is indebted, for facts and information contained in this issue, to numerous friends, several of whom have put themselves to considerable pains and trouble. To Mr. Charles H. WACO GREENBACK CLUB.

Ratification Meeting.

The attendance last evening was not such in point of numbers as to afford being particular encouragement to the Greenback party in this county. Only about forty persons were present, all told and among these were quite a number of unswerving Democrats, present more probably through curiosity than anything else. Mr. Winscott as chairman called to order and announced the first thing in order, a poem by D. F. Davis. That gentleman in responding was proceeding with a lengthy and rather prosy introductory, when he was unceremoniously broken off with cries of—"the poem, the poem!" The poem, or more properly a series of poetical effusions, was then read and, interlarded as they were with explanatory remarks, which though good enough in their way, din't gingle the assembly's literary taste was evidently not altogether satisfied, notwithstanding the really good sentiments and several "palpable hits," made in passible rhymes.

Mr. Montfort was called. He spoke at length in quite a fluent, argumentative and, at times, really eloquent strains in defence and justification of his party's policy. The meeting then adjourned, nothing having been said or done with reference to its "ratification" features, except, perhaps, by a brief allusion in number seventeenthly" of Mr. Davise's poems, and the public is left to conjecture whether that was ratified or not.

HOLLOWAY & COMPANY.

Dealers in Groceries and Country Produce. East Waco.

The firm above named is doing in East Waco a general business in groceries, provisions and country produce. It carries a large and well selected stock of groceries, and its arrangements for handling country and western produce are of the best. The members of this firm are accommodating gentlemen and experienced merchants. They work for the interests of their customers as well as for their own. They will allow no one to undersell them, and it is one of the rules of their business, that a customer once secured shall not have occasion to go elsewhere if fair and liberal treatment will hold him.

THE KINDERGARTEN SCHOOL

George Gourlay Principal.

The Kindergarten system of instruction recently introduced in this city by Mr. George Gourlay, is attracting attention. The method is more generally known as object teaching, consisting of maps, charts, globes, blocks, numerical frames and a raised geographical delineator. The latter is a miniature world containing actual land and water. Prof. Willard, Principal of the German Grammar School of New York, has said of this system: The children are amused, and learn faster, at the same time, than it is possible for them to do in any other way." Prof. Gourlay has quite a large number of pupils, his school is located in the German M. E. church on Franklin street, where he would be pleased to receive calls from any who may feel

LESSING, LYONS, SOLOMON & CO.

As successors to the old firm of Lyons, Lindenthal & Co., this firm began business April 22d, 1878. With a well established trade to begin with, not second certainly to any similar establishment in Central Texas, the house received in the change indicated the valuable accession of a large increase of capital and a scarcely less valuable consideration in the personal services of Mr. R. Lessing, late of Memphis, Tennessee, as the senior member of the firm. Mr. Lessing is a gentleman of large experience and eminent ability in business as a wholesale dry goods merchant, especially in office work and over that department accordingly he now presides. The office itself, a model of convenience and adaptability in construction is conducted in the most perfect order and decorum, and with that thorough system, which is at once the evident secret and the silent evidence of skill and power. Mr. S. Lyons, the second member, still retains his position in the firm as resident buyer in New York. His perfect acquaintance with the market, both there and here, is a qualification surpassed only by his incomparable skill and energy as a buyer; and the success with which he performs his part of the work, will be recognized as another very important element in their elaborate system of business. Indeed such is the recognized value of services of this class that "good buyers" are always in demand at fabulous figures, and it is a common remark among merchants that to buy well is half the battle. Residing in New York, watching constantly the market, Mr. Lyons is very frequently enabled to take advantage of heavy depressions, and thus enables his firm, at home, to sell at figures, no higher certainly than many pay in New York.

Mr. J. A. Solomon is in charge of the wholesale department, while Mr. A. Cohn, a universal favorite among those who know him, presides over the retail department with equal efficiency and general acceptability.

Such are the parts assigned the different members of the firm, showing unmistakably an accurate knowledge both of personal adaptability and of that great economic principle a proper "division of labor." Further applying the same principles the employes, aggregating some twenty-five or thirty men in the active business season, have each and all their own distinctive duties to perform. Mr. A. Cohn, conducts the retail department on the first floor, Dan. Wise, the wholesale in dry goods, notions and gents' furnishing goods in the second, and Levy Bear the wholesale in boots, shoes, hats, trunks, etc., on the third floor, with full and efficient corps of subordinates.

Of the building itself, famed as it is alike for magnitude and exquisite architectural structure, it would seem superfluous to speak. Suffice it, that whether as regards the building or the business, it is in all respects well worthy our metropolitan cities, and will not suffer materially in comparison with the best of them.

With all its arrangements, thus systematised and perfected, with a run of trade already aggregating from five to ten thousand dollars a day, and with facilities to increase their business to an indefinite amount, this house is presented with confidence to retail merchants of the

HILLEBRAND & GOLDSTEIN.

Wholesale Liquor Dealers.

This firm, (H. R. Hillebrand and A. I. Goldstein) with headquarters at No. 57 Austin Avenue, is among the strongest and most reliable in Waco. It deals in liquors, wines and cigars, exclusively at wholesale. Though the house was established only about two years ago, and is yet young, as compared with some of its neighbors, its business, small at first, has grown steadily from the commencement, until it now extends over all the country tributary to Waco. Messrs. Hillebrand & Goldstein have been successful in establishing a large and profitable business and an enviable reputation. To those familiar with their places of doing business, the causes of their success are plainly understood. Here they are: In the first place their capital is ample to carry a large stock without the necessity of asking expensive indulgences; and this being the case, they are enabled to sell cheap and still make profits; they keep pure liquors and never misrepresent an article; they deal fairly and treat all men courteously; they are men of experience. They carry a full line of whiskies, such as the "Ashland," "McGreggor," "McGibbon" and "Amazon" brands. Their stock embraces a full assortment of foreign and domestic brandies and wines. They are sole agents in Waco for the Celebrated Anheuser bottled beer, which took the premium at the present Paris Exposition. They are sole agents in this country for the Johnson Brandy and Wine Company of Sacramento, California, the manufactures of which are said to be the finest in America, and equal to the best productions of France. Their stock of cigars is large. It includes various brands, both foreign and domestic. But to enumerate the contents of this house and the numerous advantages it offers, would be, with our limited space, an impossible undertaking, and we will only further say that if the reader has occasion to deal with a first-class wholesale liquor house, he will find it worth his while to call on Hillebrand & Goldstein.

HERRING NISBET & CO.

Cotton Factors and Commission Merchants.

The reliability and responsibility of this firm, no less than the fact, that their business supplies a want long needed in this market for the protection of the farmers, guarantees their success. The senior partner has been a citizen of Waco since it was a small village—"the loveliest in the plain," and in all the relations of life, he has sustained a reputation for probity and integrity second to no one in our community. Dr. Nisbet is an old commission merchant, and J. A. Nisbet, with an experience of more than twenty years in Texas in classifying and selling cotton will give his undivided attention to the business. We have no hesitation, but rather take pleasure in commending them, confident from our knowledge of them and the want they supply, that the best interest of our patrons

J. H. HUTCHINSON.

Stoves and Tinware.

It is one of those remarkable facts in human history that there is no success without energy and perseverance. And wher these two qualities are present there is seldom a failure of any well directed efforts. The lives of our most successful business men are nearly uniform in one respect at least. That is to say, they began business and formed business habits at an early period in life. Business with them has been a confirmed habit which they cannot throw off if they would, and would not if they could. The result has been that habits thus formed have made the fortune of many a man who has begun life under the most adverse circumstances. We are led to make these observations while calling the attention of our readers to the advertisement of J. H. Hutchinson, Waco's great stove dealer on Austin street. When but a boy, thirteen years of age, he left the parental roof in West Tennessee to seek his fortune in the neighboring State, Kentucky. He was without influence and without means. But applying himself with energy to whatever came in his way, he was not long in finding steady employment and friends who encouraged him. In this way he advanced step by step until he came to Waco about twelve years ago, and set up in business for himself, and to-day we have no merchant among us more highly esteemed or more generally respected. But pluck and energy not alone did this. The corner stone of Mr. Hutchinson's business prosperity has been his business integrity. To use the popular slang of the day, Hutchinson has not "gone back" on the public, and the public, therefore, has not "gone back" on him. He stands to-day unrivaled in his particular line of business, which is Stovas, Tinware and "General Household Furnishing Goods." The public know that Hutch's word is his bond, and therefore he has a prosperous business, is well patronized by all classes of our people, and will we predict, be some day a rich man.

JOHN SLEEPER.

Dealer in Boots, Shoes, Hats, Etc.,

Some of the fruits of Mr. Sleeper's recent visit to the North and East are now apparent in the large quantities of new goods daily being received at his store. Of the new goods referred to, none attract more attention or are more sought after than the celebrated brands of T. Miles & Sons and Sausser Sons & Co, Philadelphia manufacturers. These goods, both of ladies' and gentlemens' wear, have gained the reputation of being the very best in the market. They combine simple elegance with great durability, and are sold at reasonable prices. Mr. Sleeper, who we understand, is the sole agent in Waco for the manufacturers named, also deals largely in the goods of other Northern and Eastern makers. Indeed his establishment, the only one exclusively of its kind in Waco, is replete with an assortment of boots, shoes and hats that would do credit to any city in Texas. He has made arrangements to carry a larger stock this fall and winter than ever before, and his arrangements are also such that he will be enabled to sell cheaper than ever. Read his advertisement in another column of to-day's paper and then

WACO NATIONAL BANK.

Erected upon the ruins of the old bank building, which was destroyed by fire, Feb. 28, 1878, at the corner of Third street and the Plaza, now stands one of the most unique and superbly finished structures of its class anywhere to be seen. It is of brick, facings of Philadelphia pressed brick, and trimmings of Austin, Texas, stone; size, 25x90 feet, two stories, with an elaborate ornamental cornice, presenting, as a whole, quite a striking and artistic appearance.

The walls are all sixteen inches thick and surmounted with parapet walls, and as a further safeguard against fire, all openings are provided with heavy iron shutters. The front doors and windows are of plate-glass, one pane to each window. Within there is the highest possible combination of comfort and utility with simplicity and good taste. No artistic flourishes, but everything though plain the very best of its kind.

The main vault, which is built of the best rock, with heavy iron lining, is ten feet square, and within this is fitted a burglar-proof safe—a protection which subjected to the most severe test in the recent conflagration, proved entirely adequate to all purposes, the numerous books, papers and other valuables it contained, sustaining not the sligtest injury. To this vault, in the reconstruction of the building, has been added another similar in construction for the safe keeping of books, papers, special deposits, etc., making this department fully adequate to all demads.

The furniture, made to order of most modern style, is of black walnut with marble coverings, and with wire guards around the Teller's desk and all approaches to the vault, thus effectually precluding a bank robbery of the late notorious Sam Bass style.

In the building as a whole, in the bank itself as an institution, in the arrangement and construction of the former as in the management of the latter is exemplified, not only the best of judgment and good taste, but a regard for the interest and accommodation of patrons certain very creditable to the Directory.

The lease under which the Waco National Bank held the house they are now doing business in, expired yesterday and they were moving into their magnificent new Banking House. They have been badly disappointed however, at not receiving their new furniture, and Mr. George W. Jackson, the energetic cashier was "rushed right lively" last evening to arrange temporary counters, desks, &c., to meet the demands.

No. 62, Austin Avenue

Prominent among those of our city, who from quite an humble start have achieved, if not fortune, at least a highly prosperous business, in a few short years, may be mentioned the gentleman whose name heads this notice. "Humble?" Assuredly so, if small means, extremely limited cash capital be accepted as the criterion [illegible] business. In

DARROW, PATTERSON & CO.

A review of Waco and its business interests and men would be incomplete without a mention of this sterling firm. From a comparatively small beginning, they have increased their trade and importance in mercantile circles with wonderful rapidity. About the first of January last they moved into their present large and commodious double front warehouse in the recent constructed Taylor building, since then, finding themselves still cramped for room, to accomodate their growing business, they have added another large brick storage room in the rear. In connection with their large wholesale and retail grocery trade, they have this season embarked extensively in grain buying and shipping. Farmers having grain in market will do well to get a bid from this firm before selling. Messrs. Darrow & Patterson are also agents for the justly celebrated Studebaker Wagon, certainly one of the best manufactures in the market. Upon the whole, no house in the city can offer superior inducements to the farmer or country merchant, and their place should be borne in mind by persons who come to the city on a trading expedition.

MAJOR A. HINCHMAN.

Of "La Belle Wagon" Fame.

Is the largest wagon dealer in the United States. He located at Waco about four years ago, and making the La Belle Wagon a specialty, has now the confidence of the entire community to an extent which has made his name a sufficient guarantee, that any wagon sold sold by him is of the very best manufacture; and his thousands of patrons have learned the responsibility of his guarantee. Major Hinchman has been engaged in the wagon business for fifteen years, and his immense success is due entirely to his guaranteeing his wagons as superior, and proving the same to all who have dealings with him.

Hundreds of carloads find their way to Texas each year through his agency, and his name is thoroughly known and respected amongst the farmers of Texas, as perhaps any other gentleman in the State. In fact he is the Prince of wagon merchants in America.

All of his wagons are made especially for this climate. The wheels are rolled in boiling linseed oil, using the California rivets double braced pawns, split timber and seasoned under cover four to six years.

By the urgent solicitation of his friends, he has been induced to deal extensively in machinery and farming implements.

Selling the Atlas engine, Avery and Casday Sulky plows, Buckeye Grain Drill, walking and riding cultivators, cotton presses and gins, hay rakes and in fact all kinds of labour saving farming tools. He has also just put into his stock a carload of the Ohio barb wire for fencing which claims no equal. Waco is his headquarters, but he has branch houses at Austin, Dallas, Ft. Worth and McKinney, besides he sells his wagons and machinery at wholesale

THE STOVE DEPOT OF

Feldhake and Pfeiffer.

Among the business establishments of Waco, none deserve higher comments of praise than the above firm.

In their line of business they cannot be surpassed. As the fall trade opens they are laying in an extra large and well selected stock of stoves, all of new brands and improved patterns. They assure us that they find first class goods the most satisfactory both to dealer and customer, and there have made a point of supplying their establishment with nothing but goods of the highest standards and so though they are selling goods remarkably cheap, they sell no cheap goods.

In addition to their stove department they have employed a full and proficient corps of workmen, who are always prepared to perform in the most workmanlike manner all kinds of cornice work, gas fitting etc, In the manufacture of handsome cornices they particularly excel, and their work is well advertised by the selling off of several of the handsome structures in Waco. As our citizens continue to avail themselves of the convenience of water and gas, they can find no better or more proficient workmen to fit up their establishments than these gentlemen, who guarantee all work in this line done with the utmost promptness, and best workmanship. Having gentlemanly and proficient employees, both on their inside and outside business, they feel convinced that they can give complete satisfaction to all who may favor them with their patronage, and only ask a trial to convince the public of the fact.

COL. R. B. PARROTT.

General Agent, Alabama Gold Life Insurance Company.

There are few men better or more favorably known in our community or throughout Texas we may say than the gentleman whose name heads this notice. Coming here several years ago from Virginia, he at once entered the insurance business and by his energy and enterprise coupled with excellent personal qualities, soon built up an extensive and lucrative business at the same time making hosts of friends. Under his management the "Alabama Gold" has become a household term in every part of the State, a distinction it deserves no doubt but one it would not have enjoyed but for the indomitable energy and perseverance of Col. Parrott. It is one of the worthiest and most reliable institutions of its kind, and being such, we are gratified to know it is doing an extensive business not alone, in Texas, but throughout the South. Aside from his connection with insurance matters, Col. Parrott has found time during his residence in Waco to give of his energies and means to the furtherance and support of every worthy public enterprise, taking on all occasions a hearty interest in everything looking to the upbuilding and welfare of our city and its institutions. Public spirited, enterprising straight forward in all things and liberal almost to a fault, Col. Parrott is a valuable member of the community, and one whom every body respects and admires.
