AT THE STATION. The car was followed by the people inside, many clamoring up the brake handles and making a shabby bank with General Harrison, who, with his wife and daughter, Mrs. McKee, stood on the platform.

AT THE STATION. The car was followed by the people inside, many clamoring up the brake handles and making a shabby bank with General Harrison, who, with his wife and daughter, Mrs. McKee, stood on the platform.

AT THE STATION. The car was followed by the people inside, many clamoring up the brake handles and making a shabby bank with General Harrison, who, with his wife and daughter, Mrs. McKee, stood on the platform.

AT THE STATION. The car was followed by the people inside, many clamoring up the brake handles and making a shabby bank with General Harrison, who, with his wife and daughter, Mrs. McKee, stood on the platform.

AT THE STATION. The car was followed by the people inside, many clamoring up the brake handles and making a shabby bank with General Harrison, who, with his wife and daughter, Mrs. McKee, stood on the platform.

AT THE STATION. The car was followed by the people inside, many clamoring up the brake handles and making a shabby bank with General Harrison, who, with his wife and daughter, Mrs. McKee, stood on the platform.

AT THE STATION. The car was followed by the people inside, many clamoring up the brake handles and making a shabby bank with General Harrison, who, with his wife and daughter, Mrs. McKee, stood on the platform.

AT THE STATION. The car was followed by the people inside, many clamoring up the brake handles and making a shabby bank with General Harrison, who, with his wife and daughter, Mrs. McKee, stood on the platform.

AT THE STATION. The car was followed by the people inside, many clamoring up the brake handles and making a shabby bank with General Harrison, who, with his wife and daughter, Mrs. McKee, stood on the platform.

PIGOTT ESCAPES. THE CONFESSED FORGER NOT TO BE FOUND. LOYDGE, Feb. 25.—Pigott has confessed that the alleged Farnell letters upon which the hopes of the Times were based were forgeries. This morning when the Farnell Commission reassembled, Sir Charles Russell said that he had a statement to make. He then caused a sensation, by saying that on Saturday Pigott went to Mr. Labouchere's office and in the presence of Mr. George Augustus Farnell, admitted that the "Farnell letters" were forgeries.

There were the newspaper correspondents and numerous visitors already in town awaiting Inauguration Day, and there was, apparently, little more than a sprinkling of Washingtonians present.

When at last it was generally understood that the train was right, the locomotive, crossing and funneling in the distance, halted the train which bore the distinguished party, there was a sudden closing together of the multitude, and those nearest the railing counted themselves fortunate.