

The Neutrality Laws.

A Washington despatch will be found in another column which purports to give some of the points of the annual message which Mr. Buchanan has prepared. The same despatch says in conclusion: A distinct recommendation is made for an alteration of the neutrality laws, so as to permit Americans to enlist in defence of any legitimately established government, without incurring the penalties of this law.

This may be merely a surmise of the telegraphic reporter; but we sincerely hope that the President will recommend a very material alteration of the odious, un-American, cowardly and superannuated statutes which have fettered our advancing footsteps as much as they have belied our national character. We have little reason to expect that our influence as a people will be felt among the neighboring states of this continent, or that our natural and necessary acquisition of the whole North American continent will fairly begin, so long as these absurd prohibitions disgrace our statute books. As the law of April 20th 1818 now stands, no military or naval expedition whatever can be prepared in this country to operate in another, not even at the express invitation of a Republic which is about to be overwhelmed. That it has been permitted to remain so long without modification is something not easy to reconcile with American feeling and American character.

We are not at liberty to believe, however, that the President will propose or favor any such abrogation or change as will deprive the U. S. Government of the power of preventing military expeditions of as purport and of a manifestly injurious tendency. The only document in which he has yet referred to any length to the subject of the Neutrality Laws was his message of Jan. 7th, 1858, relative to the arrest of Walker by Fanning, in which he says: "In thus far disapproving the conduct of Commodore Paulding, no inference must be drawn that I am less determined than I have ever been to execute the Neutrality Laws of the United States. This is my imperative duty and I shall continue to perform it by all the means which the constitution and the laws have placed in my power."

He quotes and approves in the next paragraph the expressions used by Mr. Monroe in his message of Dec. 7th, 1819, as follows: "It is of the highest importance to our national character and indispensable to the morality of our citizens, that all violations of our Neutrality Laws should be prevented. No door should be left open for the evasion of our laws, no opportunity afforded to any who may be disposed to take advantage of it to compromise the interest or the honor of the nation."

He gives a brief summary of the laws of June 6th, 1794, and April 20th, 1818, and descants with his usual vigor on lawless expeditions and the necessity of preventing them. He regards them as "the most effectual mode of retarding American progress," although he recognizes "the destiny of our race to spread themselves over the continent of North America, and this at no distant day, should events be permitted to take their natural course." It will be remembered that, in January 1858, Senator Sillwell renewed an effort which he had made four years previously, to vest in the President of the United States in certain contingencies and under proper restrictions, the power of temporarily suspending by proclamation the operation of the Neutrality Laws. When his resolutions were first read in the Senate and ordered to be printed he said: "I believe the policy to be suicidal which deprives us, at all times and under all circumstances, of the faculty to aid the struggles of oppressed and suffering communities against the despotism of their rulers."

There is reason to believe that these resolutions had the approbation of Mr. Buchanan and that he sympathized in the sentiments expressed by Mr. Sillwell. We hope the subject has been made prominent in the forthcoming message, that it will be thoroughly canvassed by both branches of the federal legislature and that some law will be substituted for that of 1818, more compatible with the spirit and more promotive of the progress of this nation.

TEXAS ALMANAC.—We are obliged by Messrs. W. & D. Richardson, the Galveston publishers, for a copy of the Texas Almanac containing two hundred and thirty pages of valuable history and statistics referring to their State.

STATE PRINTER.—The office of State Printer has been abolished by the Legislature of Texas, and the work is to be put out to the lowest bidder.

ASSISTANCE PROMPTLY TENDERED.—The Wilmington (N. C.) Journal, of the 19th, has the following: We learn that yesterday afternoon about 5 o'clock, Captain Hall, on behalf of his company, the Wilmington Light Infantry, telegraphed to Gov. Wise tendering him the services of the company, with fifty muskets and a piece of artillery, offering to go at five hours' notice if required. The prompt action of the company was in view of the telegraphic advices from the neighborhood of Charleston, Va. In the course of the evening the following answer was returned: Richmond, Va., Nov. 18-7:38 P. M. Captain E. D. Hall—Please accept thanks. Happily, no additional force is needed. Virginia is ready for the worst that is likely to come. H. A. Wise.

An Anonymous Warning Concerning a Slave Insurrection in Virginia and Kentucky. DR. HENRY A. WISE—Governor of Virginia.—DEAR SIR: Excuse me for the liberty I take in addressing you in an anonymous letter. I would do so if I did not think the circumstances demanded it. I am in possession of facts that justify me in saying that an insurrection is about to take place of such magnitude that the BROWN TIGERS is but a flea bite in comparison. Over twelve hundred men are now drilling and preparing for action in western Pennsylvania, in a retired spot on the Alleghany mountains. They are well mounted and provisioned, and every man is sworn to die in the cause if necessary. The twelve hundred are to make an attack on your State in four divisions of three hundred men each—each to attack different places; at the same time, nine hundred men are to march westward Kentucky. The men for that work are drilling and receiving recruits at certain places in Ohio, not far from the State line. Their exact whereabouts I could not learn. A company is also organized in Indiana and one in Illinois; but what their numbers are or their whereabouts, or when they are to make their first assault I cannot tell; but I think I know enough about the matter to warrant me in saying that a very serious insurrection will soon take place in several of the slave-holding States; and the attack is to be made the same day, or as near as possible. I selected the Pennsylvania division a few days ago. Treat this letter slightly, as did the Secretary of War, and the consequence will be far more disastrous to the people of the slave States. Yours respectfully,

State of Louisiana, Parish of Rapides. M. Rosenthal vs. Benj. Sheffield—No. 607. A Sensation.

We mean something startling, of course, and here it is. On Thursday evening last, when the drifting clouds, like an old pair of pantaloons and other articles of wearing apparel, on a swaying clothes line, were flapping back and forth athwart the countenance of old Sol, a moderately well dressed individual of the bifurcated tribe, either enamoured with the placid muddiness of our Riviere Rouge, or impelled by the combined momenta of bad liquor, disgust and anophytes usual bad luck at the intensely interesting game of Rondo, gave notice to high Heaven and the bystanders, on the levee, that he intended to make a summary solution of the question of "To be or not to be?" so far as he was concerned. That he no longer "would fardels bear, to grunt and sweat under a weary life," but that he intended to wash out his existence, his clothes, and all earthly remembrances in the sandy water of the river, at the Ferry Landing. In other words, he intended to make himself the moist subject of a "Crown's quest." The crowd on the river bank seemed to be delighted with the idea, and some humane party gave the forlorn gentleman the necessary information in regard to the deepest water &c., &c., while we, who have a weakness for "stage effect" could not help admiring the methodical preliminaries of the actor. There upon the staging of the Ferry, with the wind and his fingers disheveling his long locks, his face red with emotion and "bust-head whiskey," he nerved himself for the final plunge! We would say by the way of parenthesis, much to the inconvenience of an old chap who was fishing at the spot,—the old leathern had no soul or eye for the horrible—he deserves to die without seeing even a public execution. In he went, but in a second, he arose spluttering water and "Help!" most lustily. The audience on the bank satisfied with his ability to keep his head above the surface, hereupon held a facetious running conversation with the disappointed non-defunct, telling him to duck his head, if he wished to have the thing a fait accompli. He did so several times, but took the precaution to hold a tight gripe upon the end of his proboscis, and after remaining in the water and mud for some time he was hauled out as limp, collapsed and dripping a specimen of a votary of Bacchus as ever cheated the Corner,—he was a complete case of "brandy and water." He soon introduced himself to another "Bar" than that which he, but a few moments before unsuccessfully endeavored to present himself, and instead of becoming food for fish he furnished "us" with this charming nocturne. When we last saw him, he was trying to impress upon the crowd about him, the fact, that they were "all jolligoofeds in 'wogoholmorin," and hallooing for the "Jourch of Foully, Hunker's Bill and Waniel Debster."

Thos. F. Marshall, of Kentucky, has been lately lecturing in Dubuque, with an irrepressible tendency to pronounce the word constitution "cos-too-shun."
