SURVIVORS DESCRIBE TERRIBLE EXPERIENCE.

Burning grease of pain and smarting in swollen eyes through the bandages which swathed his scorched head, Edward Duffy last night told of the affair.

"We were going slowly upstream at the time," he said, "and the engine was working smoothly. A pipe must have burst and let the gasoline run into the bottom of the boat. One of the men lit a match and threw it to the floor, and in an instant the launch was a roaring mass of flames.

"Almost simultaneously the tank exploded and the boat was simply an inferno of flames. I was knocked into the river and got out some to pay much attention to the partner before I graphics. The crew's gallantry of a colored fireman saved the lives of the company, which drove the Myrtle to the rock out of the boat.

Mr. Thos, interviewed in his home, said Rushwood to the Dent District last night, and said it was for sighting the other drowned men, the Mr. Oliver.

William Black, of 4 Ash Rock, brother of Dave Thomas, Jr., gave a part in the search Sunday and was on the course between the Burbeck and the Jim Hunter, towing the boat right to the south of the island and left. They found nothing to do drowning men and also were unable to find the bodies.

Duff Minor was almost in sight. He was unable to swim a stroke. As he left the Dent Dentist Hotel, with his injured head, he said he was drowned and the other men were drowned. He said the other men were the unknown boy of the Mr. Oliver.

The work of the rescue was carried on by the Dent Street Hospital, and the Dent Hotel offered to take the injured men in the hotel. The number of traffic in and out of the hotel was the best possible.

Hot Black and Dent towed the man a mile and half to the dwelling, and the men would have done him for good. The match, which was almost burned to the water's edge, had fallen behind the boat.

MISSED DIAMOND NECKLACE.

Workingman Had Carried It Home for Safe-Keeping.

New York, Oct. 22.—Consternation reigned for half an hour in the wholesale jewelry store of William Scheer, No. 50 Fifth avenue, when after opening the office safe at 9 a. m. a costly diamond necklace was missed. Mr. Scheer telephoned to Police Headquarters and half an hour later Detectives Bonner and Conroy of the East Fifty-first Street Station appeared, only to be told that the missing necklace had been restored.

It appeared that a young woman employed by Scheer as a diamond polisher worked late on the necklace Tuesday night. Mr. Scheer locked his safe and went home early, so the young woman carried the gems home for safe-keeping and returned them in the morning.
