FARMERS OF M. S. U. HOLD CELEBRATION

Students of Agricultural Department Parade, in Their Glory, but Fantastic Costumes Lead to Their Expulsion From Chapel.

REPUBLIC SPECIAL.

Columbia, Mo., March 11.—To-day was Farmers' Day at Missouri University and the students of the agricultural school celebrated the occasion with fitting ceremonies.

Proclamations posted in all parts of town and on the university buildings last night announced that "as the dark of the moon in March is the last auspicious occasion for the performance of many of the tasks of the farmer, therefore, Saturday, March 11, the date on which the moon entered this stage, is declared a holiday, and must be celebrated."

The celebration took the form of a parade by the students in which all departments of the agricultural school were represented. Leading the parade was a prosperous farmer with a hired hand for a driver. After him came the dairy float, on which a dozen students operated the latest dairy machinery. The department of poultry exhibited a large cage of chickens, while an incubator was so arranged as to apparently produce full-grown roosters and hens by turning the crank.

The evolution of the plow was illustrated by a dozen exhibits, the last one showing a dude farmer seated on a riding plow, his head carefully protected from the sun by a fancy parasol. Scores of cows, horses, sheep and other animals from the State Farm, with floats with the departments of agronomy, horticulture, forestry, dairying, veterinary science and animal husbandry lengthened the parade.

At the daily convocation this morning the agricultural students entered the auditorium in a body dressed as farm hands. They were ordered to leave by President Jesse and after a stormy scene finally did so. When they did so the entire student body followed them. The students contend that they had no intention of creating a disturbance at chapel, and merely wished to attend in a body.

COLLINS SPEAKS ON ETHICS.

Before the Teachers' Normal College Discusses Normal Teachings.

John S. Collins, Assistant Superintendent of Education, was the leader at yesterday morning's session of the Teachers' Normal College. The subject of the session was "Ethics," and Mr. Collins showed that the work of the schools is preeminently moral from its lowest to its highest grades.

In reviewing the many different ways of giving ethical instruction, Mr. Collins stressed the method of story-telling as the most telling and lasting. He declared that still the good storyteller could hope to be an excellent moral teacher.

He then held a story himself to indicate how a good moral may be pointed to the little ones without preaching formally to them abstract principles of virtue, which only make them revolt and look forward to hour for ethics teaching as the most dreaded period of the school day or week.

One period is set apart every week for a distinctively ethics lesson, but there are various ways of giving this instruction. Many incidental opportunities are seized upon by the teachers of the schools to give moral and spiritual culture to the pupils.

ATTACKED DEPOT AGENT.

She Pluckily Resisted Hold Up—Highwayman Was Captured.

REPUBLIC SPECIAL.

New York, March 11.—Policeman Kirkman of North Elizabeth and several citizens had an exciting adventure with a desperate highwayman before the man was subdued at the point of a revolver and taken into custody.

The highwayman had attacked Mrs. Weed, the Pennsylvania Railroad station agent, seizing her by the throat, striking her in the face, and then grabbing a handbag containing the morning's receipts.

Mrs. Weed's cries brought George Beers and George Sargarese to her assistance, and for three miles the two men chased the highwayman, who flourished a club in one hand and a revolver in the other. Policeman Kirkman joined in the pursuit, and, getting close to the thief, began firing at him. He kept on, however, holding his pursuers at bay with his club, until the policeman finally got close once more and brought him to a stand with a threat to shoot again.

PATROLMAN QUINN BURNED.

Eyebrows and Lashes Badly Singed by Gas Explosion.

Patrolman Peter Quinn of the Fourth District was painfully burned Friday night by the explosion of gas in the coal stove in the assembly-room of the Fourth District Station.

The explosion occurred while Quinn was fixing the fire and the flames puffed into his face. His eyebrows and lashes were burned off and his hair was badly singed. He was taken to his home after being treated at the City Dispensary.

TWO CHARGED WITH ROBBERY.

Emil Schaus Alleges That He Was Relieved of $7.

Fred Schwind of No. 2[illegible] South Jefferson avenue and Harry Weber of No. 3[illegible] South Broadway are charged in a warrant issued yesterday with robbery in the first degree.

Emil Schaus, a baker, of No. 1[illegible] President street, is the complaining witness. He charges that after drinking with Schwind and Weber in a saloon they followed him and held him up, taking $7.

WOMAN HELD FOR STABBING.

Alleged to Have Probably Fatally Cut Man in Quarrel.

Viola Starr, a homeless woman, is a prisoner at the Four Courts, awaiting the result of a wound she is said to have inflicted with a knife on A. W. Proudford in a saloon at No. 6[illegible] Clark avenue early yesterday morning.

Proudford and the woman, it is said, quarreled over a can of beer. It is charged that she stabbed him in the back twice. Hospital physicians say Proudford probably will not recover.

HE DEFIES THE "BLACK HAND."

Rich Merchant Ordered to Give Up $500 or Be Killed.

REPUBLIC SPECIAL.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., March 11.—Pasquale Nardone, a prominent merchant of this city, has received three "Black-Hand" letters within a week. These missives threaten him with death unless he places $500 at a spot the writers designate, and where they will be able to get it without detection. Nardone says he will not inform the police, but will protect himself. He calls the writers cowards.

SHOWS MARRIAGE LICENSE TO FATHER; HE BURNS IT.

Chicago, March 11.—"Father, dear," remarked Miss Gertrude Westervelt, the pretty 17-year-old daughter of Douglas Westervelt, No. 325 Ellis Park, "what would you think if I were married?"

"I would think several things which I wouldn't say," replied the parent.

"Well, papa," she said, "here is my marriage license. I will be Mrs. Harland S. Johnson."

"Do?" said the fond parent. "Let me see that license."

Then followed a scene which brought the young woman to tears. Slowly and with apparent delight, the father tore the paper to pieces.

"Do you imagine," queried the parent, as he dropped bits of the document into the grate, "that I would allow you to marry a man twice your age? Besides, you have only known him two months, and met him at a boarding-house, at that. Girl, lock yourself in your room and repent."

The following note was then sent to Marriage License Clerk Salmonson: "I hold their license. Issue no other to this girl. She is under 18 years old."

Curtis and Tally Indorsed.

The Onward Colored Republican League Club of the Fourteenth Ward held a meeting Friday night at which a resolution was unanimously passed indorsing Doctor W. P. Curtis, the negro physician, for member of the Board of Education. Judge Tally was indorsed for the Republican mayoralty nomination.
