WEBSTER GROVES SOCIAL.

Men of the Congregational Church Give a Unique Entertainment.

The men of the Webster Groves Congregational Church, the Reverend C. L. Kloss, pastor, last evening carried into execution one of the most unique church socials in the history of the congregation. There was no admission fee, no collection, no catchpenny affairs of any kind, but the rendition of a programme which afforded especial enjoyment to all present. The church itself does not believe in raising money by social or musical affairs of any description, but depends entirely upon the voluntary contributions of its membership in connection with the regular services for meeting all church expenses. This was the policy adopted with the coming of the present pastor, and each year since has closed with all bills paid and money in the treasury.

The entertainment last evening was a tripartite affair, the first part being held in the chapel, where first in order was a picture guessing which included an original drawing by each male member of the church. As the pictures exhibited the ladies present guessed at the subject. Following was an original poem entitled, "The Man Who Pays His Dues," by J. E. Berry, which was sung to a song, air and tune being followed by a whistling chorus, "Electric Club Swinging," by Mr. Bungard, followed, and the chapel programme closed with the presentation of the "Webster Groves News Herald," whose staff was composed as follows: Editor, Ben Becker; assistant editor, Max Jones; religious and society editor, A. F. Heinemann. The issue printed was claimed to be published in 1899. This part of the programme was particularly enjoyed by the male quartet, composed of Messrs. Collins, Hutchinson, Janes and Berry.

From the chapel the crowd adjourned to the main auditorium of the church, where an oil painting exhibition followed, without any charge. The chapel of the church where now the music was rendered by Leslie and Lois Thompson on mandolin and guitar. There were more than 300 persons in attendance.
