that reached the club owners yesterday, and as it means that the big fellow will be of little use this year a hustle will necessarily be made for a man to fill his place. Stalings has flown out for several men and received some encouragement from one major league manager yesterday, so it is possible that a deal will be closed for two or three players of ability within a few days.

It is said that Hugh Duffy, the great captain of the Boston's, who led the National League batting list in 1894, is not at all sure of holding his job on the team. Duffy has fallen off in his batting so much that he has given up right-handed hitting his natural style—in disgust. He is now practicing left-handed batting, with an idea of changing his style this season. This is a weak position to take after having been once looked upon as the best batsman in the country. The first handicap that Hugh Duffy's skill of hitting received was about four seasons ago, when the rulemakers changed the rule on foots so as to make a ball that rolled outside of the line a strike. Up to this time Duffy could hunt the ball for several minutes until he got one outside the line, and so he the handicap was put on Duffy and the hunting game and hit out, from which time his batting average grew beautifully smaller year after year. Players usually give out at first in fielding and base running, but in case of the captain he is still a grand fielder, but a losing batsman.

C. B. C. vs. High School.

This afternoon the High School will meet the C. B. C. nine on the College Campus. The game promises to be interesting, since High defeated Washington last Saturday, and Washington is credited with having a strong aggregation. The college boys made a pretty good showing against the Bank of Commerce team on last Saturday, but expect to do better to defeat a practiced team. Sunday the college boys play the Dixie team.

Skirt 22, 24, 26, 28 and 30 inch waist.

The waist is made over a perfectly fitted lining, which closes in the center front, the seams and darts being featherboned. A shallow yoke of lace is applied on the back which fits smooth across the shoulders, the fullness being arranged in tiny plaits in the center at the waist line.

The Venise lace over a plastron of lace which is included in the right shoulder seam and attached to the right lining front, fastening invisibly on the left side under the trimming of cream cloth bands. The small revers and narrow belt are of brown velvet.

The collar is shaped in points at the back. The shoulders are extended and finished separately to form epaulettes over the close-fitting two-piece sleeves, giving becoming breadth to the figure.

The skirt is designed especially for wide materials. It is circular in shaping, its perfectly smooth across the front and over the hips to the center back. The upper part is sheath fitting, but from the knee down the skirt flares stylishly and falls in graceful folds toward the back.

The single box plait is applied narrow at the top, broadening toward the bottom, where it trains slightly. A close adjustment is made at the upper portion of the skirt.

Bands of cream broadcloth are applied around the lower edge of the skirt, also down the front and around the sides, to simulate a tunic. These bands and those on the waist are trimmed with rows of narrow brown silk gimp and tiny flat crochet buttons are effectively applied.

The costume is simply constructed and may be made of ladies' cloth, Lansdowne, Henrietta, poplin or crepeline, with trimmings of lace, velvet, ribbon, chiffon, braid or applique.

To make the waist in the medium size will require one and one-half yards of material 44 inches wide, with five-eighths yard of figured goods 22 inches wide and one-half yard of velvet. The pattern, No. 7942, is cut in sizes for a 32, 34, 36, 38 and 40 inch bust measure.

Ladies' Night Gown, No. 7940—A very graceful appearance is presented in this gown of white nainsook, which is trimmed with insertion and edging of Hamburg embroidery. Its attractiveness is further enhanced by revers elaborately trimmed with embroidery.

The back is arranged in box plaits, which are fitted at the neck, a plain effect being kept over the shoulders.

The fronts are gathered and attached to the lower edge of a straight yoke, the closing being made invisible at the left side under the revers. A band of insertion and tucking applied on the yoke forms a slightly low, square neck, completed by a frill of the embroidery.

The sleeves are full enough for comfort and correctly shaped with single seams, gathered top and bottom, the wrists being completed with bands of insertion and frills of the embroidery.

The lower edge is finished with a deep hem, and there is ample fullness in the gown at the floor line.

If a daintier gown is desired, China silk, white or colored Persian lawns may be employed with Valenciennes or meshlin lace and fine tucking for trimming. Ribbon may be run through the insertion and terminate in tiny rosette bows, which are an addition to the dressy effect of these garments.

To make the night gown in the medium size will require six and one-half yards of 36-inch material. The pattern, No. 7940, is cut in sizes for a 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44 inch bust measure.

League grounds to-day, defeating the Tigers by a score of 12 to 5. Herman Long had charge of the Boston team on the diamond. The Princeton fielders were very fast. Steinwender excelled both at the bat and in the infield. The Bostons played Scott up in the eighth inning, and Princeton showed what they could do with him when they wanted to.

Charley Young's left-handed pitching kept the Boston hitters on the jump, but with six runs to earn in the final Scott took Young's place before the inning was completed, and for six innings held the Bostons down to three scattered hits. Princeton gained runs in the second, on bunched hits and tied the score in the eighth. The Bostons then pulled themselves together and scored four for five singles and two doubles.

The crowd was a Princeton affair, and the feeling in Washington against the National League was so strong that Boston was treated poorly, and there was not a murmur of applause for the Bostonians from start to finish. With him to Norfolk by local request, Lowe, Clarke, Willis, Pittinger and Lewis will leave Boston for Norfolk.

JOE WEAR COACHING YALE.

St. Louis A. A. A.'s Crack Outfielder Is With His Old College Team.

Saturday, April 14, at 3 p. m. the baseball team of the St. Louis Amateur Athletic Association at Forest Park will open the season, having as their opponents the St. Louis University team. An unusual interest is taken in baseball this season with the result that the clubs will be represented by one of the strongest teams in the city. Men have been working on the diamond for the past two weeks, and it is now in perfect condition.

The club will not have its best players in the field next Saturday, as some of them will not be able to join the team before May 1. Joe Wear, the club's crack center-fielder, is at Old Point Comfort, coaching the Yale team, of which he was a member for three years. He is expected to return in two weeks, and will then join the club. Sim Drew, captain of Smith Academy, will not be able to join the team until the end of the interscholastic baseball season.

The games arranged so far are: Saturday, April 14, St. Louis University; April 21, Bank of Commerce; April 28, Perkins & Herpel; May 12, Lewis High School. The club would like to hear from all first-class amateur teams in the city. For games address Geo. E. Dierkman, 31 North Fourth street. The line-up Saturday will be as follows:

CHICAGO PRACTICED BATTING.

Work of the Pitchers Satisfied Loftus—Team in Shape.

REPUBLIC SPECIAL.

Louisville, Ky., April 13—More work at batting was done to-day by the Chicago ball team than at any previous time this spring. Most of the sluggers took turns driving up swift ones for the others. Barrett loosened up for the first time. He has developed speed, good control and a great deal of "deliver." Loftus watched the Californian's work carefully and said: "He's all right and a winner."

Cunningham, too, put them so hard for an hour and with Callahan and Killen, kept the batters guessing. All of the pitchers are now in fine form, and in no time at them is ready to jump into the game. As much can be said for every one of the fielders. The team is thought by Loftus to be in first-class shape, and he is ready for the flag to fall.

BOSTON 12, PRINCETON 5.

Score Was Tied in the Eighth—Beaneaters Were Listless.

REPUBLIC SPECIAL.

Washington, April 13—The Bostons played a rather listless game with Princeton on the old women who no longer possess the agility necessary for successful cricket and tennis playing found themselves suddenly outside the pale of competitive sports. Now men play polo, and yachting pleasures even with the more modest knickabouts, are confined to a limited number. The thoroughly fit, to fill the vacancy, but the older riders did not care for races of century runs, and no competition was brought out in a quiet game of wheeling. Then at the critical period golf was introduced to American soil. The United States Golf Association, although little more than five years old, has been the means of giving a tone and character to the game which otherwise it never would have acquired so speedily in England there is nothing like it as mutual aided self-help for the general welfare and central government of the game. Attempts have been made from time to time to organize some such union, but the chief obstacle has been the large clubs, which are jealous of their individual prestige. The old St. Andrew's Club has been generally regarded as the arbiter of golf in Great Britain, although others are now claiming a share in the responsibility. In the United States the rules of the game have been adopted in toto without any alteration, and the United States Golf Association has recently completed a table of rules for the American game which was compiled and adopted only a few weeks ago. It is hoped that the rules which have been adopted in Great Britain, with certain interpretations and exceptions, will be adopted in all of rules for the American game was compiled and adopted only a few weeks ago.
