CARSON CITY·

Saturday· · · · Nov. 30, 1872

As we have predicted, from time to time, recently, the wonderful and extraordinary rich diamond fields in Arizona and other localities, have proven a humbug, and the principal operators in the thieving scheme have at last acknowledged that they have been carrying on a confidence game. Following is a San Francisco telegram on the subject:

"The Secretary of the Original Diamond Discovery Company says that the company never owned or located any particular diamond fields, but that their men must have picked up diamonds in the track of the Roberts party, whom they following, and finally that the company acted in good faith with all. Mr. S. Latham has paid back $20,000 received by him from General Colton for 500 shares of the salted diamond stock.

Dominican pride, says a Judge Sullivan who has recently returned from San Domingo, was greatly incensed by the tone of the American press and of the Senate, in the discussion of the annexation question, but can, he intimated, be soothed by the purchase of the Island on more liberal terms than those proposed last year. Still, Baez promises that his people will not force the matter on this country. Apparently as an inducement to the purchase, assurance is given of unusually fine crops this year: but it is not stated that, if we wanted these, we have to pay for them, even if we owned the island, and that we can, if we wish, buy them without buying San Domingo.

[illegible] from the Susanville Sage Brush of the 23d:

[illegible] dwelling house, and in deed every shanty, in Susanville, is now occupied by one or more families, and quite a number are stopping at the hotels, not being able to otherwise obtain houses in which to winter. Several dwellings are in course of construction, but fifty tenement houses would not more than supply the demand.

The Reese River Reveille suggests the name of John Bowman, Assemblyman elect from Nye county, as Speaker of the House. John would make a good presiding officer, but in our opinion, Geo. H. Morris[illegible] county, is the man for the place, and will undoubtedly be [illegible].

[illegible] as editor of the [illegible] Mr. Greeley will be [illegible] with either of [illegible] of the country." We [illegible] to complain of his time for it is [illegible] that but the Grant organs do not say it "was not just or expedient for the Democratic party."

The earliest reference to the art of Telegraphy in the [illegible] Mikado's [illegible] are [illegible]. The Greek Emperor and his great commander, Moltke, are both over 70. Palmerston died in the Ministry of England when he was over eighty.

Salt Lake City appears to be in great trouble about the scarcity of coal. Should a severe storm set in, the inhabitants of that city would suffer for fuel, as they seem to have depended wholly on the Evanston coal mines for their supply of Winter heating material.

We understand that W. J. Forbes, of the White Pine News, says the Eureka Sentinel, is about starting on a trip of inspection to the City of the Saints. In case the outlook suits him it is further stated that he will remove his printing office to that place.

New Yorkers can't make out what A. T. Stewart means to do with his city at Hampstead Plains, L. I. A hundre l elegant houses, costing $15,000 or more apiece, are going up, boulevards are being laid out and railroads planed, but to everyone who wants to make a purchase Stewart makes the invariable reply, "I have nothing to sell."

PRESIDENTIAL.

The New York Tribune, naturally enough, derives some satisfaction from facts like these, in the history of Presidential elections for the last 20 years: In 1852 General Scott carried four States, with 42 electoral votes. In 1860, with four candidates, Douglas carried one State, and John Bell two. In 1864 General McClellan carried three, with 21 electoral votes. In 1868 Governor Seymour carried eight, with 80 electoral votes. Mr. Greeley carries seven States—Maryland, Missouri, Kentucky, Tennessee, Louisiania, Georgia and Texas—with 74 electoral votes, and with a possibility of West Virginia, where the vote is very close. The figures of the recent election show an extraordinary state of facts, some of which, as in Pennsylvania, in Maine, and other parts of New England, we have already noted. These figures indicate that fewer people supported General Grant in 1872 than in 1868. They show, too, to recapitulate the past, that in spite of the increase of population and 8,000 votes of colored persons in Pennsylvania, Gen. Grant has 349,589 votes now, against 342,280 in 1868; in Illinois, 250,306 in 1868, against 241,941 now, and in Maine, in 1868, 70,403; in 1872, 69,759. In Virginia, Governor Walker had, in 1869, 101,204, against 93,415 for Grant in 1872. In New Hampshire and Connecticut the official returns point to the same result. New Jersey is an exception. The Tribune argues, and perhaps correctly enough, that Mr. Greeley's candidacy is not responsible for this state of affairs. Certain it is that the thousands who remained at home are responsible for General Grant's large majority of 25,000 in Maine, 50,000 and more in New York, 137,000 in Pennsylvania, and so on to the whole majority of six or seven hundred thousand in the country. Whether the Democrats in like numbers would have remained at home had Mr. Adams, Judge Davis, or any one else been nominated, is matter of conjecture. We shall probably never be able to convince the Bourbons proper, nor the malcontents of a different kind, nor any other class of opponents, that Mr. Greeley was the right man for Democrats to support; but without this, the fact remains that he was not so badly beaten as Mr. Clay, General Scott, General McClellan, and many others who in the past have been nominated for President.

Courting a publican's daughter in North Wales is by no means a safe proposition, if we are to judge by a decision given by the Beaumaris magistrates, recently. A man was charged before these gentlemen with being in a public house after the prescribed hours of closing, and the case was proved by a policeman, who, it was suggested, had a feeling of animosity against the defendant. On the part of the defendant it was shown that he was courting the daughter of the landlord (who was perfectly aware of the courtship) and that he was a teetotaler. In the face of this the magistrates inflicted a fine of 5s. and the costs, and peremptorily refused to grant a case for the Superior Court. This is another instance of the absurdity of the new Licensing Act, forced upon the people by Gladstone, and to please a "clique" of teetotalers.

The Truckee Republican of the 22d instant says:

"The Central Pacific Railroad Company have purchased steel rails sufficient to lay about twenty-five miles of track. These rails are laid down at various points between Truckee and Colfax. They are about the same size and weight as the iron rails, which they are to replace. The steel rails are used principally around curves, and are believed to be far more durable than the iron rail now in use. In passing around curves the pressure of the car wheels rapidly wears out iron. Steel being harder and firmer it is believed will be found to be preferable and safer. The cars, we notice, run more quietly over the steel than the iron track."

The Tribune people declare as preposterous the idea of Greeley being treated at an insane asylum.

Those dry but useful people who delight in statistics have been investigating the effect of marriage and celibacy on mortality. They have demonstrated to their satisfaction the beneficial effect of marriage upon longevity. The last person who has devoted his attention to this subject is M. Bertillon. His statistics cover the States of France, Holland and Belgium. According to M. Betillon, between the ages of 20 and 25, out of 1,000 married men there are 6 deaths; out of 1,000 bachelors 10 deaths, and 1,000 widowers 22 deaths. Between 30 and 35 the deaths in the same number are: married men 7, bachelors 11, and widowers 17. Between 35 and 40 years of age, the mortality per 1,000 is: married men 7, bachelors 13, and widowers 17. Continuing these calculations through different series of years, the advantage on the score of longevity is always on the side of married men.

The Ogden Junction of the 20th instant has the following:

"Henry Wilkins, a dashing young fellow from Virginia city, was a passenger in the train of the Union Pacific Railroad yesterday afternoon. He was returning to his home from the East, and on his long trip he indulged in potations from the cup which is "red and sweet to look upon." While in a state of inebriation he pulled out a pocket book containing $2,000 and boastfully proclaimed that he could buy out the whole Union Pacific concern. When he came to Ogden he found his pocket book missing, without a dollar in his pocket."

DIED.

In this city, November 27, David E. Davis, a native of Machias, aged 37 years.

A Washington special, of date November 26, says:

"The probable changes in the Cabinet are still the chief subject of discussion in political circles. It is understood that Secretary Fish will soon retire from public life altogether, and that he intends visiting Enrope in the Spring. The name of Edward Pierrepont is mentioned in some quarters in connection with the Department of State, but there is a strong prejudice against him among Congressmen and representatives of the press, who are divided between Charles Francis Adams and George William Curtis."
