September First Edition

On September 1st, proximo, the EXAMINER will publish its annual statistical review of the trade, growth, etc., of Waco and McLennan county, for the year ending on that date. The business community has long ago recognized the practical value in the text and sections of these publications. They have brought capital and people here, and aided in promoting every material interest. It is our desire to continue this work, and we make no doubt of the hearty co-operation of the public. The edition will be made as interesting and valuable as is possible, and will deal with every branch and feature of home industry and progress. We shall place advertising rates within the reach of all, and less cost than a full return will be made for all investments by the business public in our advertising columns. During the month of August advertisements will be received, either at our business room or by solicitors.

Waco, July 28.

THE CITY.

—The Mendelssohn club will meet tonight. Members are requested to be present promptly at 8 o'clock.

—If you want to arouse the ire of a certain handsome and dashing young clerk, ask him "Did you call me?"

—A rattlesnake, three feet long and having seven rattles, was killed at the corner of Eighth and Jackson streets yesterday.

—A Chinaman, the German professor, who is under indictment for stealing goods from Lessing, Solomon & Co., where he was porter for them, was put in jail again last night. He had been out on bond, but his anxieties becoming uneasy surrounded him.

—Clay Carpenter and W. K. Seymour, charged with whipping a mail carrier while on duty near Clifton, were arrested on bond yesterday. They will have a preliminary examination before the United States Commissioner next Wednesday.

—A telegram was received here yesterday by deputy sheriff Don Ford from Chris Rodgers, at Palestine, saying that Caesar McKatje had been captured there, but later developments proved that he was mistaken, or Dr. Burgess caught Caesar and put him in jail.

—The new Pullman sleepers on the Narrow Gauge road are models of elegance and comfort. One passed north attached to the regular train yesterday afternoon. They are about eight inches narrower than the standard coaches and are beautifully furnished.

—A negro in attempting to board the north bound passenger train at the Missouri Pacific depot yesterday, while it was in motion, fell and narrowly escaped falling under the wheels. Jumping on and off trains in motion has become a common practice here, and some day somebody will pay the penalty of their folly.

—The insurance rate on cotton in Waco varies from $2.50 to $4.25 on the $100.00 per year. Insurance for a shorter time comes higher, and against fire, tornado or cyclone such are making efforts and trying to induce the insurance companies to come down. A similar movement is on foot in Fort Worth. Experts connected with the present rates are sent to Waco to make them.

—Mr. Boyd Anderson, superintendent of the telephone exchange here, has put up eight new telephones the month. In conversation with Mr. Anderson yesterday we were informed that San Antonio is only city in Texas in the number of telephones in use. Connecting comes next, Galveston and Fort Worth are next in order, while Waco leads Houston and Austin in the number in use.

—Since his recent troubles with Officer Dick Lyons, one of the young men who reside in the Odd Fellows building has secured the services of a room clerk. Yesterday, in looking over his effects, he missed his overcoat. A thoroughfare was opened up around it, and he appealed to his servant to hand him his hiding place. He was told that it was in a certain bonny drawer, though he had looked in it. He knew it was not there, and said bottle dog. Later in the day he went back to his room, and when he unlocked the designated drawer he held, there lay his coat. A broken door and pane show how he found his way back.

Everything on Wheels.

Cannot too earnestly call the attention of the citizens of Waco and surrounding country to the fact that I am making a specialty of buggies, carriages and spring wagons, and carry the largest stock of buggies, carriages and spring wagons of any house in Central Texas. Come and will sell you anything from life, also sale or trade, cheaper than any house in Texas. I most respectfully ask you to call and examine my stock and prices and am satisfied you will be convinced that I am selling buggies, carriages and spring wagons cheaper than any house in Texas. I always keep a full stock of the celebrated Mitchell wagons. Remember the place, corner Lake and Austin streets.

WACO'S FIRE ALARM.

Wires all Stretched and Everything in Readiness—Other Cities Adopting the System.

The Waco fire department a few weeks ago erected upon mission grounds a turning alarm operation here a system of the electric telegraph, in order to facilitate giving the alarm and to more readily locate a fire. Mr. Tom Padgett was sent north with instructions for running the various systems and make the purchase. He chose the Gamewell fire alarm telegraph system and the order was given. The machinery, gongs, boxes, etc., have arrived, the poles erected and the wires are strung. This week we recognized an old friend very hot in the south and he is now in south cities. The books are going and we are urged that, while the strong and number of the box are given, the large bell in the engine house also rings the number of the box, thus enabling the firemen and the public to locate the fire without any trouble. Each box has five keys, which are to be left in the brackets front of the box. These boxes will be so located as to afford the greatest benefit and convenience to the public. Should a fire be discovered an alarm has to be rung on the nearest box, turn the hinged door and the work is done the alarm is given. The large gong outside the hose hall at the engine house, ringing out the number of the box and you know where the fire is without waiting until the flames light up the heavens above. When the key is inserted and the alarm rung the key cannot be removed from the box again until a release key, which is carried by the chief or city marshal, is inserted. Thus a false alarm is prevented, or if given, the giver can be easily spotted, as these keys are all numbered and a record kept of those to whom they are issued. The cost of the Waco system will be quite or nearly $2,000, the large part of which is borne by the department itself. The only and I say are asking of the citizens is that the residents of the neighborhood in which a box is located, will help defray the actual expense of that box. This will give the firemen about a thousand dollars, the remainder is paid by the department. A committee has been for a week circulating petitions to this end. One list has been completed and a box will be placed at the corner of Fourth and Austin street. The other lists are not finished, but will undoubtedly be filled. The cost of a box is $50 a year.

Following the example set by Waco, Fort Worth is about to order a system for that town to cost some $2,000. The city council feels the hit there, but here in Waco not a cent is given by the council. Other cities are speaking of ordering a system similar to ours. Waco takes the lead when it comes to a fire department, for there is no reason to deny it is the best in the state.

Burglary in East Waco.

During Tuesday night the store of Mr. Cyrus W. Jones, on Elm street, in East Waco, was entered by burglars and robbed of $125.00 in money and go de. Nearly $100.00 in money was taken and a large amount of jewelry, pistols, etc. A track stood there by Mr. Bessie McKeon was gutted of its contents, but what was in it is not known as Mr. McKeon had not had it open for some time. The burglar (or gang) effected an entrance through the window by forcing back the fastener, the door and pushing the bar back. The first hole did not answer the purpose and a second one greater in size was bored. A lamp was found burning on the counter with the chimney badly smoked, having evidently been lighted and used to assist the scoundrels in his work. A pocket book and shoe bag, used for holding money, were among the things taken off and they were found yesterday morning in the lumber yard by one of the hands and returned to Mr. Jones. A note for $2.00 got made to Tom McMillan, in favor of J. A. Oakes was also taken. Several payments have been made on the note, and the balance due is about $3.00. There is no clue to the burglar, and it is the second time Mr. Jones's place has been operated on, the first attempt proving unsuccessful. Mr. Jones feels the loss keenly, as his means are limited and he is a cripple, besides suffering the additional affliction of having a wounded hand, his thumb having been badly mashed recently by one of the beams of the factory. It is more enough to rob those of ample means and sound limbs, but to rob a cripple who is dependent upon his little business for support exceeds the same of villainy.

Heavy Loss by Fire

A frame fire and six block Tuesday morning. About 2 o'clock, Mr. S. H. Smith's, about three miles east of Waco, was burned. The fire caught from a wood stove which was in a portion of the house. The flames spread so rapidly and so in the first room and it was impossible to save anything about the place. Nothing was saved. Every the bedroom from in the yard, some twenty or twelve in number, were stolen. Mr. Smith's total loss of all, machinery and cotton is estimated at $4,000, on which there was no insurance. Neither Mr. Smith's individual loss nine bales of cotton belonging to other parties were burned, making a total loss of $4,500. The cotton burned was valued at $1,000. At the time of the fire Mr. Smith was engaged in ginning cotton, and hastened at once to the gin and made any effort to save the baled cotton in the yard. Only one bale was rolled out, and in an effort to save another Mr. Smith had his face badly burned and blistered. His loss is quite serious. He has been running a gin for seventeen years and this is the first loss by fire. He has always exercised the greatest caution and used every precaution against fire.

A Farewell Call.

Saturday and adjourn the closing of the well known first and close house of J. P. Smith and Co. The business will be wound up and the house closed. Now is the time to secure real bargains in fine boots and shoes. Don't miss the opportunity if you want anything in the boot and shoe line. Remember the place, Smith's old stand, Austin street.

W. P. SMITH.

Cotton Exchange.

This new resort has become a favorite with all lovers of good liquors, wines and cigars. Phil and John thoroughly understand how to mix fine drinks and please the appetite. They keep the purest and choicest brands of whisky and imported goods and set them off in good style.

Still Another Car Load.

Sanford Johnson yesterday received another car load of fresh country produce, potatoes, onions, apples, etc., which he is selling rapidly at low prices. Call on him and don't forget that he has an abundance of fresh, good butter.

AT YELLOWSTONE.

President Arthur Tells a Joke on Conkling.

Chicago Evening News.

"I don't think I ever told you fellows how Mr. Crowley played it on Conkling one night up in Albany," remarked Mr. Arthur, as he turned up a pack for the third time.

"Long," said Judge Rollins, eyeing him suspiciously. "No, I can't say that you ever did."

"Take one," said Mr. Arthur. "Well, you see, Conkling can never sleep well at night, and he has his little game—by Jove, it's spades—he will travel all over town to find somebody who will play with him. He, on a Bleeper. Well, up in Albany all the old cronies of the senator had left as soon as they cared to, and they were beginning to excuse themselves on the ground of previous engagements, etc. Conkling went down to the station one evening, about New York train time, hoping to catch a sucker, when who should he meet but his old friend Dick Crowley—just as that dense for long? Well, they walked up to the hotel together talking about the crops, the progress of Christianity in Japan, the Indian question, and so forth, and at last—dead 'em, judge, that's high, low, game for us—Conkling asked Dick how he'd like to have a little game of poker.

"'Poker?' said Dick, 'why I never played a game of poker in my life. I can't play poker. Why, I'd lose every cent I played poker.'

"'I thought perhaps you might have learned it from Tom Murphy,' said Conkling.

"'No, no, said Crowley, 'Murphy and I never played anything but forty-fives for the cider. I really don't know one card from another.'

"'Poker is a very simple game,' said the Senator. 'That's ours, is it? Want to play another for cider? Poker—and very interesting. For instance, two aces—'

"'What are aces?' asked Crowley.

"'Aces spots, I will call them to simplify matters—two aces spots beat any other two cards of a kind in the pack, three aces spots beat any three of a kind, four aces spots beat anything. Trays are better than aces, jacks than trays, kings than queens—do you see?'

"'I don't quite understand it,' said Crowley, 'but if it will be any accommodation to you I'll try and learn it.'

"Here, Stager,' said Judge Rollins, interrupting the story, 'that want do, you know. I saw you drop a card on your knee. That was a misdeal. You fellows are too far ahead to play that.'

"'I really didn't notice that you gave me seven cards,' said General Stager.

"'Oh, of course not,' said Judge Rollins, 'you wouldn't notice it if we gave you 12—and, go on with the story.'

"The two went up to Conkling's room, and Dick learned the game very fast, but he made some terrible foolish bets on bad hands. He would bet high on a pair of deuces, and he blew in $10 on a lobsiled flush. Conkling had taken in about 150 cash cobs, and was going to stay up with Dick until he got his till when Crowley looked at his watch.

"'Is two aces better'n two kings?' asked Dick.

"'Why, yes,' replied Conkling.

"'Give me three cards,' said Dick.

"'Conkling threw two and had a full hand, kings up.

"'What's two pairs good for?' asked Dick.

"'Two pairs beat one pair, or any two smaller pairs,' said Conkling.

"'Then I bet your 100 on my hand,' said Crowley.

"'I'll see you,' said go you 500 to then,' said Conkling.

"'I'll see you and go you 500 better,' said Dick, and they planked down the money.

"'Well, I don't want to win too much of your money,' said Conkling, 'I'll see what you've got.'

"'Two pairs,' said Crowley.

"'Of what?' asked Conkling.

"'Of aces,' replied Crowley, 'as he reached for the stakes.

"'That is adverse to decent,' said Conkling, rising to his full height. 'I saw no grounds for you, Crowley. You must have known you had four aces.'

"'Oh, certainly,' replied Crowley, 'I did know it. But I wanted to simplify matters by calling them two aces.'

The room was resolving a solemn night upon the street, as Rob Lancelot and Judge Rollins strolled towards the focus that night.

"'Are you sure you saw him put up the cards?' asked the judge.

"'Sure of it,' said, 'I'll swear to it. I'm out $14.' How much have you lost?'

"'Fifty-six, but don't give it away.' He told me the cross and half story as of Conkling and Crowley so as to get his money back on us. I'll get even with him yet.'

THE JENKINS TRIAL.

Charge of Venue Denied—The Case Reset for Thursday.

(Special Telegram to the News.)

Marlin, August 28.—When court met this morning the docket was taken up and the Jenkins case was called. Judge Logan's decision on the motion to change venue to Caldwell county was decided interest manifested on the part of everyone in the crowd eagerly watched every opportunity to catch an idea in advance of what would be the result. Judge Logan reviewed the testimony at length, reading the reports of the public prints had circulated more extensively in Caldo than here, hence a change of venue would be useless, which he refused.

District Attorney Hall had the state's witnesses called, twelve of whom did not answer. He announced ready for trial. The defense had thirty witnesses called, twelve of whom did not answer. The names of Mesdames Mary and Maude Butler were called, to which they responded in person. The defense said they could not go to trial with that number of witnesses absent. District Attorney Hall asked that they be required to make a legal showing. The attorneys asked until 3 o'clock to prepare their showing. District Attorney Hall then requested that the case be reset and postponed till Thursday, which was accordingly ordered.
