for unprecedented one example equalled by which, in him, had so amazed her. His German good-nature—which she had praised somewhat too highly—was not, however, so great that he could laugh at her vulgar impertinence, or treat it as something pardonable in a lady. His anger, also, was thoroughly German, both by nature and constitution and his own consciousness, as well as the respect which every learned man owed to himself, impelled him—his position in society, his reputation and his worth, compelled him—from henceforth, and in the strongest and most unequivocal terms, to break off all acquaintance with so thorough and inveterate a French-woman. For the rest, he should be at the ambassador's that evening, and if, after the present declaration on his part, she should still dare to claim acquaintance with him, he could show her—however stupid he might be—with what profoundest contempt he could repel so presumptuous a creature. Inasmuch as stupidity and profoundity might be compatible with the present explanation; he therefore remained—so and so.

All admired this weighty epistle as much as if it were the masterpiece of some diplomatist, at once graceful and resolute. A manservant took it to the lady's house immediately.

To the ambassador's house went the professor, accompanied by a few of his squires, and armed with all his dignity. Many people of fashion, both ladies and gentlemen, as well as some distinguished men, were present. The professor was kindly welcomed by the host and his lady, and after a while the French ladies—who had been keeping up an animated conversation with some of their own countrymen in a distant corner—came up to him.

"Good heavens, my honored friend!" exclaimed the elder, in her native tongue; "what a most extraordinary letter you sent me this morning! I was in the country when it reached me. I did not get out of my carriage and make a few calls, so I read it and, as I have not yet recovered from the astonishment it caused me, I have brought it along with me. Your excuses, my esteemed friend, will have to be both ample and clever, if I ascribe this incomprehensible occurrence to a fit of hypochondria."

"I have nothing to do with excuses," cried the German, in a state of great excitement; "they ought to come from you; but how cleverly soever you may parade them, they will make no impression on my firmness."

She replied with some warmth—being naturally impetuous; and as the professor scarcely took the trouble to keep his temper, his voice gradually rose into a scream, so that all the bystanders turned their heads towards this group, in amazement.

"Friends," said the minister, "come with me into the next room, lest this unusual disturbance should draw all eyes on you. If you think me worthy of being umpire in the matter, I trust I shall be able to reconcile such distinguished friends."

So the contending parties, followed the kind hearted man, who was accompanied by his daughter and two men of letter; the French lady was followed by a few other ladies, whose curiosity would not let them stay behind; and the professor was attended by his whole staff, their faces full of anger.

"Your excellency," said the professor, as soon as the door was shut, "shall now be informed of the most outrageous circumstance that was, perhaps ever announced. Now, that we have destroyed French tyranny, and frustrated their attempts at universal dominion, they wish to trample our spirits under foot."

"Since the affair has become the subject of a judicial investigation," said the French lady with a smile, "will you, Count, read this letter, which the Herr Professor sent me this morning?"

She handed the letter to the ambassador with a courteous smile, in which the professer however, could see nothing but insolence and cunning.

"I have to request that your excellency will read it aloud," said he; "it was occasioned by a letter which the lady sent me, and which I have with me at present. In due time that letter shall be read aloud also, that, seeing I have expressed my feelings with some warmth, I may humbly endeavor to justify myself."

Every one was waiting anxiously, so the minister began to read the professor's letter in a rather unsteady voice. As he proceeded, his embarrassment increased, partly on account of the strange French, but still more because he had to repeat phrases and improprieties which are altogether banished from society. When he had finished, the Professor said:

"Your excellency is, as I see, astonished that I should write thus; but siece you have taken in hand this affair, which has wounded me so deeply, I beg you also to read aloud what the lady wrote to me."

"You are utterly incomprehensible professor," exclaimed the French lady; "it is enough to make one believe in magic and witchcraft; for there cannot be any natural explanation of such conduct."

The minister then read her letter also, with a more cheerful look and a firmer voice, for he saw in it nothing but friendship, civility, and delicate flattery. When he got near the conclusion, the professor laid his hand upon it and said, with a reddening face:

"Now, I beg you will read this out [illegible] the uncera-

"Why," said the minister—who could hardly speak for laughing—"here it is, quite plain: 'could unite to such profundity—a sagacity altogether unexampled.'"

With trembling hands did the German philosopher take the letter—he looked and read; then read and looked; his companions examined it likewise, much as if it were a knotty passage in some half-obliterated manuscript. The French lady laughed, and loudly clapping her small white hands, exclaimed:

"What! you read stupidity instead of sagacity? you, the man of such insight! and all your friends there into the bargain?"

"The characters," stammered the professor, "are so very similar; so close together; so free and bold, and yet so obscure withal—that—I—I really beg pardon."

He was silent, and immediately withdrew with his friends. The instant he left the room, the company—no longer under any restraint—burst into an uncontrollable fit of laughter. At last the Count said:

"I request the ladies and gentlemen, if possible, not to mention this strange affair; indeed, it were well if we all forgot it, in order to avoid distressing the man who is otherwise so estimable."

"Oh, he will get over it," said a young lady; "the week will soon be gone, and then it will be equally forgotten, whether we hush it up or noise it abroad."

"Suppose," said the lady traveler, "I adopt his reading, in the next edition of my letter; I should not be far wrong, should I?"

She never saw him again, for soon after both sisters returned to their native country.

Cholera in the West.—This disease has made its appearance at different points in the West. The Louisville Courier says that a cabin passenger on the steamer Bob Rogers, from St. Louis, died of cholera, and was buried at a wood yard below Evansville.

The Louisville Journal says: "We learn from the officers of the Bostona that this disease was prevailing in several towns and on the plantations along the Mississippi.

The steamer Sultana arrived at St. Louis on the 6th, with a large number of emigrants. Only four deaths occurred during the trip. The quarantine below St. Louis has been abandoned, the ground being under water.

The Natchez Courier, of the 4th, says: The cholera, we regret to learn, appeared a few days since on the "Waterloo Plantation" of Capt. Minor, and several deaths occurred among the negroes. It is no doubt one of the results of the crevasse which took place in that neighborhood last winter.

The Cincinnati Times of Monday says: There is no doubt whatever that cases of cholera occur daily in every part of the West—on the rivers, and inland beyond contagion, if that is essential to its existence. Louisville and Cincinnati both furnish well defined cases in no wise connected with river employment. Bowel complaints are now general, and should attract attention.

A Depot Robber Caught.—The railroad depot at North Abington was broken into and robbed of $100 last Tuesday during the temporary absence of the ticket master. The following day, a silver watch was stolen from the the house of Mr. Obadiah Reed, Jr. by a fellow who went to board there named Martin Waldron. The thief finding that he was suspected, left Abington, but he was pursued to North Bridgewater, where he was found snugly stowed away in a pig-stye. The watch and money were found secreted in the stye. Waldron has been held for trial.—Boston Courier.

Conviction for Intent to Kidnap.—In the Boston Municipal Court on Saturday, Julian McCrea and B. F. Roberts (both colored) were found guilty upon the charge of assault with intent to kidnap Thomas P. Smith, a very respectable colored man, who gave offense to some of his colored brethren by opposing the abolition of separate schools for colored children. The offense is a very serious one, and was committed under very aggravated circumstances

Fatal Accident.—At Northfield, Vt., on Wednesday, Dr. Chapman of Manchester, who has recently been engaged upon the Vermont Central Railroad, was so badly injured on a locomotive, that an amputation of his left leg above the knee was considered necessary, and Mr. Chapman died on Friday morning.—Manchester Mirror.

MIDDLEBURY COLLEGE, VT.—The President of this institution, since his mission to Boston to raise a $35,000 fund, has been at New York and added $10,000 or more to the subscription, making the amount now raised about $45,000. $10,000 more are wanted to place the college in the position desired by its friends.

SAD ACCIDENT IN MARLBORO.—On Wednesday afternoon, 29th Zebina Wallace, Jr. a lad about 16 years of age, son of Zebina Wallace, Esq., of Marlboro, was bathing in a small pond in that town, when he was seized with the cramp, (as is supposed,) and before any help could reach him, he was drowned. Two of his friends were on the shore at a very short distance, but being unable to swim they could render him no assistance. He was a young man of much promise and his early and sudden death has brought sorrow to the hearts of a large circle of relatives and friends.

☞ Abijah Larned, charged with entering the Battenkill Bank at Manchester, Vermont, was arrested at Rochester, New York, last week by the police. He is one of the men who robbed the Connecticut River Bank, Charlestown, N. H. some time since—was held to bail in $2800 and forfeited his bonds. He is a man of gentlemanly exterior, and had upon his person $835 in

WHIG STATE CONVENTION.

The Whigs of Vermont are requested to meet in State Convention at Bellows Falls, on Wednesday the 25th of June next, at 2 o'clock P. M., for the purpose of nominating a State Ticket and making other suitable preparations for the coming election. In view of the importance of this election, a full representation from every section of the State is earnestly invited.

It is hoped that the members of all the County Committees will be present, as it will afford them an opportunity of conferring together to adopt suitable measures calculated to continue the harmony and success of the party.

☞ In consequence of a disappointment in the necessary and expected help to set up our paper, we have been compelled for the two last weeks to issue at a later day than usual.

We hope however, to be able hereafter to be up to time.

☞ The Boston Atlas has come out recently in favor of Daniel Webster as the next Whig candidate for the Presidency. What will two or three papers in in this state, that take their cue from the Atlas and the Albany Evening Journal say to this? The Atlas says, &c.—Middlebury Register.

Although we are not aware that we have any 'two or three papers in this State' that 'take their cue' from the highly valuable paper above named—or from any other—yet if any such there be, we imagine that about the first thing they will say to the above is that the 'Register' has discovered a wonderful 'mare's nest'—or in other words, has been decidedly humbugged,—'sold' and 'done for.'

The extract given by the 'Register' corroborative of the above statement is taken from an editorial which appeared in the Atlas previous to the last convention for a Presidential nomination and at a time when the Whig party of Massachusetts were almost unanimous in their expression of preference for the nomination of Mr Webster. These sentiments expressed by the Atlas then—some three or four years since—have been recently placed before the public by the Boston Bee one of the several over-anxious and over-zealous sheets devoted to the interests of Mr. Webster, as the sentiments of that paper now in view of the coming nomination;—thus endeavoring, by a fraud, to make it appear that the Atlas has suddenly wheeled into the support of Mr. W. as a candidate before the next convention—whereas it has been, and still is, urging the importance of Massachusetts withholding, for the present, any expression of preference for either of the candidates as yet named.

How far the interests of Mr. Webster will be advanced by a swindle so sagacious in its conception, and so cunningly carried out, remains to be seen;—but that such an attempt on the part of one Whig paper to place another in a false position—aiming thereby to mislead and deceive others—will meet with the contempt of all honest and right minded persons—is a matter not to be questioned. A more striking illustration of the truth of the old adage, "Evil communications &c." we have not seen for many a day; and if our ardent 'Union' friends so readily learn the crooked ways of their new 'Hunker' allies while in a state of partial connection with them,—what are we to expect as the canvass opens and they are found in full fellowship, and hand in hand together?

How could the 'Register' so heartily rejoice over the imaginary discomfiture of 'two or three' of his brethren so soon after presenting his very handsome resolutions at the County Convention in his own County?

THE CONVENTION.

It is to be hoped that the Whigs of our section will be ready and on hand at the State Convention next week and fully prepared to renew their pledge of adhesion to the old and time-honored cause, and to enter 'with a will' upon the contest before them.

We are sorry to see that fears are expressed by some of our cotemporaries that unnecessary difficulties may grow out of the over-action—on the one side or the other—of certain hair-splitting geniuses who are so excessively anxious that the precise point should be indicated where each individual shall stand in reference to the Fugitive Slave law—and the exact amount of love for the Union agreed upon,—as shall be considered necessary to constitute a true Whig. Now for one we have little or no fears that any such nonsensical attempt will be made; but if it should be—and a satisfactory result be arrived at, we hope they will go on and 'guage' the Convention to ascertain precisely how far Whigs shall go in carrying out their views of principles—as this no less than the Anti Slavery—is one of the cardinal principles of the party and should be as well looked to.

But as we have before said, we have no fears in regard to all this. The Whig platform has ever proved itself sufficiently broad to hold a party large enough to ensure a victory—and with union and work a crowning triumph will reward our efforts in the coming contest.

RAILROAD MEETING.

At the meeting of the Stockholders of the Rutland and Burlington Railroad Company, at Brandon, to-day, the following board of Directors was elected. We have no room for further particulars this week.

T. FOLLETT, JOHN BRADLEY, Burlington. JOHN A. CONANT, Brandon. BENJ. T. REED, WILLARD A. HARRINGTON, C. J. HENDEE, Boston. A. WENTWORTH, Jr., Bellows Falls.

WHIG COUNTY CONVENTION.

The Whigs of the County of Rutland are requested to meet at the Court House in Rutland, on Wednesday, the 16th of July next, at 11 o'clock A.M., to nominate suitable persons for Senators and County Officers and to make other necessary preparations for the coming election.

SUICIDE.—The body of a young man named Edwin Mann was found floating on Saturday in the Merrimac river near the lower bridge in Concord, N. H. To one end of a rope secured to the body was attached a car wheel thirty pounds in weight. He was a young man of good family, nineteen years of age, and has been missing for about two weeks. The cause of this suicide was unrequited love.

ADDISON WHIG COUNTY CONVENTION.

The Whigs of Addison County met at Middlebury on the 11th inst. and made the following nominations:

For Senators, EDWARD SEYMOUR, Vergennes, BELA HOWE, Shoreham.

For Judge of County Court, JOSEPH HAYWARD, Panton, ROSWELL BOTTUM, Jr., Orwell.

For Judge of Probate, District of Addison, HORATIO SEYMOUR, Middlebury.

For Judge of Probate, District of New Haven, HARVEY MUNSILL, Bristol.

For Sheriff, DAVID S. CHURCH, Middlebury.

For High Bailiff, WILLIAM JOSLIN, Vergennes.

For State's Attorney, JOHN W. STEWART, Middlebury.

The convention passed a series of resolutions (reported by Mr. Barrett, of the Register, Chairman of the Committee on Resolutions, and doubtless written by him) which it would not be easy to praise above their merit. We give them entire, and with very unusual gratification.

Union Whig.

Resolved, That we remain unchanged in our devotion to the fundamental doctrines and measures heretofore supported by the Whig party; and that we are in favor, especially of such a modification of the present Tariff, by the substitution of specific for ad valorem duties, as shall afford due protection and encouragement to our Home Industry; of such Improvements in our Rivers and Harbors as the wants of our Commerce, to a reasonable extent, demand; of a national system of Finance that shall be safe, practicable, and convenient; of such a disposition of the Public Lands as shall be just to the old States, and liberal to actual settlers; of economy in the public expenditures; and of a faithful observance of all parts of the Constitution, intended by its FRAMERS.

Resolved, That we regard the institution of Slavery with permanent dislike; and that,—while we have no power over it in the States in which it now exists, and no wish to violate any manifest constitutional obligations,—we will use all proper means to confine the influence of this evil within its present limits.

Resolved, That we repose entire confidence in the present Administration, and that its foreign and domestic policy, conservative in its character and avoiding dangerous extremes, is entitled to our approbation and support.

Resolved, That we are, as we ever have been, devotedly attached to the Union; that we look to the Courts of the United States, as the true interpreters of of the Constitution and the Laws of the nation, with implicit trust in their wisdom and fidelity; and that we have no sympathy or toleration for the revolutionary doctrines of secession, nullification, or disunion, in whatever quarter manifested.

A YANKEE LOCKSMITH AT THE WORLD'S FAIR.—A correspondent of the SUN writing from London says: "Mr. Hobbs, a Yankee from Baltimore—the noted lock picker, is here; he has with him a lock which I have examined, and offers a reward of one thousand dollars to any one who can open it without a key, and also has given out he will put down a thousand dollars that he will open any lock in the Kingdom, without a key. He is one of the tions of London, and one of the most acute Americans in the metropolis. I was very much pleased with his modest and quiet assurance in making the locksmiths gaze with wonder on the Yankee and his mysterious lock.

NOVEL WAY TO EVADE TOLL. A few days ago, some young men near Doddington, being unable to pay toll for a donkey which they had with them, dressed it up with a coat and hat, and raising it on its hind legs, proceeded to support it through the gate with these consoling words, "Come along, brother, you be'nt so drunk as you pretend to be."—Liverpool paper.

The total receipts of the Great Exhibition thus far are £180,000, which leaves a net surplus over all expenses of £30,000.

The Mail says that a fire occurred in South Newbury, Vt., on Saturday, destroying about two thirds of the buildings in it. It was occasioned by some boys igniting matches in a shed.

The New Bedford Mercury, among other papers, casts prejudices against Mr. Webster aside, and eulogizes the speech at Buffalo as comprehending all which an American statesman should devote to his country.

The plurality principle has been adopted in Connecticut in the election of Representatives, as well as Senators, Members of Congress, Sheriff, &c.

☞ A son of Mr. Micajah Butler, aged about five years, residing in Lynn, was missed by his parents on Tuesday, afternoon, and found in Newburyport, asleep under a seat in a car, at that place being discovered by the man who swept out the cars he was recognized and taken back to his home; he probably went in the train about noon time, and slept all the afternoon until he was discovered.

☞ The Democrats of Mr. Stanly's District, N. Carolina have nominated Mr Rollin of Franklin county for Congress it is understood that Stanly will be run again by the Whigs.

☞ A despatch from Pittsburg: Pa. dated 13 th instsays steamer Messenger brought up $200 00 in specie for New york the river has 5 feet of water in the channel and the health of the city continue good There is no sickness along the ohio river; the Cholera excitement has subsided.

The acceptance of the California Land Commissionership by Hiram Ketchum is doubtful. Mr. Bartol; a California Whig is warmly urged for the post.

☞ A man named Timothy Palmer was murdered on the 30th ult., in a most shocking manner, near Wurtsboro, Mo., probably by the hands of his own brother, Wm. R. Palmer. The latter has been committed to prison.

☞ A late elopement from Cincinnati has caused a great excitement in that city. The man who ran away with the wife of one of his clerks, was a merchant of high standing, connected with two of the leading firms of the West. He left his own wife and four children behind, and carried off the funds of his partners.

☞ The Alleghany Enterprise states that a party came off in Pittsburg, one evening last week, where the ladies were all dressed in the Turkish costume.

☞ Mrs Fillmore is at Toledo, Ohio, on a visit so some relatives.

☞ The editor of the Newark Advertiser has been shown a rifle capable of firing twenty-five balls every minute, including the time of loading. Under the barrel, in the place of the ordinary ramrod, is an iron tube containing the twenty-five balls, and by cocking the gun a ball is brought up in the barrel, and the same operation also brings up from the breech a "pill" of priming.—The charge of powder is contained in the ball, which is not round, but oblong and having an opening which is corked shut after the powder has been introduced. The quantity of powder is only twenty-eight grains, and drives the ball with greater force than the large charge in an ordinary gun.

☞ We learn from the Christian Advocate and Journal that the book agents of the Methodist Episcopal Church, acting upon the suggestion of the Court in the late trial respecting the church property, have proposed to the commissioners of the Church, South, "and adjustment of their preferred claims by a legal arbitration under the authority of the Court."

☞ The following double entendre was perpetrated at a public dinner a few days since, at Queenston, C. W.:

"Dam your canals, blast your furnaces, sink your coalpits, down with your railroads, away with your electric telegraphs, and over with your suspension bridges."

New York, June 12th—By steamer Isabel, arrived yesterday at Charleston, we have Havana dates to the 7th inst. The political news is of no interest. The Isabel brought $63,000 in specie.

PIANOS FOR SALE

AT CASTLETON SEMINARY.

THE SUBSCRIBER would inform the public that he has on hand and is constantly receiving Pianos of all prices from the celebrated Manufactory of Hayne, Davis & Co., of Boston, which he will sell for cash or approved credit on the most reasonable terms. Having made arrangements with said Company, he will sell their pianos for less than they can be obtained in the city. Those wishing to purchase a brilliant toned instrument, warranted for one year, will please call before purchasing elsewhere.
