Manchester Cloth Market.

Manchester, England, June 3.—The cotton market was dull this week. Buyers were [illegible] and they were not disposed to give [illegible] orders at present. Consequently the amount of business transacted was insignificant. Offers from India were numerous, but remained [illegible]. A few orders were booked for distant delivery. The China demand was quiet, but the smaller and nearer Eastern markets provided miscellaneous business in printing and heavy cloths for stock. Producers showed [illegible] sympathy with cotton, but buyers were disposed to enter into definite engagements at higher figures, owing to the idea that the reported injury of the cotton crop is exaggerated. They think the supplies of the coming crop are ample to meet all shortages. Yarns were in limited inquiry. There was a small amount of business covering requirements. The forward quotations checked trade.

Cotton Quotations.

[illegible]

Cotton Slightly Off.

New York, June 3.—The cotton market opened [illegible] at an advance of 3 points on July, but [illegible] 30[illegible] points lower under further heavy [illegible] and liquidation, prompted by lower cables and good weather in the South. Before the decline was checked prices went off to a net decline of about 10 points on the active months, when they were steadied toward the close by covering and some buying for long account by parties who took a hand in the [illegible] about 4 or 5 points of the early low.

Coffee.

New York, June 3.—Coffee—Spot, [illegible] quiet. No. 7 invoice, 7[illegible]c; mild steady; Cordova [illegible]. The market for coffee futures opened steady at unchanged prices to an advance of [illegible] points, attributed to local buying. Later [illegible] decline in the visible supply statement for the month of May. Trading was rather more active than recently, and the market had steady [illegible] throughout the session. The tone was steady, [illegible]. Spot coffee was steady. March at [illegible]. The world's visible supply statement showed a decrease for the month of 656,000 bags against a decrease last year of 1[illegible] bags. The [illegible] stated 1,000,000 bags last year.

BEARS CONTROL MARKET FOR GRAIN FUTURES.

CROP ADVICES FAVOR THE SELLERS.

Brisk Liquidation Causes a Sharp Decline in Wheat and Corn.

Bears had little difficulty in controlling Saturday's local grain market. Most of the weather crop news was distinctly favorable to the selling side, and some of the big Chicago professionals were throwing wheat on the market in large lots. There was practically no outside support, and the bearish news which was ignored on Friday was taken at its full value at Saturday's short session.

Corn also was on the down turn. Favorable weather and crop reports and the weakness of wheat were the main factors in the decline.
