Yesterday's Games.

[illegible]

To-Day's Schedule.

Pittsburg at St. Louis. | Brooklyn at Phila.
Chicago at New York.

Umpire Robert Emslie aggravated and provoked the limited crowd of spectators which saw yesterday's baseball game between the St. Louis and Pittsburg clubs at League Park. Mr. Emslie, without giving the slightest premonition of his direful intent, called the game on account of darkness at the end of the seventh inning, and just after Pittsburg had scored the one run necessary to place it ahead of St. Louis, 3 to 2. It was quite light at the time, broad daylight in fact, and it was by no means too dark to play half an hour later.

Mr. Emslie narrowly escaped a mobbing after the game. The crowd was small and half frozen, for it was a chilly afternoon. Mr. Emslie's apparently unjustifiable decision, which seemed a hate-inspired favor to the Pittsburg club, provoked the human nature in the stands that they went for him. He was rushed and hooted to his dressing-room, a crowd of police affording him protection en route. The police stood guard at the dressing-room door until he had changed his official attire for a street suit. Then they escorted him to a street car. The car was surrounded by a howling mob. Mr. Emslie was called out of his seat very often. He did not seem to mind it a bit. He has been there before. So he said, at least.

Neither the Pittsburg nor St. Louis team seemed to have any idea of Mr. Emslie's intention to call the game until he acted. The Pittsburg people raced for their bus and rapidly drove away, fearful, no doubt, lest the umpire might be persuaded to reconsider his decision by the strenuous arguments of the St. Louis players. The home team had not a scintilla of an idea of Emslie's intention. The owners and managers—there are two managers, you know—were much surprised, chagrined and disgusted by the finale. Mr. Emslie said it was too dark to play. Mr. Emslie stood alone in his opinion. It really seemed a matter of very slight importance, yet the spectators made a deal of fuss over it. So there must have been something in it after all.

The impropriety and unfairness of the decision may be argued by the action of the crowd. Had Spectators pelted an umpire in the dog days in the full flush of the season when the team they supported was in the pennant contest, such an incident might not occasion particular comment, for they are, unfortunately, common enough. But when their team has not even a glimmer of a chance to achieve honor or position, when they are half-frozen as they sit in the stand, and when the season is tottering to a belated grave, it must needs be a bad decision indeed that will so provoke a crowd as spectators at League Park were provoked yesterday. The fact that Pittsburg was not sure of second place and was racing for it made the affair look worse. It did seem as if Mr. Emslie was unduly partial to Pittsburg, and at such a time and place partiality was dangerous and provoking.

It was a very pretty game of ball that Mr. Emslie cut down in the flower of its adolescence. Mr. John O'Connor, late lieutenant of the late Manager Tebeau, was in it up to his thorax. It was Mr. O'Connor's timely whop, his opportune bunale that put Pittsburg ahead in the seventh inning. It was, in all human probability, Mr. O'Connor's timely thought that induced Mr. Emslie to call the game. St. Louis people did not think Mr. O'Connor was a manager until he left Mr. Tebeau. Then they learned a lot of things and had their eyes opened to Mr. O'Connor's commanding ability.

Pittsburg started in business business with Deacon Young in the first round. Mr. Cleary trotted on table and Beaumont singled. Kruger played faster billiards and mumbled pen with Ritchey's grounder. Wagner flew out, but O'Brien laid his club against the leather for a single. This scored two runs. St. Louis came back in the second when the Tebeaucan Infidels, who is playing score card for the home team, whopped a triple to right and the nibby Mr. Donlin pursued him with a double. Then a sacrifice and an error sent in Mr. Donlin with the tying run.

They hung up tucs and played baseball for the ensuing five innings. Elie's work at short was wonderfully fine, indeed. In the seventh inning, after two were out, Williams doubled. O'Connor's opportune crack rang the bell at the plate, with what was the winning run. Mr. Emslie walked away and then ensued the exciting scenes fully set forth above. The score:

PERSONAL NOTES OF PLAYERS.

Catcher Robinson Did Not Come Home With the St. Louis Team.

Catcher William Robinson, of the St. Louis club did not come home with the team. He left Pittsburg on Saturday night for Baltimore. Mr. Robinson's father, mother is very seriously ill at his home in Iowa City. The good wishes of the team go with him. For years athletics has monopolized the field with the bell will go to Mr. Robinson in his trouble. He stuck to the club and caught when his little girl was so sick it was feared would be my daughter. Where was he called? Pittsburg. Fred Burgess, now signed manager, has Robinson for catcher. Official rules. Next year Robinson will be getting $2,500 from the league. Mr. Hadow will be participate to get $1,500. Then he will be about lamenting his hard fortune and wondering how "guys like that fat director get the money."

Mr. H. Brunner said yesterday that his recent trip had been very pleasant and saw in Cincinnati, Louisville and Chicago. He was excellent in Chicago and Cincinnati. The teams played good ball, winning five, losing four and tying two. Mr. Hedgepeth said that Young, Powell, Jones and Stahl are pitching very good ball just now.

M. S. Robison stated yesterday that the St. Louis club had no trouble, and he thinks he would not trade one boy for any other league player. He said: "I like first player," said Mr. Robison, "I think he has a good good enough to win save perhaps one or two positions. We can buy men in the spring to fill these positions. In the second place we are not allowed to carry any loan from the American League into the National. Most of the alternate teams have gone beyond their reach. When the time comes we will look over some men to fill any weak spot we may detect in the team. There will be lots of desirable men on the market for sale and trade after the season.

Mr. Donlin, the young man with the Mardi Gras reputation, was a very promising player. He played the game on the field and on the bases in a way which Mr. Irwin, the stands that he was a little fast. He is a process which could be best achieved with an ax.

That little fellow Kruger can hit and throw, and will [illegible] Mr. Kruger is a good catcher, and he is [illegible] being "sore and in pain" is not very generally a complaint [illegible] from the.

A player of the Pittsburg club said yesterday that Jack O'Connor received $125 for his work. Our opinion. Mr. O'Connor has the [illegible] money without so much as [illegible] Jack.

FIM'S REMARKABLE IMPROVEMENT.

Marion-Sims Man Played Wonderful Game at Rolla—C. B. C. vs. High.

Football games yesterday centered on the great work of Howard Fim at full back in the game against the School of Mines same day.

When playing the High School game the week earlier, Fim appeared to be weak on kicking, but that must have been the result of practicing to a small lot, and at night, where no kicking would be done. In the week Fim had to improve in punting, the Pastime athletics and his Rolla game, as well as his all-round playing, showed marvelous improvement in comparison to Rolla. The ex-Notre Dame man's goal kick from the thirty-yard line to the most good that has been made from the field this season about St. Louis. Fim was the wonder show in the Rolla game, making gains both round the end and through the line. In the latter kind of play he was superior to the Mound City.

The failure of the Carleton eleven to play the Christian Brothers College Saturday was a great disappointment to the candidates out in Cote Brilliante, all of whom are playing very strong and fast ball. Each one of the boys is confident of making a position and fully expected to show the Tigers for placing that he was a little in the best when the team lined up against the Carletons. The lads are in much need of the condition and so ambitious that it is impossible to keep them at anything like easy practice. Once lined up, they play as hard as they would if the Washington men were in front of them instead of the husky little scrubs.

The best game of the season up to the Thanksgiving Day scrimmage should be served on the college campus next Saturday, when the High School and C. B. C. eleven come together on the gridiron. High's defeat by McKendree gives the brothers the preference, as they play harder and have the advantage of a coach who not only teaches them new plays, but also watches over their condition at all times. The High boys are coached occasionally, which does not do them a particle of good. One man shows them a play and the coach gives the time to see that they make it properly. The next day they are taught another play by another man. Captain Moore has come to the conclusion that he can do better by giving his team thorough practice on what it already knows.

FEARED CHASTISEMENT—Willie Sutton, the 12-year-old son of Henry Sutton, a negro living at No. 2[illegible] Rodkin street, leaped from the second-story window of his residence yesterday afternoon in order to avoid chastisement threatened by his father. Both of the boy's wrists were broken. Doctor Kuhn of No. 2302 North Grand avenue pronounced the boy's injuries slight.
