EGYPTIAN HUSTLERS' THIRD ANNUAL MEET ROUND OF GAYETY

One Thousand Traveling Salesmen of Southern Illinois Declare Convention in Anna Busiest and Best.

WEATHER FAVORED VISITORS.

Dozens of Amusement Features Add Pleasure to Three-Day Gathering of Drummers.

METHODS CREATE SURPRISE.

Olney Chosen as Next Meeting Place, Will Have to Hurry to Beat Sister City in Entertaining Knights of the Grip.

It is well that Sunday is Sunday, otherwise there would be in the neighborhood of 1,000 traveling salesmen, who are in the Southern Illinois territory, who would be disposed to throw their sample cases into the checkroom, call up their regular customers by telephone from the hotel office, present them the compliments of the season and retire to their rooms for as much sleep as could be crowded in before the next train left.

The third annual meet of the Egyptian Hustlers, the association in which are banded together the majority of the salesmen who travel in Southern Illinois, which closed at Anna, Ill., after a lurid three days of entertainment, was the busiest and the best which has been held, according to the testimony of those who have not failed to attend the previous meetings.

There was nothing to mar the pleasure of the visiting salesmen to the enterprising Egyptian city of Anna, and for one continuous round of pleasure and a never-ending programme of events of all kinds and descriptions Olney and the other Southern Illinois cities, which is the future will have the honor of entertaining the Hustlers, will "have to hurry."

Fair weather, hospitality unbounded, dozens of amusement features and every detail which could add to the pleasure of the salesmen cooperated in a three days' spell, it will not be forgotten soon by those who were so fortunate as to be participants.

There is one thing about the Hustlers. They bring their own hospitality and their own amusement with them. Their chief pleasure is in giving pleasure and amusement to others, and when the thousands of residents of Southern Illinois—the business men, their wives and families—came to Anna they not only had to enjoy the endless list of entertainment features but were compelled perforce to participate in the delight which the good-fellowship and brotherly clasphands of the thousand salesmen prompted.

A WHOLESOME LIFE GROUP.

There was a whole souled crowd, every man with a heart as large as his grip and extravagant smile round express. A

W. C. LINK,

MAYOR J. N. WOOD,
Who presided in reputation at Anna as the Chief Executive of the Hustlers.

imbued with the fraternal and friendly spirit of the occasion, joined in with the men folks in their celebration. The Hustlers themselves, while they did not miss any opportunity to have some fun at the expense of someone else, usually one of their own kind, behaved in every way as gentlemen, business men and thorough Americans.

A noticeable feature was the fraternalism which exists between the salesmen who are daily traveling through the same territory. Regardless of the fact that they may be direct competitors in the same line of business, this did not detract from the personal feeling as between man and man, and it is the furtherance and promotion of this feeling for which the Hustlers was organized.

Anna, the city which entertained the Hustlers last week, was the cradling place of the organization, which has grown from a band of seven men into a great body of 1,000 salesmen, a large proportion of those who cover the Southern Illinois territory. Two years ago the Anna Hotel saw the swaddling clothes wrapped about the infant which was brought into the world by seven of the traveling salesmen who had dropped into the city on the same night.

ORIGIN OF THE HUSTLERS.

Joe Amos, to whom belongs the credit for the original conception of the Egyptian Hustlers, tells an interesting tale of the proceedings of the night which gave birth to the organization.

"I had had such a thing on my mind for two years," said Mr. Amos, as he sat on the writing table in the hotel in which the first steps were taken. "There were scores of good fellows who were making the territory, who had not the slightest acquaintance one with another, except as they met casually from town to town. Relations between competitors were strained in many instances and every man for himself made it anything but pleasant from a personal standpoint to travel through Southern Illinois.

"I had watched for a favorable opportunity to spring the idea on some of the fellows for many months. I never sat down at a hotel office for a long while without looking over the crowd of the boys and figuring as to how they would receive such a proposition as I had to make. I was afraid that cold water would be thrown on the scheme by someone and I was waiting until I was sure that everything was in shape.

"It was on April 7, 1902, that I came into the hotel office. Hello boys, and a cordial response from the crowd here as one told me of the opportunity was at hand. Over at one side four of the boys were playing hickey. One was reading and another was writing up his day's orders. I waste not my stuff and, realizing that the time was ripe, I called over one of the boys and outlined the scheme to him. He instantly agreed, and, by one, we approached the rest of the warm as soon as the hickey game was finished.

"It was unanimous, and the nucleus of the Hustlers had been formed. Each of us had a pocket memorandum book, which we were to secure the names of the fellows whom we met on our trips.

"The next meeting was called at the Lindell Hotel in St. Louis on May 3. Thirty of the boys were there and the preliminary organization became permanent. We were satisfied that the time of the organization was ripened.

"The original seven who met at Bob Willis's Hotel are: J. O. Amos of Fairfield, Ill.; Joseph Poupeney of St. Louis; Albert Goeltz of Belleville, Ill.; H. Alexander of St. Louis; George W. Dick, St. Louis, and Tony Roberts of Clay City, Ill.

FIRST OFFICERS OF ORGANIZATION.

The first officers as elected at the Lindell Hotel meeting were: J. O. Amos, president; F. Boerner, vice president; Hans Henger, secretary; Joseph Poupeney, treasurer. At this meeting Murphysboro was selected as the first convention city.

The first convention was a great success and attracted a great crowd of boomers for Anna and visitors. The dates were July 26-27, 1903. At this meeting the title of Egyptian Hustlers was officially adopted. The officers elected at Murphysboro were: William Link, president; J. R. Alexander, vice president; Sam Dean, secretary, and Joe Poupeney, treasurer.

Mount Vernon entertained the second annual meet on June 16-18, 1904. There was another tremendous crowd and a great time. The officers elected were: J. M. Hockmuth, St. Louis, president; Charles H. Cox, Vincennes, Ind., vice president; Charles Lacy, St. Louis, secretary; Harry Harper, Harrisburg, Ill., treasurer. For the honor of entertaining the convention the mother city of Anna won out by a narrow margin against Olney.

The purpose of the organization is clearly stated in an address which the founder and first president, Mr. Amos, made at Murphysboro:

"Our organization is one composed strictly of reputable traveling men whose territory lies south of the Vandalia railroad in the State of Illinois, better known as Egypt, the land of plenty, from which we take our name, 'Egyptian Hustlers.' This organization was formed for sociability, one of whose purposes is to bring about a feeling of good fellowship, to elevate morality, to raise the standard of manliness and to establish an everlasting friendship between man and man—to bring into closer touch the merchants and traveling men of Southern Illinois. I dare say when we have reached the state of perfection we can truly say, 'The other fellow is not such a bad fellow after all.'

"The seven who were instrumental in the founding of the organization went forth with the thought in mind 'Love thy neighbor as thyself,' to establish an organization for the good of mankind, with equal privileges to all and special privileges to none, without malice, and with brotherly love. They felt that upon that rock they could stand as a shining light to the commercial world that others might see their good works and profit thereby. We aim to make this the largest and strongest organization of its kind on earth, and to this end I doubt if any one will question the certainty, for we are a class of men who know not the word 'fail.' We are taught the meaning of success from the minute we take up our gripsacks. We have success so instilled in us that we have no time to give to the thought of failure. We meet on common ground, wholesaler, manufacturer, merchant, traveling salesman and retail clerk, for the purpose of exchanging ideas, presenting our grievances, compromising differences, and to learn to know each other better."

ANNA'S SPLENDID WELCOME.

Anna, the birthplace of the Hustlers, was most maternal in her welcome to the prodigal. There was nothing which had not been provided in the way of amusement and entertainment. One fact was striking and that was the manner in which Jonesboro, only a mile away, but a separate city, with its own municipal government and under ordinary circumstances a rival to the sister city of Anna, joined in the entertainment of the Hustlers. The homes and the hearts of Jonesboro were thrown open to the visitors. A band and a handsome float were sent across the line to join in the parades, and to all intents and purposes the two cities were one on this occasion.

Early in the first day the keys of the city were handed over to President Hockmuth by Mayor J. N. Wood, the lid was formally lifted and the editor went forth that the Hustlers were to be first in command.

In responding to the welcoming remarks of Mayor Wood and the address of State Attorney James Lingle, President Hockmuth delivered an eloquent address and gave over to the citizens the keys to the hearts of the traveling salesmen. He said, in part:

PRESIDENT HOCKMUTH'S ADDRESS.

"Speechmaking with me, to express it in the drummer's vernacular, is somewhat of a side line. A drummer delivering an address of any character is an absurdity, but only one of the many inconsistencies of our dual lives. It ill becomes a man to whom has been vouchsafed the boon of life in this resplendent Republic to wish his destiny other, and yet, my friends, I would fain exchange my lot to-day, so inadequate to this occasion, do I feel, with one of Ignorant's cave-dwellers, who excavate holes in the sod to put those little ones to sleep who begin life in the grave rather than in the cradle.

"To those of you who assigned me this task I wish I might reveal to your kindling gaze the black and cheerless wall that seems to be closing its path around me as I attempt on your behalf to extend thanks for this magnificent reception to-day. The luminous vista, for very excess of ease and elegance, dazzles and appalls.

"The sea shell, though often carried from ocean depths to regions of perpetual snow, never ceases still to sing the songs of home; therefore, we may be pardoned for thinking that every choice blessing within the gift of an Omniscient Deity was emptied from the cornucopia of heaven into the lap of this fair city, the gem of the Prairie State, and the natal city of the Egyptian Hustlers.

"Twenty-two years ago I made my first visit to your city, and those men to whom I sold goods at that time have since been carried by the strong arms of their sorrowing and afflicted brothers to their last resting places beneath the sod. Their memory is with me to-day, though the marble may have crumbled and the bronze corroded.

"This hospitable city, surrounded by a fertile soil, with matchless resources yet untouched, the genuine product of free settlement and institutions, which is now absorbed in the present and the future, and whose only foible has been its ambition to be the light of the new world, was the place above all others for us to meet to fan the embers of fraternal harmony, for it was here, about two and one-half years ago, that our organization, with a membership of only seven, first greeted the light of day.

"The flower of neither bulbous or tuberous origin, has grown to be a perfect specimen, number some 700 souls, and were its existence blotted from earth to-morrow it would still have shed a perfume to linger with mankind.

"This association is wielding an unknown influence in the onward march of civilization. Our associations are as broad and as national, as extensive and as liberal, as the Constitution of our country and the jurisdiction of her matchless courts. We are impervious to the stings of sickening criticism, the slimy kiss of hypocrisy and the glittering daggers of ingratitude. We care little for the shafts of malice, or envy, or of sport. We submit with not a murmur to all the things that are said about us in the serene consciousness that all who work must contribute to our support, and that neither individuals nor corporations, nor municipalities nor States, can get along without us. We cannot deliver learned and ingenious disquisitions on metaphysics, and we would not know a geometrical theorem from a bale of bleached domestic, but we hold it true in the realms of commerce, as in geometry, that a straight line is the shortest distance between two points. We know that no amount of artifice can overcome or supersede honor and integrity. We know there is a moral certainty of success, if you do but deserve it. We know that people grow and multiply and disappear just as mysteriously as they come; that liberty and truth, justice and drummers only are eternal.

"Therefore, by way of advice, let me say to the young ladies of this auditory, that when that period of your life comes that you are to select a husband, if you want one who will stay with you forever, choose a traveling man; and though he is not with you often in person, his cherubim wings will ever protect, and when the waves of the matrimonial ocean become ruffled and threaten to overwhelm a blissful life, he will depart in peace, and the wrinkled sea will glitter once more in the sunshine of his absence.

"In conclusion, ladies and gentlemen, if I were a Michael Angelo, I would chisel from the burnished marble a chaplet of eternal joy for all of the ladies here to-day, and weave the jessamine and rose into everlasting garlands of glory to her and for our worthy friend, Jim Lingle. I would carve a wreath of daffodils and daisies and crown him conqueror of our hearts.

"In behalf of the Egyptian Hustlers, I wish you, in return, to accept the keys to our storehouses of hospitality and join with us to-day for a royal good time. You are thrice welcome! You are welcome everywhere, on all occasions, to all the privileges you desire and to do as you please."

FAST AND FURIOUS FUN REIGNS.

When the machinery had been formally sent whirring the fun began and without a stop continued until late last night. It was high-class amusement which was offered the visitors, who on Friday numbered not less than 1,500. What was not provided by the programme-makers was furnished by the traveling men.

Fantastic parades, bogus bands, impromptu platform meetings and addresses by some of the more energetic of the fun-makers kept the others awake most of the night.

From the standard of pure, unadulterated fun, the Mardi Gras parade, which is a fixed feature of the second day of the meet, was the most mirth-provoking event of the three days. From a costumer in St. Louis more than 200 of the Hustlers procured garments and headgear which transformed the dapper salesmen into the fiercest of savages, the most comical of foreigners, or the most captivating of chorus girls and harem queens.

The Egyptian idea prevailed largely in the costuming, and also in the decorations which were strung throughout the city. The colors of the Hustlers are red and white, and this combination fairly covered the store buildings and residences of Anna.

The Hustlers were identified by great bands of ribbon of the official colors fastened together with the emblem of the organization. This was described by a passenger on the St. Louis-bound train as the picture of the sun, the moon, a pyramid and an Indian. While it is generally accepted that all the Hustlers are "good Indians," the designer of the button intended it for a reference to the emblems of older Egypt, the star and crescent and the sphinx, with the pyramids in the background.

The mystic letters, "V. V. V." have a prominent place in the insignia. They are the initials of "Vim, Victory and Vitality," which has been adopted as the watchword of the Hustlers.

With the addition of the new men who were admitted to membership at the Anna meeting, there are now nearly 1,200 men who travel in the Southern Illinois territory who are now on the rolls of the Hustlers. Membership is confined to traveling salesmen who are actually on the road and who are representatives of well-established firms. There are about 2,000 who are eligible to membership, and the officers expect to enlist a majority of the balance before the meeting of next year.

OLNEY CAPTURES 1906 MEET.

Olney captured the convention of 1906 after a spectacular contest. Cairo, Carbondale and Vandalia sent bands and big delegations to Anna to present the claims of their cities and indulge in all sorts of demonstrations to secure the event, which has come to be considered the big thing of the year in Egypt.

Olney, because of its location in what is known as the east side of Egypt, that part of the State which lies east of the Chicago and Eastern Illinois Railroad, was the winner by a big margin. There has been a slight undercurrent of sentiment that St. Louis has had too much to do with the Hustlers, and this feeling has to a certain degree kept out many of the Chicago, Indianapolis and Cincinnati salesmen, who rarely come into the "west side," which is considered St. Louis territory.

By taking the meeting to Olney, with its well-known capacity to entertain great crowds and ability to furnish a splendid programme of amusement, as is evidenced by the State fairs and kindred events, it is expected that the east side men will come in greater numbers into the organization and join in fraternal bonds with the other Knights of the Grip.

The new president, Charles H. Cox, lives in Evansville and represents an Indianapolis firm. The vice president, Charles Lacy, is from St. Louis and was secretary last year. The secretary, Harry Wolf, is from Olney, and the treasurer, H. C. Alexander is from St. Louis.

Cairo, at the extreme south end of the State, hopes to win out in 1906 for the convention of the following year. The claim is made that if the Hustlers go to Cairo they will be joined there by the Arkansaw travelers, a State organization similar in character to the Hustlers, and a new State organization now being formed in Kentucky.

Plans are already under way for the Olney meet and the Hustlers departed at Anna swearing by all that is sacred to the fraternity that they should all meet again next year.

CHICAGO RAILROADS OBJECT TO ISSUING OF INJUNCTION.

Say Rate on Live Stock From Missouri River Points Cannot Be Lowered.

Chicago, June 10.—Five railroad companies out of eighteen named in a bill for injunction filed some time ago by the Interstate Commerce Commission to-day filed answers in the United States Circuit Court.

The bill for an injunction was based on a decision of the committee rendered some time previous. The Chicago Live Stock Exchange complained that the eighteen railroads were discriminating in prices between the cost of shipping live stock and live-stock products from Missouri River points to Chicago.

The commission decided that the rate was discriminating and ordered it changed. No attention was paid by the railroads to the order and enforcement is now sought by law under injunctional proceedings. If the injunction is granted it will restrain the railroad companies from refusing to comply with the decision of the commission.

The railroad companies which filed their answers to-day are: Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis and Omaha, Chicago and Alton, Wabash, Chicago Great Western and the Chicago and Northwestern.

The last-mentioned company, in its answer, declared that the evidence presented before the Interstate Commerce Commission was not of enough importance for the decision rendered; that the railroad cannot lower the rate on live stock from its present position; that because of competition the rates must be maintained, and that no shipper in Missouri River points has made a complaint against the rates.

All of the answers filed are practically based on the same allegations and contentions.

Fined for Giving Short Weight.

Judge William J. Pollard of the Dayton Street Police Court yesterday morning fined Henry W. Pfeltner of No. 1708 Market street $100 for delivering short weight of charcoal to the Laclede Hotel. The case was prosecuted by Detective Gallagher and L. E. Johnson of the Correct Weight Association.
