PITCHER JONES STILL SHUTTING THEM OUT

Jones's excellent control of his curve completely overcame the crack left-hand hitters of the Boston club yesterday. With Tenny, Hamilton, Stahl and Freeman out of the batting, Boston had no chance to win. Hence Jones duplicated his Brooklyn shutout, and St. Louis won—7 to 0. The right-hand hitters did fair business with Jones. Collins, Sullivan and Barry secured their share of hits. Collins was very familiar with Elbert, indeed. But the six hits of the Bostonese came at intervals and did no good. Bar one inning, the seventh, Boston did not have a mite of a chance to score. Then, with a man on third and two out, Collins hit hard to Jones, who pulled the high bounder down in true Cy Young fashion.

Jones played most of the game himself. His surprising control of his curve was the feature of his pitching. When Umpire Manassau told The Republic last summer that Jones had perfect command of his curve, when right, he spoke gospel truth. He bent them over in all shapes yesterday. Jones did not ask anything much of his field in the way of support.

Criger's throwing to Wallace was wonderfully fine. Each time the ball was thrown right upon the runner. All Wallace had to do was stop and hold it. Several Boston players tried to purloin second, but each time Criger made a perfect throw.

Pittinger, a minor league recruit, with nice speed and good curve, was in the box for Boston. He was hit well throughout. The St. Louis team once more displayed its ability to make runs. There was no stupid base running yesterday. McGraw and Robinson were very smart on the lines. It will not be very long until Captain McGraw has the splendid team in his charge playing ball.

Naturally, the same was not exciting. From the first inning the only point of interest was the probability of Boston scoring at all. There was but one fielding chance beyond the ordinary—Lowe's stop of McGann's hard line rap. The batting was not heavy—that is, no long hits were made.

NOTES OF THE GAME.

O'Connor Goes to Pittsburg—Kind Words for Captain McGraw.

President Robison of the St. Louis club announced yesterday that Catcher Jack O'Connor had been sold to Pittsburg. He added that O'Connor was well pleased with the deal, and would immediately leave St. Louis to join the Smoky City club.

Mr. Robison did not state what price was paid for O'Connor by Pittsburg. Advices from the big city on the Allegheny, where club-owners are somewhat more liberal with information than in St. Louis, are to the effect that a neat sum was paid for the great catcher, of which he secured a portion. Down there they say that O'Connor got $800 of the purchase money and a contract calling for $450 per month, all of which would make his salary for the season $3,250, a very respectable sum, indeed, in these days of baseball combines and harsh reserve rules.

O'Connor will prove of great value to the Pittsburg club. That splendid individual team has backed a mass of baseball knowledge and brains within the backs. O'Connor is just the man it needs. He is a capital fellow to move men around by signals from the coacher's box. He will add immensely to the strength of the club.

"I desire to make one statement before I leave this town, with which I have spent a decade," said O'Connor yesterday. "That is, that the fact that John McGraw was added to it had nothing to do with the severance of my connection with the club. Professionally, I regard McGraw as the best ball player in the League. While in hot games of the past, he and I, both aggressive players, have had hot words, I have always restored him as a man of substance and a personal friend. I think he feels the same way toward me. I would just as soon play for him as for any man alive. For he is a ball player all the way. I have fought him too often to doubt his manliness. He is a great player and a great captain. Why should I refuse to play for him? Leaving, I wish to say that McGraw is the right thing; no con, no flash for the stands, no jolly to catch the public hand, nothing but straight baseball to win. I bespeak for him the support and good wishes of my friends in this city. He can play the game as I think it should be played. The stands may not see him do it, but he is doing it all the time.

"The same thing holds good with regard to Robinson. The big fellow has always been a friend of mine. He is a man who knows no superior as a catcher. I take off my hat to both of them. In my dealings with them I have found them straightforward, up-and-up fellows, fighters on the field and good fellows off it.

"I have had no trouble with the club owners. I owe them nothing; they are not in my debt. They paid me according to contract, I served them the same way. As for Mr. Tebeau, if I had any trouble with him I could adjust it without resort to the newspapers.

"It is true that several times in the past five years I could have done better had I been able to get away from the Cleveland club. Baseball is not governed by sentiment. I could hardly expect the club to release me when it felt that I was needed. Of course, I hated to see opportunities get away from me, but such occurances are common enough in a career of a player.

"I am glad to be able to embrace the opportunity offered me in Pittsburg. By doing so I make more money than I could make with St. Louis. Of course, my home is in this city, but to a baseball player all towns look alike if he gets the money.

"I never felt better in my life and I will do what I can for Pittsburg.

"The men I leave in St. Louis; that is, the rank and file of the club, from McGraw to 'Rer,' the bat boy, are all right, straight as a string, and clean as a whistle. With none of them have I had anything but lots of fun. They have my best wishes."

"I see that you call Powell's chest a Phidian torso," remarked Jere Hunt yesterday. Mr. Hunt, you know, is a connoisseur of beauty, male as well as female, and is quite as much up in art as is Bill Joyce, who has been asked to umpire the beaux arts display at the Paris Exposition, as well as the ribbons in the ceramic department, and help decipher hieroglyphics and identify Egyptian mummies. Bill is up in everything from back beer to esoteric Buddhism, and can discuss the street-car strike, politics or the Babylonian with a fluency and cogency that is really astonishing. But that has nothing to do with Powell's swell shape. "Well," continued Mr. Hunt, "the proudest product of Phidia's chisel was but a common, yellow mud pie, compared to Powell's 46-inch chest. Jack has the swellest front I ever clapped an optic on. If his props had been twisted when he was carrying boilers and his hair sunburnt when playing truant, he would be about the handsomest thing Chicago ever turned out. Hard labor gave his legs a skew which debars him from a leading part of a female impersonator. But from the waist up he is a model of nature's best handiwork. He combines the grace of the Apollo Belvidere with the huskiness of Hercules, and the power of Samson. His skin is so white that it makes Parian marble look like Chicago canal water.

"I visited Hot Springs when the St. Louis players were there last spring. One of the most striking things I saw there was the contrast in the bathrooms between the healthy athletes of the ball team and the unhappy invalids, who form such a majority of Hot Springs population. You see physical wrecks, men in every stage of disease run down, worn shacks of bones. A room full of them would be swamping experiences and comparing symptoms, when in would elbow Mr. Powell in a parody of 'Psyche at the Bath.' Chest out like a pouter pigeon, arms like roped shafts of steel, skin showing with oceans of blood. Instantly the invalids would shut off their troubles and all turn to look upon this Kloth. All unconscious of the scrutiny, Mr. Powell would unlimb himself with a hairy fist, full upon the bosom, and growl, 'Gee, cull, but I feel fine as silk.'

"'Had a great work to-day. Feel as if I can put that dining room on the high road to Punkville. Them coons better sideshow when I order to-day.' The invalids would stare until Jack left the room, then roll over with a sigh. It really was a shame to let Cy Young, Kitzpatrick, Powell, Donovan and other physical marvels come into the same bathroom with the poor sick at the Springs."

Jones hits like a man who may do good work for his team at bat. McGraw seems to have the Hanlon trick, or maybe Hanlon has the McGraw trick, of making his pitchers help out with the club. If they cannot hit it out they can bunt, hit to right, advance runners instead of forcing them or popping up flies.

Tom Murphy, late ground keeper at the baseball park, is now a special city officer. Murphy is thriving amazingly, looks fat as Robinson and is in love with his luck and St. Louis. He says that he is through with baseball forever.

O'Day called a foul strike on McGraw yesterday. Then Johnnie ran up on the next one and tore it out for a hard single to right. In the same position exactly the day before he hit Lewis for a three-bagger. Pitchers better not ask for foul strikes on McGraw any more.

"Seems to me," spake Mr. Edward Lincoln Boole, "that it is pretty right that we should call McGraw 'Muggy' now. Nothing in a name, of course, but really where does it come in? McGraw has not what we call a 'mug.' Now if it was Tim Donohue, Jimmy Williams, Zimmer, Tim Hurst or Jimmy Barret I would not kick for these fellows have the face that wins the sobriquet. But McGraw is a sharp visaged little Yankee, with curls of the come-all-ye rough and tumble aspect behind his lineaments. It was all right to call him 'Muggy' when he visited here and we were after him. But now that he is with us, why, cut it out, cut it out." And Mr. Boole went across the street to the race track and won enough money to pay current expenses.

Bill Phillips is laid up in Cincinnati with an attack of malarial fever, and it is likely that he will not be able to go on the next Eastern trip. This leaves the Cincinnati club with only one right-handed pitcher, Ed Scott. Breitenstein, Newton and Hahn all pitch from the other side of their anatomy.

Virgil Garvin must be a pitcher. The Chicago Tribune says: "Old fans remember the game in Chicago some years ago when Delehanty, the man feared by every pitcher in the business, made four home runs and a single in five times at bat. He did not do it yesterday. Thrice did this batting giant step up to the plate and step back again after having swung viciously and vainly three times at the twisters served up by Garvin. Twice more did he face the Texan and feeble grounders were the results. Never did a pitcher receive more genuine applause than Garvin after each striking out of Delehanty. For minutes the cheers hung in the air and again and again did Garvin doff his headpiece before the crowd would be satisfied. It was a feat that has never been equaled and probably never will be again."

Bad Bobbles by Grady and Hickman Defeated the Giants.

McPARTLAND'S EASY GAME.

Punched Young Billy Ernst All Over the Ring.

New York, May 22.—Kid McPartland had an easy time with Billy Ernst at the Seaside Sporting Club, Coney Island, to-night. Young Starr of Philadelphia, who was to have met McPartland, failed to appear and Ernst, who was billed to go on to the preliminary, was substituted.

They were to have gone twenty-five rounds at catch weights, but the referee stopped them in the sixth and awarded McPartland the decision.

Ernst had no chance at any time. The Kid's old body punch was much in evidence and in the fourth round Ernst commenced to go to the floor. After being down almost a dozen times and the last time looking as though willing to stay there, the referee interfered.

In a preliminary bout scheduled for twelve rounds at catch weights between Jack McConnell of Philadelphia and Jack Ryan of Brooklyn, Ryan had the better of the slugging. In the tenth round, when McConnell was almost gone, his seconds threw up the sponge and Ryan was declared the winner.

Leon and SaxReid Draw.

Cleveland, O., May 22.—Joe Maxfield of Cleveland and Oliver Leon of New York fought a twenty-round draw to-night before the Phoenix Men's Gymnasium.
