BASEBALL NEWS.

Wagner Threw Down American Association—Diamond Topics.

A letter to Mr. George Hickey, St. Louis distributor of the metal emblems of the great American Association, Mr. James Reid, president of the National League club in Washington, has it, picked the pennant winner of the association for 1900 in the shape of Mr. Wagner's best combinations. Mr. Reid says the championship of the association race in Philadelphia is a certainty. If, he says, that team is the same as last year the Association matters will be a certain in Philadelphia. Mr. Wagner thought it a good for a good thing to make a play in the interest of the Nashville club, and so he sent attorney, a gentleman named Elliott, to Mr. Frank Robison and offered to buy the Association club in Philadelphia. He explained to Robison that he was willing to spend money in the association if he could be assured that it would stand by him. Robison told Elliott to go home and tell Wagner that he had no use for the Philadelphia franchise. Robison and Reid agree with everyone else in the city of Nashville that the association game is a failure. They say that baseball as a pastime which is a failure, for the reasons, local discouragement of early season and stormy weather. Robison and Reid are sanguine that the Nashville club will be in the pennant race. They say that Manager Hemphill has gone to work in the interest of the club in a business way. Hemphill has signed a number of good players, and he is now in Louisville, looking over the ground with the Association players from Memphis and Nashville. Reid says that Hemphill has informed the Washington club that he will not be able to do business with the Washington club. Mr. Robison has not yet signed a player for the Louisville club, but he is looking around for good material. Robison says that he will be able to get a good team together in Louisville. He says that the Louisville club will be in the pennant race. Reid says that Manager Selbach, of the Washington club, is working hard to get a good team together. Reid says that Selbach will be able to get a good team together. Reid says that Selbach will be able to get a good team together. Reid says that Selbach will be able
