GRAINS CLOSE EASIER ON SATURDAY LIQUIDATION.

MAY OPTIONS ARE UNCHANGED.

Weather News, Forecasting Snow, Regarded as Favorable to New Crop.

In the local grain market Saturday most of the legitimate conditions were bullish, but there was general selling by small traders, who were not willing to carry their lines over Sunday. Cables were higher and receipts of both wheat and corn were only slightly in excess of the recent average. Deliveries up to date have been comparatively small. Much of the late selling was based on predictions of snow and continued moderate weather.

Little effort was made to bolster the price of corn, but there was fair buying by professional interests on every downturn.

Dec. options in both wheat and corn showed slight losses and the May option closed unchanged.
