CAPTAIN HOWARD IS AGAINST WINEROOMS.

Saloonkeeper Pledges the Retail Liquor Dealers' Aid in the Effort to Suppress the Evil.

MEETING OF THE CRUSADERS.

Speeches by Ministers and President Hawes—Pastors to Preach in Support of the Movement on March 11.

COLONEL JOHN W. HOWARD.

interested in the suppression of wineroomsranged to keep them in the most of the time.

The meeting opened most informally, with Father Coffey in the chair. A quartet from Christ Church Cathedral choir sang, and Dean Davis of the cathedral was introduced. He said that laws are dead unless they are backed up by public sentiment, and the one great thing needful is to make people understand exactly what conditions exist in the wineroomsSentiment against them would naturally follow. He made an especial appeal to the clergymen to exert all their influence against the universally recognized evil. He said that the political situation had much to do with the fact that convictions for violations of the laws regulating saloons are so rare. The question now is, What shall the people do?

The Reverend Doctor J. W. McKitrick of the First Presbyterian Church made a stirring speech on behalf of the movement. He said that he took the representative character of the audience to mean that the patriots of the city are uniting together, not necessarily on common grounds of religion or on the strength of the natural and proper aversion to the wineroom evil. "We have the right," he said in closing, "to demand that the laws shall be carried out and carried out flying, too dead." The last sentiment was greeted with a chorus of hearty "amens" and the prayer sang a patriotic paraphrase.

Captain Howard's Speech.

The next speaker was Captain Howard, who came by invitation as the representative of the Retail Liquor Dealers' Protective Association, to address the ministers and offer the support of his organization to the crusade. He was greeted with warm applause from the rear of the hall, but the ministers, with one or two exceptions, and the women who were waiting behind their hands and looked uncomfortable. Captain Howard himself did not appear quite at ease. He said that he did not come to speak about the liquor traffic in general, for that, he held, had always been regarded as an entirely legitimate and proper business. He said that the saloonkeepers had a double interest in the crusade against the places which were called winerooms, though the name was too respectable for such places. First, the saloonkeepers have the interest of the moral welfare of the community at heart, just as other good citizens. Second, the saloonkeepers have been injured and the respectable men in the business damaged in reputation by the crimes and offenses against decency which are really due to wineroomsHe said the saloon men had been unable to make an effective movement against the evil alone, but feel they have the first opportunity to express themselves in support of the crusade, and will do so immediately. He closed by asserting that no class of people wants to laugher than the association to represented when wineroomsshould be completely wiped out.

The Right Reverend Bishop Tuttle asked some pertinent questions as to what laws exist or are needed to make the wineroomscan be abolished or abolished. He said that he did not care so much whether bad women were kept away from them, but he did want some law that would keep young men and young women, who had not become vicious, away from such places.

E. A. Phillips, chairman of the Executive Committee of the crusade, answered Bishop Tuttle's suggestion by saying that the idea of a crusade was to bring about the attractiveness from unobjectionable resorts. He added that the authorities have not learned to whom they are responsible for their failure of office and that when they do there will be no trouble in enforcing the law. He said he was sure that the present officers are as good men, personally, as are likely to ever hold those places. What they need is to learn that the people really demand reforms and the reforms will follow.

Father Coffey then made a brief talk, calling attention to the practical purposes of the meeting and the necessity for rousing public sentiment. He suggested that a day be selected on which ministers be invited to address their congregations on the subject of the wineroom evil. This suggestion met with instant approval and was adopted, though only ten ministers voted on the question. The Reverend Doctor S. J. Niccolls of the Second Presbyterian Church followed the vote with a timely speech about the need for more than merely being waked with calls.

President Hawes Speaks.

President Harry B. Hawes of the Police Board was next introduced by Father Coffey. He explained his personal reasons for favoring the crusade, and said his department stood ready at all times to enforce the law. Besides, he said, his department had been rather severely criticised for supposed shortcomings by people who wanted certain things done and knew little of law. He spoke at length of the legal aspects of the wineroom evil and the possible remedies. Well-known women of the half-world, he said, could be arrested when they made some particular saloon their resort, but there is no law to prevent a woman from going to any saloon in the city and procuring a drink if she wants one. He said the enforcement of the Newberry law would result in the closing of all the sunken gardens and resorts which are a menace to morals and decency, and that the members of the police committee stood with him in this respect. He suggested that an ordinance passed by the Municipal Assembly regulating the kind of room in which liquor may be sold would be one of the best remedies for the wineroomsContinuing, he said that he believed that moral suasion was the most necessary of all things and added that he thought that so many moral boys or girl were enticed into saloons. This caused a storm among some of the women and a few of the men, some of them protesting in loud tones that Mr. Hawes was mistaken. He stuck to his point and insisted that the regulation of liquor traffic are really at the root of the evil. He said that he already personally had taken steps to have the law enforced in further search for the social evil, that fallen women be found for operating outside of wineroomsand that the police would be unmercifully hot against the man who may be innocently led astray.

Point of Order Is Raised.

The fun in the meeting was devoid of its usual humor, except a humorous incident when the Reverend Doctor W. M. Polk, the Reverend Dubois A. Saunderson and a Mr. Black, who said he was the secretary of the Prohibition Clubs of Christian Men, made their last to force the meeting into some sort of an expression against the whole liquor business. Mr. Hayes and others raised points of order whenever this factor threatened, and Father Coffey soon silenced them. One man tried to tell of a very sad case he knew about in New York State, and he was also asked to order. A timely speech by Bishop Tuttle and another by Doctor McKitrick, and one by Doctor Hingeley brought the meeting back to the main question—the social evil of Wineroomsrooms.

Previous to the meeting a note appeared at the hall who requested that be informed to several Negroes from speaking. Two others were sent over from the Central District Station, and the man disappeared before the meeting had opened.

EVANGELICAL ALLIANCE.

Dr. J. F. Cannon the New President—Dr. Billingsley's Paper.

The Evangelical Alliance held its regular monthly meeting in Odd Fellows' Hall yesterday. The most interesting item of business was the election of officers, as follows: President, the Reverend Doctor J. F. Cannon, pastor of Grace Avenue Presbyterian Church; first vice president, the Reverend Doctor R. B. Hillsgrove, pastor of Lafayette Avenue Cumberland Presbyterian Church; second vice president, the Reverend Doctor John R. Young, pastor of Cemetery M. E. Church, South; third vice president, the Reverend Doctor C. H. Patton, pastor of Compton Heights Congregational Church; fourth vice president, the Reverend F. G. Eggman, pastor of St. John's Evangelical Church; secretary, the Reverend J. F. Herget, pastor of the Water Tower Baptist Church; treasurer, the Reverend Doctor H. Smith, pastor of Memorial Tabernacle Presbyterian Church. Other members of the Board of Counselors are the Reverend Doctor M. Rhodes, pastor of St. John's English Lutheran Church; the Reverend Doctor D. L. Billingsley, pastor of the Maple Avenue M. E. Church, and the Reverend J. W. Ashmore, pastor of the Grand Avenue United Presbyterian Church.

Alexander Hamilton, president of the Curfew Bell, was introduced and addressed the Alliance briefly, and at the close of his remarks the following resolution was presented and adopted: "Whereas, Alexander Hamilton has devoted much time in the past few years in the curfew reform in behalf of the youth of St. Louis, and has spoken of this reform movement in some of our churches throughout the country, and has helped to the establishment of Children's Courts, and has helped to the establishment of Children's Courts, and has sympathy of the pastors of all churches and reform bodies, that we will make no mistake in opening their pulpits for his addresses."

The paper of the day was read by the Reverend Doctor A. M. Billingsley, and his subject was "The Church and Modern Social Tendencies." In the opening part of his paper, the speaker called attention to the marvelous growth of this nation in its resources, and stated that it was by far the wealthiest nation of the world. Quoting from Michael J. Mulhall, the relative wealth of nations was given as follows: United States, $75,000,000; Great Britain, $55,000,000; France, $47,500,000; Germany, $36,000,000; Russia, $32,000,000; Italy, $18,000,000; Austria, $22,000,000; Spain, $11,000,000.

The doctor also referred to the marvelous growth of individual fortunes and to the extreme luxury in which many of the multimillionaires live today. He said that the rapid increase in wealth is leading to a bitter class hatred, which threatens the entire social fabric. A rather sombre view was also taken of the social and political status of the country, as shown in the matter of divorce and municipal corruption.

In closing, the speaker said that the church had aids which to oppose all the evil influences mentioned, and the answer was "the brotherhood of man and the Sacrificial of Jesus." He said there would be need for a new Gospel, for a fresh presentation of the old gospel, that the church must speak for the poor and the oppressed, and should plead for the community, and for the church, that there should be less theology and more gospel; that there should be a wider and more practical ministry, and such a federation of the different denominations along the line of revival work as would produce maximum results at minimum cost.

The following new members were received: The Reverend Baxter Waters, pastor of Central Christian Church; the Reverend A. P. Maxwell, pastor of Jennings M. E. Church; the Reverend W. S. Newell, pastor of Compton Hill Congregational Church, the Reverend Doctor B. Mitchell, pastor of Memorial Tabernacle Presbyterian Church, and the Reverend Mr. Love of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church. The Reverend Doctor J. H. Young, pastor of Cemetery M. E. Church, was appointed to read a paper at the next meeting of the alliance.

DOCTOR KING'S NEW CHARGE.

He Will Become Pastor of Grace Church at Wilmington, Del.

The Reverend Doctor William Wirt King has been called to Grace M. E. Church, at Wilmington, Del., and will leave his pastorate in St. Louis, the Ivy Hill Avenue M. E. Church, on April 1. He will be succeeded by Doctor Dorchester of Dorchester, who will come to St. Louis from Chicago. The Reverend Doctor King delivered his farewell sermon last Sunday morning to a crowded house. He will be missed by the ministerial brethren, who will miss his cheery greetings and that the Christian Brothers' Order is looked upon as a kind of lay sect.

At the college in the city it was said last night that the decision of the Propaganda would work a revolution in the schools in this country. The St. Louis college will not be affected, but all such institutions as Mount St. Michael's in Spokane, Wash., Gonzaga College, New York, and the college at Memphis, where a specialty is made of the classics. The Prefect say that the elimination of the classical course from their colleges will undoubtedly affect the standing and reputation of their schools. The decision of the Propaganda is still is as follows:

Rome, Jan. 11, 1900. "Most Reverend and Eminent Sir: In compliance with your eminence's request, I have to bring to your Eminence's knowledge that to Most Eminent Fathers of the Sacred Congregation of Propaganda, during their meeting on the 9th of December, have seriously discussed the question whether the studies of Christian schools should be exclusively devoted to teach Latin and Greek in their schools.

"After a full and mature discussion, our Eminent Fathers have decided that it would be proper to grant to the Christian Brothers of the United States of America, and Canada, the faculty to teach Latin and Greek.

"Our eminent Fathers have also decided that the second proposal whether it would be advisable to refer the determination of this question to the Holy See, I have to inform your Eminence that the Eminent Fathers have decided not to refer the question to the Holy See.

"Meanwhile, I have to inform your Eminence that the Eminent Fathers have also decided that the teaching of Latin and Greek in the American institutes is tolerated till the end of the current scholastic year only. Besides, the Eminent Fathers have also decided that the students attending classes in Christian schools through Your Eminence to the Catholic diocesan of the United States, sending to the American Ecclesiastic that though the Holy See favors the teaching of classical studies, especially of Latin, and for this effect it even grants to all religious orders devoted to their rules to such teaching, still without that religious institutes should absolutely abide by their rules, it is not bound to be the duties of Christian Schools, and wishes that in the United States they should be stated because the number of technical and commercial schools.

"As the undersigned wanted on the 6th of last month Mr. Holmes has kindly ratified the diocesan decisions in all their particulars. Hereby therefore, I have the consolation of the same published my duty, and feelings convinced that the Most Reverend and Right Reverend Bishop of the aforesaid country will manifest their attachment to the Holy See by conforming to its decisions, as most respectfully and humbly, also your hand and indeed myself Your Eminence's most devoted servant.

HALLETT-SCUDDER WEDDING—MRS. CABANNE'S RECEPTION.

At the Second Baptist Church last evening the marriage of Miss Alice S. Scudder, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elisha Scudder, to Mr. Ellis Archer Hallett, son of J. W. Hallett of New York, was celebrated in the presence of many hundreds of friends, who filled the church to its utmost capacity. The floral decorations were entirely in green and confined to the chancel. A thick curtain of Southern smilax covered the woodwork behind the altar, with palms and ferns massed at the sides. From the organ loft made trailing vines fell down and met the mass of green beneath.

Mr. McIntyre, organist of the church, played a short programme of bridal music for a half hour before the nuptial party came to the altar, concluding with the Lohengrin march as the bridal party filed down the aisle. First came Walter C. Hallett and Arthur Caldwell. They were followed by William H. Dean, Jr., who walked alone. Then came George W. Scudder and Brooks G. Scudder, the bride's brothers. After these appeared the bridesmaids, walking singly. Miss Grace Gale was first, Miss Josephine Barstow next, Miss Florence Hawley of New York, and lastly the maid of honor, Miss Lucy Scudder, the bride's younger sister. Immediately preceding the bride, who came by with her father, Mr. Hallett and his best man, Herbert A. Wagner of New York, were in waiting at the altar, entering from the vestry, and the Reverend Doctor Boyd then read the service, while the music "Liebestraum" "Serenade" floated from the organ loft.

The ceremony was followed by a reception from half after 8 until 10 o'clock at the Scudder residence, No. 2[illegible] Delmar, which to which relatives and friends to the number of 250 had been asked. The house was festooned in the Southern smilax, and huge chrysanthemums were used to advantage all the rooms. Mr. Hallett, after the ceremony, gave to the bridesmaids pearl and diamond necklaces, and the groomsmen scarf pins. The bride's gifts to her attendants were of a gold chain with a locket attached, and to her maid of honor a gold chain with two lockets. The bridegroom gave his best man and usher scarf pins of Etruscan gold in medieval design, set with small diamonds and rubies.

From the best man the bride received a brooch in the shape of a musical instrument, of Etruscan pattern, surrounded by alternate rows of pearls and diamonds. Mr. Hallett, senior, father of the bride groom, gave a watch of Etruscan gold studded with diamonds. Mr. and Mrs. Scudder gave their daughter a complete chest of small table silver. Mrs. Clare Gale, the bride's cousin, gave a set of table linen, in dozens of pieces, small and large, the damask cloth, napkins and doilies of all descriptions, lined in pink rose. From Mr. and Mrs. Fraunont of New York a set of hand-painted plates in miniature designs. Captain and Mrs. Barstow and the Barstow family gave a complete silver service. In addition there were quantities of Bohemian glass, six dozen bonbon spoons in a satin lined of solid silver, lined with gold, and accompanied by a gold spoon and serving fork; a pastry knife of the bonbon class, lined in gold with solid gold handles; two large cut-glass punch bowls with sets of cups, one set mounted in silver, three handsome lamps, and a great variety of silver articles for toilet, household and ornamental purposes.

The bride, who is small in stature, wore white satin duchesse, with much trimming of pearl embroidery and bertha lace. The skirt of her gown was almost plain, with a very long train about four yards in length falling from the waist line, and bordered in wide scallops with the pearls. The bodice was low-necked and off the shoulders. On the side was fastened entirely of the bavaline tucks of satin, folding into scallops of the same edged with pearls. A duchesse lace scarf, combined with white satin, and tucked into a large corsage, was worn on the plain side of the bodice. Her veil was of tulle, fastened very simply to the hair with a small spray of orange blossoms. The bridal bouquet was a shower one of lilies of the valley.

Miss Lucy Scudder, as maid of honor, wore white, her frock of satin-striped grenadine over pleated ruffles of white mousseline and point de Paris lace. About the low corsage were spangled butterflies of white lace combined with lace loops.

The other maids were gowns alike and of unusual beauty. They were all pink and severely princess in style. The accordion pleatings of pink chiffon fell straight from the neck to the skirt hem. Over these was a redingote effect of white Irish point lace, the back in a long point over the train, and cut up on the sides. A bit of pink panne velvet draped the front of the bodice across the square neck. In their hair the bridesmaids wore full-blown pink roses with foliage and buds, covered with spangles. Their bouquets were very large showers of pink carnations carried over one arm, eight dozen flowers in each cluster.

Mrs. Scudder wore a gray crepe de Chine gown, trimmed in mauve satin.

Mrs. Arthur Gale, the bride's aunt, was in violet and white moiré taffeta, trimmed in white panne velvet.

Mrs. W. A. Scudder took an embroidered white crepe de Chine gown, with touches of turquoise blue satin.

A few early hour this morning Mr. and Mrs. Hallett departed for a honeymoon, whence they will go southward to the Bermuda islands, and later to Bermuda. They have announced for a few days, but on their return to New York expect to take up their residence at the Arlington, apartment of Doctor, at Fifth avenue and Sixty-fifth street, where they will have Miss Clifton Emmell, the actress, for one of their near neighbors.

An interesting feature of the wedding was the fact that Mr. Hallett, Sr., had come from home from one of the mines in Colorado.

Mr. and Mrs. Archer Hallett, the best man, Mr. Roy Hallett, Miss Florence Hawley, Mr. George Barstow and W. J. W. Hallett have all been guests at the Scudder home for several days, and much entertaining has been done for them and the bridal party.

Mr. Hallett has visited St. Louis several times. He is extremely tall, fully 6 feet 3 inches, and a decided contrast to his bride. He is now constructing a cottage at Hyannisport on Cape Cod, which he and Mrs. Hallett will occupy next summer, on the site of their first meeting place.

Among the entertainments given last week for the Hallett-Scudder bridal party, was a theater party by William Dean, and another party of the same description by Dorothy Scudder. The Misses Dale entertained the bride, her maids and a few intimate girl friends at a whole luncheon on Saturday. Last Friday night Mr. and Mrs. Allan Gale and Miss Grace Gale gave a supper to the bride and bridegroom, which was an unusually effective function of its kind. A round table, seating twelve, was used. In the center was laid a piece of white tulle, arranged in waves and billows, full-blown pink roses nestling in the tulle folds. The table was draped about a large consolidation of old silver, candle of ivory embedded, the candles, which were shaded in pink silk. Just above the table and suspended from the chandelier was a large cornucopia of white satin straw, from which fell a shower of pink roses. Roses lay at the women's plates, while the men had boutonnieres of lilies of the valley. A big cluster of pink roses was tied to the bride's chair with long pink satin ribbons. Hearts and cupids played important parts in the menu of this dinner. The cards were heart-shaped and hand painted in roses and cupids, with big bows of pink ribbons to fasten them to each place. The ices were served as large single pink roses, and the cakes came to the table as pink hearts surmounted with candy cupids and bridal wreaths of roses.

MRS. ELLIS HALLETT.
Who was married last evening Miss Alice Scudder, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elisha Scudder of St. Louis.

MR. ELLIS ARCHER HALLETT
Of New York.

Mrs. Dighiel Cabanne received yesterday afternoon from 4 to 6 at her residence in Westminster place in honor of Miss Julia Cabanne, daughter of Mrs. Carr Cabanne and a granddaughter of the widower.

The Cabanne house, which is now [illegible] decorated with much taste and skill, was trimmed with flowers, each room differently and each flower chosen with peculiar fitness for its surroundings. The reception hall, which is in dull green woods, the walls a dark shade of American beauty red, was adornedwith tall vases and jardinieres of American beauty roses. The dining-room, a pink apartment, was entirely in pink and rose and mahogany items. In the small music-room, which has hangings of Turkish reds and yellows, and is lighted by opalescent globes in the peculiar red yellow tints, bunch of gay tulips, were placed about those of the two colors—red and yellow—preferred.

The dining-room is one of the handsomest of the house. In their former country residence, near Clayton, Mr. and Mrs. Cabanne had a great number of old and priceless pieces of furniture, and it of it isn't interesting to relate, the rare good fortune they were enabled to save some of the dining-room pieces from the disastrous fire a year ago, which destroyed the Clayton home. One of the noteworthy relics is an enormous sideboard of walnut, elaborately carved in mermaids and griffins, which once belonged to a Doge of Venice and has been in the possession of Mrs. Cabanne's family for many years, it having been brought over by an ancestor. The sideboard yesterday occupied a post of honor and was trimmed in delicate smilax and white roses. Another lot of interesting furniture is an old mahogany buffet, also an heirloom, of the Louis Quinze pattern, and handsomely inlaid with various colored woods. A large cluster of pale pink roses on the buffet yesterday was the only touch of color in the room, which had for its scheme green and white.

The round centertable was wreathed in smilax, tied at intervals with pale-green ribbons, tumbling from a large mass of Easter lilies, which was placed directly under the chandelier, also wreathed in green.

Large candelabra of old-fashioned silver further ornamented the table, shaded in pale green and white silk. The bonbons were pinkobbs, and the candle sticks of pale green.

Mrs. Cabanne received in the drawing-room, assisted by Miss Julia Cabanne, Mrs. Charles Cabanne and Mrs. Randolph Hutchinson. Mrs. Cabanne wore black spangled net, and the debutante was in a simple frock of white organdy lace.

A number of young women served during the afternoon, in the music-room Miss Isabel Cheuvre and Miss Virginia Lawyer had charge of the punch, while Miss Scullin and Miss Grace Thompson poured chocolate at the lily table in the dining-room.

Many women called during the hours of receiving, as the afternoon was pleasant, and this happened to be the only large function of the day. Some of them were:

The wedding of Miss Lillian Stohr, daughter of Mr. Emil Stohr, of No. 3[illegible] La Salle street, to Mr. Joseph Byrne will take place this afternoon at the church at the Cathedral Chapel on Newstead avenue.

The bride and bridegroom will be attended by Miss Gertrude Ackenberg and Mr. M. J. Ahern. Only a few friends will be present, as the wedding is to be a quiet one. The bride will wear a travelling gown of tan broadcloth, tailor-made, with velvet and to correspond.

After a wedding dinner the couple will start on a Southern journey of several weeks' duration, on their return they will go to Bonhomme at No. 3[illegible] Park avenue and will be at home on Tuesdays in April.

Mr. Max Goldman and Mrs. Albert J. Dolphin gave a reception to Mr. William H. Sherwood of Chicago for Victor from [illegible] at the Conservatorium. The pianist was more than gracious on this occasion and favored the guests by playing several selections among them being an Etude, the [illegible] composition such by Alexis Holmes, Fifth Barcarolle of Rubinstein, a Chopin song by Chopin and Wagner's favorite from "Die Walkure." These numbers given the technique and bravura full scope. Other well-known musicians who contributed to the enjoyment of the guests were Mr. F. R. Kinsler, who played to solo and with Mr. Sherwood Meyerbeer's "Minuet" from "Nimrod's Dream" for two pianos, and Mr. Guido Parodi, who played a violin solo. At the conclusion of the programme tea was served to six young ladies. The Misses Mabel Wormser, Rosalie Zeck, Gertrude Wolf, Eleanor Jacob, Lulu McCreery and Elizabeth Mayer.

Mrs. Noble's gown was an imported creation of golden brown and cream brocade, elaborately trimmed in point applique lace, and more elaborate ornamented. Mrs. Hughes wore gowned in lavender and cream silk with applique of duchess lace. Mrs. Philip N. Moore, also of the receiving party, wore black duchesse trimmed in jet and sequins. There were 200 guests present, despite the very bad weather. Among them were:
