AN EDUCATIONAL FAILURE.

The old-fashioned spelling school is still popular in Kentucky, and a very good thing it is. Many strong men and clever women have developed their first ambitions in a spelling school, and the effect of these gatherings is always profitable, or nearly always so.

It is "dull shucking" around the White House to-day for the office-seeker.

A young man subscribing the large sum of a quarter to a church erection fund over on Capitol Hill accompanied the cash with the following offer: Should every one his quarter give.

Should every one his quarter give. This church, which is now in the air, will show spacious quarters have. As will provide for all.

So here's find the quarter, which will give you five to three. And some day may be good. Lord show. Some quarter into me.

You may think it is a Centennial you are going to New York to see, but just as if a Dollar-tenal or Ten-dollarial, just as you prefer, before you get home again.

A correspondent calls attention to the fact that the President signs his name "Benj. Harrison," and asks how the first name should be pronounced. As "Benny" is pronounced in Washington, we presume Benj. is pronounced Benny. If not, why not?

A Handsome Testimonial. (Chicago Herald.) A Missouri preacher while hunting wild turkeys the other day concealed himself in a clump of brush and initiated the cry of that fowl so perfectly that his companion shot and wounded him. The incident was a handsome testimonial to his powers of imitation, but it hardly compensates him for the loss of several teeth and a fragment of his jaw.

Their Kind of Brown. (Omaha Herald.) It is with deep grief that we notice the Chicago News referring to the Hon. R. Todd Lincoln as the possessor of whiskers which are "fiercely black and umbrageous." Umbrageous, we grant you, but not black. The Hon. Todd's whiskers are a beautiful brown—about the color your mouth tastes next morning.

THE TOWN'S PHOTOGRAPH.

One of the neatest, pleasantest cells in the District jail is that of James Brown, alias Buck, the young man who stole Mrs. James Brown Potter's diamonds. Young, good looking and neatly dressed, he looked more like a guest in a big hotel as he romped about the corridors with the daily papers in his hand and his hat on his head. His cell is decorated with excellent taste, notwithstanding the lack of materials, and on his table are a number of books, among them being the works of the best poets. On the wall, among numerous other pictures, is a pen-and-ink sketch made by himself of the old church which he first attended. Various articles of furniture are neatly covered with tin foil, and there is an air not only of cleanliness, but of positive comfort about the room. A little vine is making its way among the bars of his window. Frequently a garter make crawls from the top of the window, and he is seen to pull it down to his feet. Buck took charge of one of these visitors, fed it and cared for it, but it soon tired of its captivity and made its escape. During her recent engagement here Mrs. Potter was appealed to write a letter to the President in the young man's behalf. At first she refused, but her woman's nature triumphed and she sent the letter to President Harrison, doing so quietly, however, so as to avoid any appearance of bidding for an advertisement. The President has not yet acted on the letter, but Buck is confident it will not be without effect. The jail was not so confident from the incidents which took place there, that he has never been incarcerated before and that he is not old in the business.

The District Commissioners last week received the following effusion from Daniel Reed, the Mount Pleasant poet: 'Mount Pleasant skies spend two years weeping. O'er nuisance pond the high way leaping. Where Sol has poison fever sleeping. And Herford's house is idle, sleeping. While Key's 'em doan go peeping. A nightly jubilee are keeping. The law and court have proved too slow To bring relief for drowning woe. But law and nuisance will be freed By Symon's order—'Pipe extended.'

The southern papers make pleasant comments upon the speech of Colonel Fred D. Mussey at the dinner at Newport News on the occasion of the opening of the Mammoth Simpson Dry Dock on Wednesday last. Colonel Mussey, in responding to the toast, "The Press," gracefully alluded to "Old Virginia and to Governor Lee, saying that he esteemed it an honor to follow Governor Lee, and it was not the first time, for in the famous Lee-Wise campaign he had followed him all over the Old Dominion with fire in his eye and a hatchet in his hand. He said he had been elected his hand, his invitation to visit, and his partake of his hospitality. 'For no Lee ever known to do an ungenerous or uncharitable thing.' A prominent Virginian here said that the speeches and the friendly meeting of Colonel Mussey and Governor Lee were calculated to do much in the way of reuniting the people. That adds to the attractiveness of the matter is the belief that Halstead is in entire sympathy with the friendly sentiments expressed by Colonel Mussey.

Heaven is a beautiful place. With beautiful streets of gold. I'm going there to meet my Lord. And all the 'posties of old.

John Bull Bragg was born at Schwabach, in the margravate of Anspach, in 1731. At the age of 4 he was converted with his mother in French, with his father in Latin and his servants in German. In his 11th year he translated "The Travels of the Rabbi Benjamin of Tudela" from Hebrew into French. He was elected a member of the Royal Academy of Science at Berlin, and was offered the degree of M. A. at the Halle University, to which he was admitted on drawing up and defending fourteen theses in philosophy and the mathematics (1758). He died at the early age of 19.

Another marvelous child was Christian Henry Heineken, who was born at Leoben, February 6, 1721—just twenty-seven days after Sartar first saw the light of day. He could recite the principal facts of the "Pentateuch" when but 1 year old; the entire history of the old and new testament was familiar to him at 14 months; at 24 years he could answer the principal questions in ancient and modern history, and at 5 he died.

Goethe is said to have known German, French, Italian, Latin and Greek before he was 8. On January 30 of the present year the New York Sun gave an account of a little negro—Oscar Moore—who knew all of Appleton's "Encyclopedia" by heart and could recite anything he had ever heard.

The English Breakfast. Breakfast is a delightful hour in England, for it is informal. Servants are often dispensed with altogether; people come in when they choose, no one waiting for another, and you may select your neighbor if you are in time. The women are fresh and simple in toilet, the sportsmen in knickerbocker and shooting suits ready for the occupation of the day. In some houses the host and hostess sit at opposite ends of the long table, and one pours tea and the other coffee. In other mansions, neither the host nor hostess is visible before lunch time. The table is spread only with fruit and bread, and possibly cold sweets, jellies and cold meats. Freshly laid out on the table are the family sit behind an egg boiler and cooks eggs for her friends, but the substantial meats, hot and cold, are on the sideboard, and the men get up and forage for the ladies and themselves. The viands, of course, are abundant and delectable. An English breakfast is always substantial. In Scotland oatmeal porridge is never absent.

Secret Uncle Sam's Strong Box. Sub-Treasurer Ellis H. Roberts made an innovation yesterday that occasioned much interest in the building when considered together with his determination to put the employer under bonds. From time immemorial the combinations of the locks to the secret box have been known to one employe and the Sub-Treasurer. Mr. Roberts yesterday changed this. Two men will own the secret—one to know one half of the combination, and the other the other half. He himself will know nothing. These men will be known to their associates, but to no one else. They boarded the ferry-boat, and Jerome Park roads, and were cleaned out. They had some twenty-five cents between them, and started for the ferry to come back if they could find any way to borrow the necessary form. On the way to the ferry they passed an unfinished house in which lived a miserly old man with a long pipe. Now lead pipe is worth some ten cents or more a pound, and as nobody was about one of them took the pipe and winding it closely about his waist, buttoned his overcoat up over it, and nobody would have guessed that he had enough lead pipe under his coat to sell for the wherewith to get a meal. They boarded the ferry-boat, and when about half way across the man with the lead pipe under his coat fell overboard. The deck-lads stood about with boat-hooks and ropes to fish for the man as soon as he came up. His friend, who had at last found a cinch, ran up and down the deck shouting "Ten to one he don't come up." The man who had the pipe, however, did not seem to care. Somebody take me! A hundred to one he don't come up. And he couldn't get any one to bet.

MATTER WORTH READING.

The following incident is related on the authority of W. L. Bright, M. P.: "Mr. Bright went into an agricultural district one day and he had to walk from the station a long way into the village. On the way a clergyman who was driving in a dog-cart came up to him and the two men passed the time of day. The clergyman offered to drive Mr. Bright into the village and Mr. Bright accepted the offer. The clergyman was a Tory, and he had been reading a speech Mr. Bright had made the previous night, and turning to Mr. Bright he said 'Have you seen the paper?' 'Yes,' said Mr. Bright. 'What?' 'The Tory?' 'Why, that racial John Bright has been making another speech.' 'And what was it about?' asked Mr. Bright. 'Why, so-and-so and so-and-so,' and he went on to relate the incidents of the speech. They discussed the topic, and Mr. Bright said 'I have seen the paper.' 'What?' 'The Tory?'
