BEAUTIFUL WIVES OF WELL-KNOWN AUTHORS

WOMEN WHO HELP TO TRIM THE LAURELS ON THE BROWS OF WRITERS AND WHO OFTEN INSPIRE THEIR LOFTIEST IDEALS

WRITTEN FOR THE SUNDAY REPUBLIC.

The recent marriage at Newport of Stewart Edward White, the young author, has caused the romance of his literary career to be told, for it was this same girl who inspired him to write "The Blazed Trail" and "In the Silent Places."

Mrs. White is a very beautiful young lady, not only in face and figure, but in nature as well. She has a rare intellect and an absorbing love of nature, which found a responsive chord in the young writer of "outdoor novels" whose understanding of the great wild places is remarkable in one so young and so gently bred.

Mr. White has always known wealth and luxury, although he has sought of his own accord and for the very love of them "the silent places." He not only is a nature lover, but seeks the wildest, most primitive form of nature, he wants unbroken forests, vast distances and the wildest out-door life. Mrs. White is as of date as a cameo, and yet she shares all her young husband's tastes.

Here are given some examples of the young wives of famous authors who have helped their husbands to success and fame.

Everyone knows that "Soldiers of Fortune" was written by Richard Harding Davis, partly from an inspiration given him by Miss Cleveland Clark, who is Hope in the book. Mr. Davis married Miss Clark just after the book was published.

MRS. DAVIS'S PERSONALITY.

Mrs. Davis is a tall, graceful woman with in her first youth, and full of life and spirit and extremely, justly proud of her husband's work. When he goes into retirement at their little chalet Cos cottage at Marion, Mass., he goes with him. Mrs. Davis has taught that another house must be built for her husband's friends to Marion in much larger proportions, for summer visitors have disported and romped to quaint Cos cottage and only a few quaint Cos folk are left.

Mrs. Davis was brought up in the most fashionable society of Chicago and has been all that a rich man's daughter should be. She has been a prominent figure since her marriage in New York society and is a great friend of Mrs. John Jacob Astor. She delights in entertaining at her home in Cos, and is fond of the society of her husband's friends. She is at present in Japan with him.

Alice Hamlin Garland is the constant companion and gifted husband. She is a remarkably beautiful woman and is accomplished and talented, having been a student at the Art Institute of Chicago. She was a sculptor. The sculptor of children of the work to the fine arts. Mr. Garland spends he creates his books in Paris. Mr. Garland's home life is ideal. He is a great lover of children and fond of dogs. He is a great lover of children and fond of dogs. He is a great lover of children and fond of dogs