WRIT OF MANDAMUS ASKED.

Hagan Opera-house Stockholders Go to Court.

John H. Havlin, Arthur E. Geserich and Rufus J. Delano applied to the Circuit Court yesterday for a writ of mandamus to compel Jacob Lampert and Joseph M. Ghio to certify to the election of directors of the Hagan Opera-house Company, held June 19, last, at which the plaintiffs were elected directors. Under the rules of the company, the election of directors should be held the first Monday in June of each year. The president of the Board of Directors called a meeting for June 4 of this year, but did not advertise it in a certain paper, but it is asserted. A meeting of stockholders was called for June 19, at which Lampert and Ghio were appointed inspectors. At the meeting, Havlin, Geserich and Delano were elected three members of the board, which is composed of five members. J. C. Jaminovitz, president of the old Board of Directors, stated that the election was declared illegal on the advice of his attorney, E. Taylor Bryan. Mr. Jaminovitz said that Mr. Delano claimed to have proxies, but did not show them on the day of the election, and did not file them until about ten days later.

Mr. Bryan said it is a question as to whether the proxies are to be recounted. Mr. Ghio certified to the election of Havlin, Geserich and Delano, but Mr. Lampert would not, and at a meeting of the old Board of Directors, the election was declared illegal. Mr. Bryan said.

The property of the Hagan Opera-house Company, at Tenth and Pine streets, is advertised to be sold under deed of trust to-day.

BLOOD BEHIND JESTER'S WAGONS.

Several Witnesses Saw the Crimson Spot and Stains in Hulen's Lane.

BODY SEEN IN BED OF WAGON.

Two Ladies Testify That They Viewed a Corpse Floating in the Creek the Following Spring.

REPUBLIC SPECIAL.

New London, Mo., July 16.—This has been decidedly the worst day of the trial for Alexander Jester.

The local interest in the case is increasing if the large audience is any index to the situation.

Judge Theodore Brace of the Supreme Court came into the room this afternoon, and recess was granted so that the members of the bar might greet him. He shook hands with the aged defendant and remained an interested spectator all afternoon.

The evidence submitted was greater in quantity and more convincing in character than any yet disclosed in one day.

Court opened this morning with Alfred Fields on the stand.

Alfred Fields's Testimony.

Jester fastened his eyes on the witness and hardly removed them during the examination. This is his custom with all the witnesses. Sorrowfully and steadily he watches them. Fields said he had a horse trade with Tom Banks in the winter of 1871, in Hulen's lane. He saw two movers, one an old man, the other a young man. He said the boy bought some feed from Banks. There was a buffalo calf in the old man's wagon. The old man proposed a horse trade. Fields refused. He then asked the boy if he would trade off one of his horses. The boy said his horses were not for trade or sale. Fields could not identify the prisoner as the man who drove the wagon. The large bay team was in front and driven by the boy. Witness said he never saw but the one buffalo calf in his life, and that fact caused him to remember the events related.

Here Captain Hugh Stewart was recalled for cross-examination by Mr. Cullen. The blood spot he saw in the road was near the center of the road, just between the tracks made by horses and that made by the vehicle. He testified that it continued to snow nearly all day. At that time there were many rabbits, turkeys and prairie chickens in that country and they were hunted considerably.

Saw the Blood Spot.

The wife of Captain Stewart came next. She said: "In January, 1871, I went horseback with my husband to my father's house. I passed through Hulen's lane. I saw a blood spot as large as a dinner plate in the snow. It was nearly the center of the road and appeared to be fresh. It was just east of the West Madison road. We met the negro, Manex, leading hay and saw two movers' wagons in the road, but they turned south off of the Paris road. We met Colonel Telter and I think the Brown girls. I did not see Mr. W. W. Reilly nor Shrewsbury, nor did I know him at that time."

The remainder of her testimony agrees with that of her husband, already published in The Republic, except with reference to the time of day. She thought it was about 10 o'clock in the morning, while Stewart thought it was in the afternoon.

W. W. Shaw was examined by J. H. Rodes. Witness was Jester in jail in Paris and asked him if his name was Jester. Defendant said: "No, my name is Hill. I am being persecuted by John W. Guthrie money, but I am sure I will be cleared."

Crimson Spots in the Snow.

The most important testimony of the morning was given by Mrs. Amanda Clark. Her testimony follows:

"In 1871 I lived with my father, William Brown, about five miles from Middle Grove. My sister and I went to the Grove in January or February, 1871, riding horseback. A deep snow was on the ground. We met a man driving a covered wagon with a second team tied to the rear. We bowed, but he merely looked at us angrily and excitedly and did not speak. I saw something which I was sure was a human being covered by comforts in the rear wagon. It seemed to rock with the motion of the wagon. I saw blood spots scattered along in the snow, and then a large pool the size of a dinner plate, then more little spots, and last of all a large spot with many tracks about it. We told no one of this in Middle Grove. We were greatly excited. The blood was scattered at intervals over a mile and three-quarters of Hulen's lane. I told my parents and the neighbors.

Body in the Creek.

"That spring when the ice went out of the creeks my sister and I went down to Rodes Creek to see the high water. We saw a body floating feet downward in the water. The hair was long and dark-colored."

Cross-examination. "We met Captain Stewart and wife in Hulen's lane, also W. W. Reilly. Saw two negroes. Don't remember meeting Kelley, Dawson, Tenford, John A. Reilly, W. E. Maxey and Shrewsbury. The creek that day in 1871 was not fordable. I followed the body down the stream about fifty yards and saw it more plainly as it passed over a riffle. I was then about 17 years old and my sister was 21. I saw the blood about 10 or 11 o'clock in the morning.

"I said at Paris last October that the body was in the front wagon. Afterwards I became convinced that it was in the rear wagon."

Fanny Butterfly, a sister of Mrs. Amanda Clark, nee Brown, testified substantially as did Mrs. Clark. She told of the horseback ride, the falling snow, the old man and the two wagons, his manner, his refusal to speak and the dead body in the rear wagon. She stated positively she saw blood in the Hulen lane after they passed the two wagons. She was sure there was a human body under the covering in the big wagon. The blood spots began to appear at intervals and then there was a spot a foot in diameter. Then there were more spots, increasing in number, and finally a large spot and many human tracks around it and tracks leading back to the wagon road. The girls stopped their horses and examined the blood and tracks. She said the prisoner at the bar drove the front wagon. She saw a body in Rodes Creek that spring going down with the ice. The body fell on its coat. There were striped suspenders on the body and she saw his hair was long and dark. A search was made later, but was unsuccessful. Witness was then 21 years old.

She told her parents of these events and the father commanded the girls to say very little about it, as they were only young girls and he did not want them connected with any trouble. Witness confessed, on cross-examination, that she stated at Paris last October that she thought the body was in the front wagon, but on reflection she thought it was the rear vehicle. Her testimony was given in a quiet, positive way. Thus far she is one of the strongest witnesses the prosecution has introduced. She said the first large spot of blood was near the north wagon track, while the larger spot was some feet north of the track.

Blood Trail Behind Wagons.

W. C. Kelley, then living near the scene of the alleged murder, was out one morning in midwinter looking for some escaped stock. He was going south towards Hulen's lane and saw, about three-eighths of a mile away, two covered wagons. He saw the driver of the front wagon get out of his wagon and go back to the rear wagon and after a time the man tied the horses to the front wagon, climbed in his own vehicle and drove on. When Kelley reached that road he saw blood stains in the snow. Later he saw drops of blood scattered along for three-quarters of a mile. The wagons drove on and passed rapidly down the East Madison road.

Cross-examination: This was in the winter of '70 and '71. It was about 10 or 11 o'clock. The wagons stopped just east of the mouth of the West Madison road. They were there long enough for witness to walk one-eighth of a mile through the snow, or about three to five minutes.

They were over a quarter of a mile away. He saw no pool of blood, but saw stains and drops of blood in the deep snow. If murder was committed there that day the man came nearer seeing the foul deed than any other man. The witness did not remember seeing any one in the road. It is considered astonishing by the defense how so many people were in Hulen's lane that day and yet did not see each other. This witness was in his seventeenth year at that time.

Saw a Body in the Wagon.

The next witness was the last of the day. His testimony was never before given, but he is unquestionably the most important witness yet placed upon the stand.

W. H. Maxey of Boone County, formerly of Monroe County, was called to the stand. In the war he was a Confederate soldier, but in 1871 he lived two miles east of Hulen's lane, near Rolls Creek. In the winter of 1871 he met two teams and two wagons on the Sturgeon road, going south. In front was a small team with a buffalo calf in the wagon. He saw a man covered with a dirty quilt. The face was partially exposed, and Mr. Maxey thought the man was drunk or asleep.

Cross-examination: The rear wagon was the larger. They were both some distance south of Hulen's lane. Witness thought the front team was a small, ponyish one, hitched to a light wagon, while the rear horses were large bay fellows. Witness saw the older Gates a few weeks later hunting for his lost son, but did not tell him what he saw in the winter. On the east side of the rear wagon the curtain was rolled up some inches. The man's face was toward the west, his head toward the rear, partly covered. Witness said that he talked very little about what he saw, because he did not want to testify in court. Mr. Maxey is 56 years old.

TESTIMONY IN GOEBEL CASE.

Victims Clothes Exhibited in Court —Telegrams Introduced.

Georgetown, Ky., July 16.—The trial of former Secretary of State Caleb Powers, charged with being accessory to the Goebel murder, was resumed at 9:30 o'clock. A letter signed by Caleb Powers in which the expression was used, "I have had a hard time getting Taylor and others to start, but they are all right now, and this thing will soon end," was filed and made a part of the record.

Telegrams sent through the office at Barbourville, Powers's home, were introduced as evidence and identified by the manager of the Barbourville office. James Eggleston of Frankfort was ordered to bring into court the railroad register showing the time of arrival and departure of trains at Frankfort the day of the assassination. The purpose of this is to contradict the claim of the defense that Jim Howard, who is alleged to have fired the shot, arrived after the assassination.

Howard claimed that the train on which he came did not arrive till after the shooting, but the register showed that it arrived some thirty minutes previous.

The defense objected to introduction of several telegrams as evidence, saying they were only copies. The objection was overruled. The first telegrams read were from Powers to the various captains charged with the business of getting up the carcasses of mountain men to go to Frankfort, and most of them read:

"How many can you insure from your county? Wire immediately."

(Signed) "C. POWERS."

The defense filed a formal objection to their competency as evidence.

Doctor Seth South of Frankfort, one of the physicians who attended Goebel, testified as to the wound. He was followed by Colonel Jack Chinn, who was with Goebel when the shooting occurred. Chinn said there had been crowds in the Statehouse yard every day during January. At the time of the assassination the yard was deserted except possibly one or two persons about the gate. He said the first shot seemed to come from a window in the Secretary of State's office. The witness could not tell where the other shots came from. Witness said he saw a window in Powers's office slightly raised. Colonel Chinn identified the bloodstained garments as those worn by Goebel at the time of the shooting. During this ordeal, the two Goebel brothers, Justus and Arthur, sorrowfully looked in sad reverence. The defendant Powers, engaged in reading, did not look upon the clothing. Continuing, the witness said that in eight or ten minutes after the assassination the troops took charge of the Statehouse. The cross-examination did not reveal anything new. W. B. Anderson, who kept a hotel at Barbourville in January, when Caleb and John Powers, with Wharton Golden, Charles Finley and others held conferences there, was introduced. He was withdrawn by the prosecution without failing to answer seven questions which the prosecution expected him to answer. He will be called later. His son, Finley Anderson, was then put on the stand, but did not conclude his testimony. Young Anderson, it is said, would give important testimony against Powers, after which the elder Anderson would be recalled to corroborate him.

Vesuvius Has Lost Its Cone.

The fiery crater of Vesuvius, now suddenly silent, was explored by some scientific men who discovered that the cone had disappeared. Several theories are propounded as to why the eruption ceased at a time when the output was the strongest, also regarding the disappearance of the cone. The general belief is that the cessation was due to subsidence, and which is looked upon as providential. Such a happening was as unexpected as are stomach disorders with which people suddenly find themselves afflicted. Slight symptoms are neglected, until dyspepsia is chronic. The remedy to take at the slightest disturbance of the digestion is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. This is a valuable medicine absolutely unequaled in all cases of constipation, indigestion, biliousness or malaria, fever and ague. It brings about a healthy condition of the bowels, increasing the flow of gastric juices and improving the appetite. Be sure to give it a trial.

YOUNG WOMAN'S LONG TRAMP.

Walked From San Francisco to Saginaw on a Wager.

Saginaw, Mich., July 16.—Miss Marie Schmidt, aged 18 years, reached this city last night from San Francisco, having covered the entire distance on foot, about 4,700 miles.

Miss Schmidt left San Francisco March 25 last on a $500 wager, made by a social club of San Francisco, that she could not reach Saginaw by August 1 and beg her living en route.
