SERBIA-HUNGARY.

It is more than likely that the Powers will interpose to prevent the war between Serbia and Bulgaria from extending to seriously involve the peace of Europe. It is true that the conference now going on at Constantinople seems jagged in producing results, but that is owing to the unsatisfactory and uncertain instructions which were given the representatives of the several powers in attendance. It is probably thought by other European rulers that there is no danger of the pending hostilities reaching beyond the territories of the two peoples now in conflict, but it is also possible that the latter may desire that there should be such an extension.

Russia, ever ambitious for the enlargement of her boundaries, especially in the direction of the Bosphorus, and always feeling that a foreign war adds to the stability of her Government, would not object to shedding the blood of many of her subjects or spending millions of borrowed money to attain her end. Austria is always restless at being practically a European pocket, and is as covetous of a few feet of land as a miser is of so many dollars. If it were not for these and other minor extraneous reasons Europe would soon put a stop to the quarrel of King Milan and Prince Alexander.

There would be but one way of accomplishing this—by compelling Serbia to go back upon her victorious tracks, and submit to a peaceful arbitration of her grievances, if wrongs she has incurred by the Bulgaria-Roumelian union, which does not seem to be the case. Both Bulgaria and Roumelia were, until about two months ago, under the suzerainty of the Porte. Serbia was and is an independent nation. Eastern Roumelia is just south of Bulgaria. She awoke one morning and announced her union to her sister, Bulgaria, just across the Balkans. Prince Alexander accepted the offer of union, and in doing so in no way interfered with the rights of Serbia, but certainly infringed upon the suzerain rights of the Sultan. The Servians immediately began to cry aloud that the compact between Bulgaria and Eastern Roumelia was in the nature of a menace to their interests. They forced King Milan to at once prepare for war. They are an enthusiastic people. The Servian flag was that the union between Bulgaria and Eastern Roumelia must be dissolved, or some additional territory for Serbia must be provided as an offset to that union. Serbia could not wait, and the consequence is her invasion of Bulgaria from three different points. If the war is allowed to proceed there is not much doubt as to the way in which it will terminate. Although Union Bulgaria has about 3,000,000 people to Serbia's 2,000,000, the latter has by far the better army, and is in every way in better shape for war.

Meanwhile Greece is anxious to take a hand in the controversy against Bulgaria. She wants Macedonia. But there is something a little strange and significant in Turkey's attitude. Although the commencement of the trouble was a direct blow at her she has not made any announcement of her intentions. She has taken the precaution, however, to put her armies in fighting order. She is evidently not half so much worried about Bulgaria and Serbia as she is concerning what the powers may do. She fears that there may possibly grow out of the entanglement an attempt to force the partition of Turkey in Europe and the fall of the Ottoman Empire on that continent which has been so often threatened and prophesied.

It is a striking commentary upon the sensitive and complicated condition of European affairs when such formidable troubles can be fermented by a comparative handful of its inhabitants. The Marquis Tsesan, who has long been in the Chinese Diplomatic Corps, and is now China's ambassador at London, of course England, will leave for his native country shortly to assume a position on the Board of Foreign Affairs. He has been speaking of the recent assaults upon the Chinese in this country, and talks of retaliation by his government unless the United States accords proper redress. He thinks that the abrogation of the treaty between the United States and China, and a large increase in the duties on American goods, would be fully justified if no redress is given. The Marquis also says that such action on the part of China would almost amount to a casus belli. We have little information as to the feelings of China, but it is not probable that the Chinese Government desires an unfriendly rupture with this country. At the same time redress is due for any failure to give the Chinese the protection guaranteed by treaty.

The Philadelphia papers are urging the staid and highly respectable citizens of that ancient town to throw off some of the lethargy that has characterized the place ever since the day of scalping matches with Indians, and take upon themselves some of the activity and energy of cities of even less size and fewer inhabitants. This stirring up of Philadelphia we hope will be pro-

PEOPLE IN GENERAL.

WILLIAM WARREN of Boston, the veteran orator, celebrated his seventy-second birthday yesterday. M. B. BURNETT, the French sculptor, was entertained in New York last evening by ex-Minister Lovell F. Morton. The GRANT monument fund in New York nears its first hundred thousand. Yesterday's receipts added to $99,100. GENEAL FIVE-YEARLY PORTER has been asked to take charge of General McCall's papers, with a view to finding his military history. It is said that Mrs. Julia learned to play the banjo in Boston, and later to astonish Paris audiences with her new acquisition. Miss GUYTON REAGAN, a cousin of Charles Reed, is soon to appear on the English stage. Her first appearance is to be in the character of Desira. LADY of the house—Oh, my gracious! You are going to sit down in my pie dough. Good-bye, Oh, that I could make any difference with you, my dear, anyhow.

FERNAND WARD has been granted a little more exercise and fresh air at Sing Sing. His principal occupation is carrying stove castings from one place to another. WILLIAM WALTER PHILLIPS is mentioned in the Washington correspondence of the Trenton Gazette as the possible Republican caucus nominee for Speaker of the House. A DEED of $7,000,000 of land in California, valued at $4,000,000, has been given by Senator Leelan Stanford, and wife to twenty-four trustees, to found a university on the site of the old Rancho San Joaquin. POSTMASTER IRVING of St. Louis was the companion of Professor Wile and La Montaigne during their famous balloon voyage in July, 1859, from St. Louis, across the country to Jefferson County, N. Y.

DR. J. J. HARRIS, General, Brevet of Delaware was purchased, for $29,750, a farm of 600 acres near Millington, Md., belonging to the estate of the late Charles Noble and regarded as one of the finest properties in that section of the State. The two American beauties, Miss Chamberlain and Miss Winslow, have been spending the autumn at Hombourg, where they are said to have found rivals in the persons of four young sisters named Walker, also American and also beauties.

It was said in Richmond yesterday that General Mahone would be offered the position of general manager of the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad Company in place of C. W. Smith, resigned, but the report could not be verified. General Mahone is now in the State. SAMUEL E. BELFORD, the United States consul at Fiji Islands, who, it was reported, fled on August 14 on the steamer Saga, has been to Samoa, leaving many mourning for his departure. He is said to have been a victim of the cholera, and the stories circulated against him were instigated by a diabolical and malicious enemy.

GENERAL W. S. HANCOCK is in Gettysburg to-day, paying his first visit to the battlefield since 1867. He will go over the ground, accompanied by General Frank A. Walker, Colonel John E. Nicholson, Colonel John C. Caldwell, and other officers of the National Government of the Gettysburg battle. The object of the visit is to accurately retrace the positions of the several corps.

It is the opinion of the Philadelphia Record the Niagara canal folks put their figures too low and the time too short when they say the canal can be built for only sixty million dollars in only six years. Were capitalists satisfied as to the reliability of these estimates they would jump at the chance of investment and not leave the scheme to languish on the slow motions of Congress.

IN IMPANELING a New York jury the other day one of the talesmen was asked if he knew who had been elected President last year. He replied that he had "a faint idea." It turned out that he was a Republican, who was, not to very long ago, an employe in the New York Custom House, but that he and Federal employment are now strangers.

MR. LAWRENCE BARRETT is a finished scholar and a classic author, but it is much to be doubted if he is the man to write a biography of John McCullough in a truly warm and sympathetic spirit. Such a work should go to one of nature more akin to the broad-minded and big-hearted subject of his sketch.

THE BOSTONIANS do not live by beans alone. Statistics show that they consume between three and four millions of pigs feet every year. No wonder the people of that classic city bristle up at the slightest imputation upon their culture.

IT IS THAT latest poetical contortion of Lord Tennyson's, called "The Dead are not dead but alive." We infer that Tennyson takes this method of informing the world that as a poet he still survives.

ONE of the objective points of the forthcoming census of Republican Senators will in all probability be the prominentship of Philadelphia, from which Mr. Hildekoper has been suspended to make room for Mr. Hartry.

Mrs. LANGTRY is to appear in pantomime. There are a good many actors and actresses besides Mrs. Langtry who would better please the public and do themselves more justice by adopting the same reform.

GOVERNOR-ELECT LEE of Virginia exhibits commendable taste in desiring to be inaugurated with the least possible flummery. Ostentation was never a characteristic of the family.

"The Latest for Gents." "A new style of walking, don't you see," said an observant Southfield street shoe dealer yesterday. "The real fashionable young lady doesn't twiddle along now as if she was going to have a tooth pulled. Instead of that she takes a quick, springy step, not exactly as if she was in a hurry, but as if she enjoyed walking, and was running over with animal spirits and in good health. That is the idea they wish to carry out. Summer is over, and every young fellow is expected to have been either in the country or at the sea-shore, and come back full of vigor. It isn't the proper thing at all now for a young lady to be tired. She may be 'slightly fatigued,' but 'tired' is too great an acknowledgment of weakness. I don't see how a good one, anyway, and the very appearance of good health will bring health. At least it will bring out your character, and that is the next thing to it."—Ulica Herald.

AT THE GRAVE OF KEATS. Long, long ago, in the sweet Roman spring, Through the bright morning air, we slowly strolled; And in the blue heaven heard the skylark Above the ruins old. Beyond the Forum's crumbling grass-green walls, Through high-walled lanes o'erhung with vines, The soft perfume of Campanian's nudes Of verdure and of light; Till by the grave of Keats we stood, and found A single rose, one leaf left blooming there, Making more sacred still that hallowed ground, And that enchanted air.

A simple rose, whose falling petals drooped, And seemed to wait for us to gather them, So, they say, the kumbie mound, was trod, And plucked it from its stem. One leaf, and nothing more. We shared its breath, as we shared the thoughts of the lethargy that has characterized the place ever since the day of scalping matches with Indians, and take upon themselves some of the activity and energy of cities of even less size and fewer inhabitants. This stirring up of Philadelphia we hope will be pro-

That rose's fragrance is forever dead. For, dear friend, but not the poet's lay, He is the rose, deadness among the dead. Who's perfume lives today. —G. F. Cranch in Harper for December.
