PROTECTING THEIR INTEREST.

Local Merchants Combining to Prevent the Traffic of Commercial Travelers. Within the past few days there has been established here a Commercial Travelers' Protective Agency. The enterprise has been started to defeat the law levying an annual tax of $200 on commercial travelers. The wholesale merchants think it will have the effect to defeat them also. Robert Fletcher, who represents the Travelers and Traders Union, whose headquarters is in New York, has rented Seaton Hall, at the corner of Ninth and D streets, and started an agency. The scheme is to allow commercial travelers to exhibit their stock in the hall on tables and have the merchants come there and make their selections. Also, for the agency to purchase a number of regular licenses and charge agents from small houses, who cannot afford to take out a license, a certain sum for the use of their license. The scheme and pledge themselves to do this in this manner and several hundred dollars per year realized. The wholesale merchants here have signed a protest against the scheme and pledge themselves to do this in this manner and several hundred dollars per year realized. Water in the Upper Reservoir.

As stated in yesterday's Critic, Health Officer Townshend and the board of police surgeons visited the upper reservoir to discover if possible the cause of the fishy odor of the water. The investigation was made on the order of the Commissioners, who have received complaints about the fishy odor in the water. The scope of the investigation was extended to exploring the two creeks which contribute their water to the reservoir. There were two buildings, a residence and a summer hotel on one creek, and a summer hotel on the other. Samples of water were taken from the creeks, and also from the reservoirs and the mouth of the creek. There will also be samples taken from hydrants in the city, and will be analyzed by Professor De Smet. The work of moving the waste well below the mouth of the Great Falls will begin to-morrow. President Baughman and the directors of the canal, with Captain Symons, will visit Great Falls tomorrow to ascertain the best manner in which to proceed in the removal.

A Clever Swindler Captured.

Lieutenant of Police Arnold and Private Detective McDevitt captured and divided the diamond of Willard's Hotel about 7 o'clock last night, when the guests were in the act of sitting down to dinner, by putting one of the guests under arrest as a swindler. The man arrested was a well-dressed young man, who registered as E. M. Stanley and wife. He had a suite of rooms at the hotel and one at the Ebbitt House. He was arrested at the hotel. He resisted, as he left the hotel, and tried to swallow a forged check for $100 on A. Saks & Co. The lieutenant knocked him down and recovered the check. His scheme was to rob Jacobs Bros., the jewelers. He ordered a valuable diamond cross, which was to be delivered at the hotel, and if his wife liked it, would be purchased. He said his wife was rich. He intended to leave the jeweler sitting in the parlor while he stepped into the next room—his wife's bedroom—to show her the diamond. He then returned to the bedroom by another door and escaped. He had no wife at the hotel. Mr. Jacobs suspected that something was wrong and notified Detective McDevitt and Flint.

The School Board.

The school board at its meeting last night, granted certificates to candidates at the recent examinations as follows: Third class certificates—Julia M. Bartlett, J. G. Falek, Annie M. Golling, William W. Francis, Louis L. Given, Alice Morgan, R. S. Peters, Ida G. Myers and Alice G. Maehouse; second class, Marion P. Keene; first class, F. Z. Carlson, W. B. Evans.

An Audacious Thief.

Blanch Bennett, a white woman, closely veiled, pleaded guilty in the Police Court to-day to stealing some cheap jewelry from the Palais Royal, and got two months in jail. She was arrested on the 29th inst. and the stolen jewelry was found in her stocking. The case on which she was arrested was a snare game that she had been playing. Mr. Claggett's Candidacy.

Mr. W. H. Claggett of this city announces through the following circular letter to his friends and acquaintances that he is in the field as a candidate for appointment to a District Commissionership:

Banking on Wrapping Paper.

Rudolph Von Baron, the prince of boarding-house boys, has been living at Mrs. Harriet A. Harrison's house, on North Capitol street, so Mrs. Harrison stated in the Police Court this morning with the reputation of being wealthy. On coming to her house he gave her a tin box, carefully sealed, in which he said were $275,000 bonds. Recently she became suspicious and had the box broken open. It contained a lot of wrapping paper, a story book and some stationery. The Critic reporter was informed that Von Baron had victimized a number of charitable people. The case went over until Thursday.

Chaplain Lindsay's Re-election.

Many prominent members of the incoming Congress and other friends of the highly esteemed gentleman in question are in the city. Rev. John Lindsay, D. D., of old St. John's, Georgetown, to allow his name to be presented for re-election to the Chaplaincy of the next House of Representatives—a position which he has heretofore filled with great dignity and acceptableness.

Hugh O'Neil's Trial.

When the Criminal Court met this morning and the trial of Hugh O'Neil, charged with embezzling tickets from the Pennsylvania Railroad, was resumed, Mr. Williams was informed that the officials concluded that the Government had not any case. They would not present any evidence. Argument followed.

Justice of the Peace O'Neil's Trial.

Justice of the Peace O'Neil this afternoon took the case of Georgia Truso, who was charged with the murder of a society of Virginia for $35 back dues paid by F. A. V. Latane, now deceased, and for back dues from March 10. The defense is that the money was not paid to him, but when applying for membership, and besides, he did not pay up her dues and was thus entitled to no benefits.

POTOMAC RIVER IMPROVEMENTS.

A Satisfactory Showing of Progress on the Tidal Gate Work. Major Peter C. Hains has submitted to General Newton his report of operations on the Potomac River improvement during the month of May. The amount expended during the month was $2,968.00, and the amount still available June 1 was $211,942.77. One of the hydraulic dredges began work in the Virginia channel near Eashy's Point, but owing to the breakage of machinery performed only 27 hours work during the month. Dredge No. 2 made 301 hours' work in the Washington channel below Long Bridge, and excavated and deposited 59,042 cubic yards of material. The work was not completed by a hydraulic dredge.

The embankment construction has progressed favorably, the dredge Atlanta having excavated 1,700 cubic yards. The Washington channel side and worked continuously night and day, excavating and depositing 17,300 cubic yards.

The second of the several most prominent reservoirs already conveniently high. The dredge Alaska constructed about 1,000 cubic yards of embankment. More than 8,500 cubic yards of stone were delivered during the month. A channel has been successfully dredged from Georgetown point to Georgetown, about 1,000 feet in length, to admit any vessel which can come up the river as far as Arsenal point.

Another similar channel along the Washington Channel below Long Bridge has been commenced. About two-thirds of the marshes have been raised above ordinary high-tide. The embankments are being completed in the most satisfactory operations in progress during May continue during the present month. During May $7,820 was expended on the work, and $20,042 is still available. The four principal groups of rocks have been removed to the required depth of 30 feet at twelve places, and at five other places one has been entirely and two partially removed.

THE MILLIONAIRE SPORT.

How George Law Goes Unharnessed Among the Roughs. It was from a notorious resort of gamblers, pugilists and thieves that I saw the owner of seven millions emerge, says a New York correspondent of the Boston Herald. The time was past midnight, and the place was a gambling hall in the rear of his person. A heavy gold chain led across his vest to a probably fine watch, in his studs and rings were diamonds worth $10,000, and his wallet is seldom empty.

This was George Law—not the famous railroad builder who accumulated an enormous fortune in the days when millionaires were made in the rear of his person. This was a tall, good-looking man of thirty-five. Why he is not robbed in the den of out which he brought so much to the city is a mystery. He is the most liberal patron of sports in New York, the demi-god of the sporting fraternity, a free dispenser of money among the roughs, and it is a wonder that he is not more so. He is a man of many talents, and he shall not be molested. Fear has more to do with this than love. The thief that robbed him would be hunted out of town by his followers.

It is said that he spends a hundred thousand dollars a year in purses for contests, materials for revelry and direct gifts to professional athletes. This is his diversion, and he is a man of many talents, and he shall not be molested. Fear has more to do with this than love. The thief that robbed him would be hunted out of town by his followers.

A DECIDED FAILURE.

Close of the Fishing Season To-day. The Potomac fishing season, which closes to-day, has been almost a complete failure, so say some of the fishermen.

The herring catch was the greatest for many years, while that of the shad was the smallest. The prices of shad were about high, but the herring were low, sometimes as high as $20 and never below $14 per hundred. Herring, however, have seldom been lower in price since the war. At the opening of the season these fish found ready sale at $10.50 per thousand. About mid-way the season the quotations were $20 to $25 per thousand, while nearing the end of the season large catches were sold as low as 60c per thousand.

The fishermen say that what they gained on the shad they lost in handling herring. The fisheries of the Potomac have always been of special note among the food-furnishing industries of the Union. Of late years special interest has been manifested in the fisheries of the Potomac, and the interest of the Potomac had, by reason of its contiguity to the headquarters of the United States Fish Commission, in this city, become a matter of special interest.

The most prominent and most carefully worked fields of fish culture under the supervision of the national fishermen. The scant supply of shad in the Potomac this season is said to be owing to the lateness of the season. The cool weather drove them to the Hudson and Delaware rivers, where the catch this season was unusually large.
