DENVER WOMAN IS A SUCCESSFUL BLACKSMITH.

Mrs. Orrock Says Her Husband's Death Left Her Without Means and She Took Up His Calling.

Denver, Feb. 11.—Women follow queer occupations in Colorado. There are women physicians and women lawyers here and in other States, but they have become so common that they excite scarcely passing notice. In Colorado, where woman suffrage has held sway so many years, women seem to be more independent and daring, if one may so term it. Two women constables were elected at the November election, one in Washington County and the other in Sedgwick County; there are two sisters mining in the old Creede silver district; a Denver woman drives a laundry wagon, and she had the exciting experience of being held up and robbed recently just like a man.

But all these occupations pale when compared to the work taken up by Mrs. L. L. Orrock of this city. Mrs. Orrock is a blacksmith. She doesn't make wheels and wagons with her own hands, but she operates the largest shop in Denver, has the city work and tires wagons for all the express companies, and repairs them, too. The fact that she keeps fifteen men constantly employed will give one an idea of the extent of her business.

Here her unusual occupation excites no more interest than if she were a man, and she goes about her work as if born to it. She would have her husband's place to sell at the business when her husband died, several years ago, but then she would not have had any means of livelihood. So when he passed away, leaving her with two children, the eldest just 7 years old, she decided to try and conduct the blacksmith shop, which was his principal asset. It was a magnificent idea, and it appeared for every woman who tried it in the thirties, and she never before had been asked to do any more laborious work than her household duties. She was small and frail then, and it is evident that her new occupation has agreed with her for now she exhibits strength in every movement of her well-formed person.

A little real name into Mrs. Orrock's face when she was asked to tell something about herself, and even the smoke in the shop could not hide a blush glanced out at the glowing forges. Her paints, the wheels, the partly finished wagons and the grimy, busy men, and said with a little smile.

There really isn't very much to tell. My husband's death left me without a means of livelihood, and I decided to try and carry on his business. Of course I was scared, but I succeeded.

Insane Man Performs on High Pole.

REPUBLIC SPECIAL.

San Jose, Feb. 11.—For two hours the citizens of Gilroy gazed at a man at the top of a ten-foot flagstaff, while he performed all kinds of perilous feats. Finally, by means of the rope, he descended head downward to the cross-bar, where he disrobed. At last he came down, head downward, and was taken into custody by Officer White. He proved to be John Ellis, a young man who had gone insane.

Catarrh

Whether it is of the nose, throat, stomach, bowels, or more delicate organs, catarrh is always debilitating and should never fail of attention.

It is a discharge from the mucous membrane when kept in a state of inflammation by an impure, commonly scrofulous, condition of the blood.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Cures all forms of catarrh, radically and permanently—it removes the cause and overcomes all the effects. Get Hood's.

HAS SUFFERED MUCH FOR RUSSIAN LIBERTY.

"Grandmother" Breshkoosky, Who Was Exiled to Siberia, Will Visit Revolutionary Party in San Francisco.

REPUBLIC SPECIAL.

San Francisco, Feb. 11.—Members of the local Russian revolutionary party are looking forward to the visit to this city early in March next of Mme. Katherine Breshkoosky, famed throughout Russia as "Grandmother" and a prominent member of the Socialist Revolutionary party of Russia. She is holding a series of meetings in the United States among her countrymen in the cause of Russian freedom.

Mme. Breshkoosky is now 60 years of age. Her father was a rich land owner and her husband is a minor judicial officer in Russia. As a young schoolgirl she is said to have met Prince Krapotkin, who was exiled because of his radical beliefs, and to have imbued from him ideas of liberty and charity that finally led to her being condemned to twenty years in a Siberian prison.

She served her sentence, being released about four years ago. She remained in Russia and became the teacher of the Socialist Revolutionary party. Of course her movements were kept from the authorities, but everywhere they heard of a certain "Grandmother," whose activity for the cause of liberty alarmed them.

It has been stated that the Russian Government spent much money to learn the identity of "Grandmother," but in this they failed signally. She remained in Russia until after the famous "trial of 193" was was comonly called the trial of that number of revolutionists who were shot, hanged or condemned to Siberia. This was in 1902.

Going to Sicily, where she took refuge for a time, Mme. Breshkoosky there planned her trip to America. Her first public appearance was made in New York about two months ago, and it was then for the first time that the Russian spies in this country learned who "Grandmother" was. She cares nothing for this, however, firmly declaring, it is said, that she will return to Russia after her American tour. She declares that she will at least die in her native country. Her object in touring this country is to secure the support of the American people, likewise their sympathy for the just reforms demanded by the people of Russia.

THREE DROWNED UNDER ICE.

Mill Pond Walk Fatal to Husband, Wife and Sister.

REPUBLIC SPECIAL.

Mount Holly, N. J., Feb. 11.—Within 200 yards of their home, Mr. and Mrs. Shinn S. Ballinger and the sister of the latter, Miss Taylor, composing an entire family, were drowned in Oliphant's mills pond, near Medford, in the afternoon, after having fallen through the ice into about 9 feet of water. A boy who lived with the Ballingers was in the yard at the house when he heard screams, and he reached the pond in time to see Mr. Ballinger disappear. The women drowned first, according to the boy's story.

It is believed they started to cross the pond to make a short cut to their home after visiting relatives. They had seen skaters on the ice and apparently thought there was no danger, but the part on which they walked was covered with snow and they could form no idea of its thickness. The bodies were quickly recovered.

H. B. IRVING TO PLAY HAMLET AT LONDON ADELPHI.

Sir Henry's Oldest Son Would Succeed Celebrated Parent as the First Actor of Great Britain.

London, Feb. 11.—London playgoers are curious to see if H. B. Irving, Sir Henry's eldest son, will make anything like as striking a success in the part of Hamlet as his famous sire did thirty years ago. Oddly enough, Harry Irving, who plays the Dane for the first time at the Adelphi, under the management of Otho Stuart, stands to-day almost exactly where his distinguished father stood prior to his appearance as Hamlet.

He has made himself recognized as one of the ablest actors on the British stage, but is not yet regarded as a "great" player. Of course, after the memorable night at the Lyceum, when Henry Irving first played Matthias in "The Bells" there was little doubt that he would take his place sooner or later as a tragedian of the first rank, but it was not until his Hamlet was seen at the same theater, in 1874, that he took his place at the head of his profession.

H. B. Irving—whose initials stand for Henry Broadribb—is 32, or slightly younger than his father when he appeared as the Prince of Denmark. It would be an exaggeration to say that his most successful performance so far—that of Sir William Beauvelere in "The Ambassador"—was as striking in its way as his father's acting in "The Bells," but this impersonation made it seem certain that the younger Irving would be soon at the top of the tree.

Unfortunately, since then H. B. Irving has had no part that gave him a chance to be great, for it is doubtful if his performance of Crichton in Barrie's play could have been bettered, and he was uncommonly good as Leichmere in Pinero's "Letty" and as Orlando in "The Twin Sister."

He is a student and writer, chiefly on matters connected with criminology, and has published two thoughtful works, "French Criminals of the Nineteenth Century" and "The Life of Judge Jeffreys."

His Hamlet will be a careful character study, whatever else it is, and he will have the advantage of being supported by the Adelphi company of old Bohemians, who, though they began badly a while ago with "The Prayer of the Sword," are now enjoying prosperity with "The Taming of the Shrew." In the coming production of "Hamlet," Oscar Asche will be the King and his wife, Lily Brayton, the Ophelia.

LOST WIFE BECAME A HERMIT.

Woman Deserted Husband and Five Children Three Years Ago.

REPUBLIC SPECIAL.

New York, Feb. 11.—The small hut in the Kearny (N. J.) Meadows, which Mrs. Elizabeth Stein herself erected, and which she has made her home for the last six months, has been torn down.

Mrs. Stein deserted her husband and five children, who reside in Pirampero avenue, Greenville, three years ago. Her husband and two of the elder children searched for her for many months and had given up all hope of ever seeing her again.

Chief of Police Tolen of Kearny, about two weeks ago, discovered Mrs. Stein living in a hotel on the meadows. She told him she was a widow and earned her living by doing washing at the neighboring houses. The Chief found on inquiry that she was supporting herself in this way. He surmised she might be the lost Mrs. Stein, although she denied her identity. Chief Tolen sent for her husband, who, with his eldest daughter, visited Kearny, identified the woman and took her back to her home in Greenville. Two days later Mrs. Stein was again occupying the hovel.

The Board of Health then took a hand in the matter, but despite all threats that the hovel would be pulled down over her head and that she would be taken to an insane asylum, she refused to leave.

The matter was settled when Adam Stein, the husband, accompanied by his daughter, again visited Mrs. Stein and persuaded her once more to return home. As soon as Mrs. Stein had departed the Board of Health employes tore the hovel down.

CARRIED DEAD BOY TO DOCTOR

"Something Ails My Nephew," Woman Told Physician.

REPUBLIC SPECIAL.

New York, Feb. 11.—A young woman, carrying a boy of 7 years in her arms, staggered into the waiting-room of the Lebanon Hospital in the Bronx.

"Doctor," she said, "something has happened to my little nephew. He has been ailing for some days. As I was taking care of his mother, he fell on the floor speechless.

"I picked him up and ran here, seven blocks."

As she talked Doctor Arno of the hospital staff was examining the boy. "He is dead," he said. An autopsy showed the cause to be internal strangulation.

The boy was Edward Welley. His aunt is Miss Essie Gray.
