Issues of Incorporation.

There is no law on the statute books of Texas under the best influences of which and the wisdom of whose policy are more generally recognized and commended, in proportion as it is known, than the homestead exemption law. As has been repeatedly observed in these columns, Texas was the first state to recognize the wisdom of exempting such a provision, and the greatest proof of its popularity and beneficence is the fact that whereas comparatively a few years ago the Lone Star was almost alone in the statute books of every state in the union, the adoption of the law is now almost universal. The object of the law is to protect the wife and children of a family against the cupidity of a class of creditors, and to protect the father, and to provide that he may have a home, a place to shelter his family, even if he should be unfortunate in business and be compelled to make an assignment for the benefit of his creditors. There are some honest, worthy men in the world who conscientiously meet with misfortune and reverses, despite the best of judgment and the most untiring industry, and the homestead law is also intended to afford these an asylum and retreat where they may escape the annoyance of harassing unfeeling creditors and find consolation in the bosom of their families in the consciousness of having done all that lay in their power to satisfy the claims of creditors, and that, even if they should not be able to put a dollar ahead, they will not be deprived of a home. A man who does not own a home should and does not get much respect or credit from anyone, and he who owns his home, though it be but a little one, and who has paid for it by his own exertions, is a better citizen than he who owns his property, is a better citizen in the community, in which he lives, is interested in the preservation of society and the protection of property from sheriffs and roving commissioners. For these and many other reasons the homestead law is a good one, and it is one which has been a hard struggle from their first start-ing out in life to make both ends meet and who have never been able to accumulate enough to invest in a homestead. For such it would be an excellent idea to invest into a homestead on the installment plan, which is a common thing in for a good deal of the country from the east. There are some who have such a horror of getting in debt, even for a home, that they literally oppose the poor, struggling man that thought of buying temporarily the share of another, nothing to make money for him, and the thought that after paying a number of installments on the purchase there is a possibility of adverse circumstances arising to prevent the completion of the payments and of the property being lost to him by the forfeiture and stipulations resulting again, is enough to deter him and discourage the poor unfortunate from the attempt, unhappy and discouraged, do the contrary, however, great the tendency to profligacy and improvidence, the consumption of such a debt will compel the practice of rigid economy and force habits of usefulness in the domestic life which will come after he of value. The money spent foolishly by the idle, roving and shiftless classes from their daily wages would soon pay for a comfortable home if saved up and paid in installments, and would make them respectable, useful and valued citizens. The acquirement of homes, however humble and unpretentious, will do away with labor troubles, anarchism, socialism and all other kinds of disturbances greater and more effectually than anything else. Fort Worth Gazette.

Building Associations.

The building associations propose, which have done so much to make Philadelphia a city of homes are not really building societies at all, but co-operative banking associations, making loans on land and homes to their members. The first of these in America was in 1831 by some English operatives at Franklin, Pa., but the real germ of the present institution was in the Kensington Building Association of Philadelphia, started in 1840, and Mr. John B. Duff, called "the father of building associations," was the inspirer. Mr. Duff died only last year, and for a quarter of a century, being a "builder himself," he might be seen any day in the yards urging the cause of thrift to his fellow workmen with a piece of chalk on a convenient stick of timber. The homes of the people should be built, as far as possible, by the people who occupy them. Not only is their condition thereby improved, but the progress and general well being of society is promoted as well. The man who is owner of his dwelling place not only acquires a higher social position and a better opportunity for sharing in the good things of life, but he has an additional incentive for being a good citizen. He realizes that he has a greater interest in the country, that he is a more important part of the body politic. His position as a taxpayer, while it imposes a burden, also adds to his sense of dignity and self respect. He feels more deeply the necessity of good government, of economy in public expenditures, and of the maintenance of law and order. Only those who have nothing to lose ever revolt. During the great labor riots in Pennsylvania in 1877, the conservative influence of the co-operative banks, or building associations, as they are there termed, of Philadelphia, were materially felt upon to stay the tidal wave turbulence in that section of the state. Hence the growth of the funds should be fostered, not only on account of the advantage they offer to their members, but because they are conducive to good citizenship and a better administration of public affairs. Fort Worth Gazette.

Going in Debt.

Half the young men in the country, with money old enough to know better, would "go into business" that would run them in debt to-morrow if they could. Most poor men are so ignorant as to envy the merchant and manufacturer, whose life is an incessant struggle with pecuniary difficulties, who is driven to constant "shining," and who, from month to month barely evades that insolvency which sooner or later overtakes new in business, so that it has been computed that but one in twenty of them achieves a pecuniary success. For my own part—and I speak from and experience—I would rather be a convict in a state prison, a slave in a cow swamp, than to pass through life under a burden of debt. Let no man mortgage himself unfortunate or truly poor so long as he has the full use of his limbs and faculties, and is substantially free from debt. Hunger, cold, rags, hard work, contempt, neglect, unjust reproach, are disagreeable, but debt is infinitely worse than all. I repeat, my young friends, avoid pecuniary obligation as you would pestilence and famine. If you have but fifty cents, and can get no more for a week, buy a peck of corn, parch it and live on it rather than owe a man a dollar. Of course, I know that some men must often give notes and others obligations, and I do not consider him really in debt who can lay his hand directly on the means of paying, at some little sacrifice, all he owes. I speak of real debt, that which involves risk of sacrifice on the one side obligation and dependence on the other, and I say, from all such let each youth humbly pray God to preserve him evermore. Selected.

With rain in Southwest Texas higher than a man's head and grass galore, with thousands of cattle roaming between and and fat and sassy, with gardens growing under every variety of vegetables that grows, and nature smiling a broad and generous smile generally, the people of this section are in a cheerful frame of mind, in fact they may be said to be happy.—S. A. Times.

Is Your Farm Mortgaged.

Among the various question which the last legislature, in the law creating a bureau of agriculture, makes the duty of the assessor to ask is the above. Is your farm mortgaged? We hope they will be able by this means to enable the bureau to make a reliable statement with regard to the true condition of the fertile fields of Texas. We hope the questions will be correctly answered.

From what we know now, we are persuaded that true answers tabulated would make a startling exhibit, showing a large per cent. of our broad prairies and blooming valleys, while ostensibly his who tills it and pays taxes on it in reality belongs to a foreign syndicate or some money lender at home. A condition that can only be accounted for in one of two ways—either our lands have been producing the wealth of the State at an absolute loss to the owner, or owners of the land, as a class very improvident. While the latter is true of individuals, we do not believe it true as applied to them as a class. If not true, then the first must be the cause, which by the mortgage system is forcing the lands from ownership of the tillers of the soil into the hands of capitalists. We, the farmers, as well as the capitalists aside from the foreign syndicates, are citizens of a common country, and if we are true sons of America, we should vie with each other in securing for us all an even, symmetrical development. The glory, pride and strength of a nation is in its happy rural homes, owned untrammeled by the dwellers. We hope that patriotism and love of justice inherent in the hearts of all will secure the economic changes necessary to lift these mortgages and wreathe the faces of our producers with the smiles of contentment which only prosperity can bring.—Ex.

During the progress of a school exhibition at Bellfontaine, O., last Friday night, the floor of the hall gave way and a number of people were killed and wounded.

Designing Villainy.

When you go to your druggist to buy a bottle of Simmons Liver Regulator, and he offers you some counterfeit with a similar sounding name and says "it is the same thing or just as good," ask him his motive for not giving you the genuine preparation in White Wrapper, with red Z thereon, prepared by J. H. Zeilin & Co. The only object such a dealer can have is the fact that he makes an extra 25 cents per bottle profit by selling you a cheap and counterfeit article which may do you positive injury.

Senator Brown, of Georgia, has introduced an amendment to the Interstate Commerce law. It provides that any shipper who shall misrepresent the character, weight and value of his shipment with a view of securing lower rates than are charged to other shippers of like property, shall be guilty of misdemeanor and shall be punished as prescribed by the interstate commerce act. Any railroad company or common carrier which shall receive shipments knowing them to be misrepresented as above referred too, shall be guilty of misdemeanor and punished accordingly.

WIDE AWAKE for May is as bright and sunny as a May morning. The beautiful frontispiece (after Stoffleck's famous painting) shows the late Emperor and his brother when boys, in company with their famous mother, Queen Louise. A brief article about the Emperor, with a portrait from his last life photograph is timely.

"President Madison's Family," with its beautiful portraits of Dolly Madison and other members of the family, is very chatty and entertaining. These glimpses into the home life of the children of our presidents appeal forcibly to every American boy and girl. Young coin collectors will turn first to the "Pleasures of a Young Numismatist." Mrs. Clark's "Rise and Fall of the Migit" is delightful in its fun, which "goes home" to every lad who has owned an amateur printing press.

Newsdealers have this issue for 20 cents, or it will be mailed by the publishers, D. Lothrop Company, Boston. A sample back number of any of the Lothrop magazines costs but 5 cents, or of the four for 15 cents.

"No Place."

A great many boys complain that there are no places. Perhaps it is hard to get just such as you like. But when you get a place—and there are places—this big country, we are sure, has need of every good boy and girl, and man and woman in it—when you get a place, we say, make yourself necessary to your employers, make yourself so necessary, by your fidelity and good behavior, that they cannot do without you. Be willing to take a low price at first, no matter what the work is, if it be honest work. Do it well, do it the very best you can. Begin at the very lowest round of the ladder and climb up. The great want everywhere is faithful, capable workers. They are never a drag in the market. Make yourself one of these, and there will always be a place for you, and a good one too.—Exchange.

Peterson's Magazine for June is an admirable number of this most excellent periodical. The opening story, "Jack's Little Princess is a charming tale, and the illustrations are worthy of it. "Put to the Test," by Frank Lee Benedict, ends satisfactorily and has proved one of the interesting serials its author has written in a long while. Another excellent story is, "The Lovers at Tuggle's Gap," and "In Harvest Time" is equally striking in its way. Among the poems is a real gem, called "Baby May," which no mother can read with undimmed eyes. Every page is bright and interesting. A new volume begins with the July number, and is a good time to begin a year's subscription or to get up a club. Terms: Two dollars per year with great deductions to clubs and fine premiums to those who will get up clubs. Send for a sample-copy. Address Peterson's Magazine, 306 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Brace Up.

You are feeling depressed, your appetite is poor, you are bulldozed with Headache, you are fidgetty, nervous and generally out of sorts, and want to brace up. Brace up, but not with stimulants, spring medicines, or bitters, which have for a basis very cheap, bad whisky, and which stimulate you for an hour, and then leave you in worse condition than before. What you want is an alterative that will purify your blood, start Liver and Kidneys, restore your vitality, and give renewed health and strength. Such a medicine you will find in Electric Bitters, and only 50 cents a bottle at J. N. Eddins & Co's Drug Store. (3)

"Buffalo Bill" having made nearly $1,000,000 in England, is preparing to return to America and try his luck as an author.

Their Business Booming.

Probably no one thing has caused such a general revival of trade at J. N. Eddins & Co's. Drug Store as their giving away to their customers so many free bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption. Their trade is simply enormous in this very valuable article from the fact that it always cures and never disappoints Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Bronchitis, Croup and all throat and lung diseases quickly cured. You can test it by getting a trial bottle free, large size $1. Every bottle warranted. (3)

MISSION VALLEY
NURSERIES.
These nurseries were established at Mission Valley, Texas, in 1870. To secure better mail and shipping facilities we have removed to the Gulf, West Texas & Pacific railway, ten miles above Victoria and eight miles from the old location.
We have made the most exhaustive experiments, combined with careful study, Southern Texas Ground for a Third of a Century.
We have spared neither care nor expense that could increase the value of our results to the people. We have kept up large Experimental Grounds
in which to make our trees in both the Fruit and Ornamental Departments. Our tools are, therefore, so complete and thoroughly that we are enabled to offer Varieties well adapted to the wants of our very peculiar climate.
We handle no cheap, unacclimated northern trees. We do not propose to supply trees and plants at a lower rate than other nurseries, but we flatter ourselves to be able to furnish for Texas planting than can be obtained at any other NURSERY in the world.
We have arranged for Special Express rates on all our shipments. Have our own grounds and packing house immediately by the station so that we can ship by every train, and have a postoffice with daily mail in our office at the Nursery so that correspondence can be promptly attended to.
We solicit orders by mail or any of our authorized agents. Catalogues sent free upon application.
