ELECTION OF GOVERNOR.

The announcement was received by telegraph last evening, that Hon. JOHN S. ROBINSON was yesterday elected to the Office of Governor of Vermont. No details of the bolstings have come to hand.

Although politically we deprecate this result as much as anybody, we are reasonably thankful that things are no worse. From a long personal acquaintance with the Governor elect, we are able to testify to his high ability and irreproachable honor; and risk nothing by the prediction that he will perform the responsible duties entrusted to him with honesty of purpose, and a zealous desire to subserve the best interests of the State. Whether the policy he may choose to pursue will effect the desired object, remains to be seen.

There are some particulars that have not as yet transpired, respecting the means by which this election was brought about. It was helped along by some Whig votes. When we learn what Whigs so far forgot their integrity, and so unkindly prostituted their faith, we shall endeavor to mark them!

NEWS BY THE ATLANTIC.

Dreadful Shipwreck—300 lives lost!

The ship Anne Jane, of Quebec, 1,200 tons, with a valuable cargo and 400 passengers and crew, was wrecked off the Hebrides, and 300 persons perished. She left the Mersey 8th ult. for Quebec.

A terrible accident happened on the Great Southern and Western Railroad, near Dublin, by which 14 persons were killed and 50 were wounded, many being horribly mangled.

Cholera has broken out with great violence on board the packet ship Isaac Wright, which struck on a rock, on the 20th ult., off Cape Clear, and had to put back to Liverpool.

Before the ship reached the Mersey, 47 passengers were thrown overboard, and several others died in harbor and were carried ashore. The remainder of the sick were carried in carts to the hospital, where a large number—if not [illegible] succumbed to the cholera—had died.

The Nile Gunboats and 32 total crews are lost.

RUSSIA AND TURKEY. The rumor that was circulated that the Sultan had actually signed the declaration to the Russians to declare war the Sultan only did, as a matter of form, the opinion or sanction of the Sheik-ul-Islam, the decision of the Divan; and this formality requires a delay of some days. The despatch which has caused so much excitement, stated that the Sultan signed the declaration the same evening it was voted.

This measure does not appear to have been the result of any new or especial aggression on the part of the Russians—The Czar had committed his several acts of aggression and insult, without encountering the resistance to be naturally anticipated. He had invaded and occupied the Danubian Provinces; he had demanded unwarrantable concessions as the price of his retirement, he had rejected the Turkish terms of adjustment, and he had expressed his several intentions with the almost arrogance by the mouth of his Minister.

None of these proceedings, however, elicited such a decision as this now pronounced, and the probability is, not that the Government, or even the chief authorities of the Ottoman nation, are more desirous than before of bringing the question to the issue of the sword, but that the feeling of the population and the army have become uncontrollable, and that a declaration of war was thought indispensible to the internal security of the State.

On the other side the Emperor of Russia has declared for peace. This announcement may probably appear incredible after what has been proved respecting the nature of the original transgression, but we can state, upon undoubted authority, that the sentiments of the Czar, as expressed at Olmutz by his own lips, are not only in favor of a pacific settlement but are reconcilable to a great extent with the conditions proposed by England.

The fact that the Turkish Council had voted war, was, of course, garnished with all sorts of rumors. It was said that an engagement had been fought between the Turks and Russians.

There are now between 60 and 70,000 logs valued at rising a million of dollars, lying on the west branch of the Penobscot, between Milecket River and the Five Islands on the Penobscot, and for want of water cannot be got down. There are also about 150 rafts, making 20 cargoes, from five to ten miles above the city of Bangor, waiting for a freshet sufficient to bring them down. The demand for lumber is great and cannot be supplied. The consequence is, that what there is in market commands a good price. The export of long lumber from Bangor for the year is estimated at 20,000,000 feet; of short lumber 150,000,000 feet.

FORGIVENESS.—My heart was heavy, for its trust had been abused, its kindness answered by foul wrong, so turning gloomily away from my fellow men, one summer Sabbath day, I strolled among the green mounds of the village burial-place, where I was reminded how all human love and hate find one end, and how, sooner or later, the wronged and the wrong doer, each with a meek face and cold hands folded over a still heart, pass the green threshold of a common grave. Awed for myself and pitying my race, one common sorrow, like a mighty wave, swept all my pride away, and trembling I forgive.—[J. G. Whittier.
