The Caledonian.

Slavery Illustrating Itself.

The Legislature of Tennessee have passed an act to prevent free negroes from traveling in the railroad cars, unless under the care of a free white citizen, who vouches for the character of the negro in a penal bond of $1000. If any railroad violates the law the penalty of a fine of $500 upon the president and of $250 upon the conductor. The act went through suddenly under the impulse of the Harper's Ferry fright.

A bold conspiracy to enslave a family of free negroes was exposed at Louisville, Ky., last week, and the conspirators, a lawyer named Cleary, and a tailor named McGrath, are in jail awaiting their trial. The family consisted of a widow and her son and his wife, who had been bought by the husband and father. Upon his death, the tailor proposed to the lawyer to forge bills of sale of the whole family from the deceased father to the tailor, and sell them and share the proceeds. The bills were forged and they proceeded to take possession of the negroes, when the latter produced free papers given them by their father. The conspirators had not calculated upon this, and were confounded, and the tables being turned thus handsomely, they were arrested for conspiracy, and it is believed that even a slaveholding jury will be inclined to see them well punished for an act of such meanness and cruelty.

The recent slave escape at Ottawa, Ill., was quietly and shrewdly managed, and nobody could say to anybody, "You did it." Before the slave had been delivered to the deputy marshal by order of Judge Caton, before whom he had been taken on some process to embarrass the owner, some one in the crowd jumped on a table and moved that the meeting resolve itself into a committee of the whole to see the laws executed. Here the marshal made a little speech of thanks, and was moving out of the room with his negro. At this moment some one shouted, "Darkey, if you want your liberty take it!" and the crowd got into a confused state. The darkey and the deputy marshal got separated in the confusion and the African went out of the back door of the court house, over the fence and into a two horse carriage, and his anxious master has not since heard from him.

The delivery of Cook to the United States authorities for trial, is said to be for the purpose of compelling the attendance at the trial of such "conspirators" as Senators Seward, Wilson and Hale, Horace Greeley and Joshua R. Giddings. They will promptly answer such a call.

The brothers Plumb, at Oberlin, Ohio, charged in Copeland's confession with furnishing money for the Harper's Ferry enterprise, deny it absolutely, and say they never had a word of conversation with Copeland on that or any other subject.

PEACHAM, Aug. 19th, 1859.

Dr Kilbourne: SIR: I received a letter from you a few days since making some inquiries respecting my teeth, which you inserted for me a year ago or more. I will endeavor to reply to your questions to the best of my ability.

1st, You ask "how I like my teeth?" 2dly, "what is the adaptation to the mouth—do they set perfectly easy, causing no irritation, &c.? 3d ly "can you eat with them," and lastly, "can you speak as plainly with them as you could with your natural teeth?"

In answer I would say that it affords me pleasure to state that the teeth give good satisfaction. The adaptation to the mouth is as good as I could ask for. It causes no irritation or uneasiness whatever. I can eat anything with them which a person ought to eat with their natural teeth; and in regard to speaking I can say that I perceive no difference in my speaking now and when I had my natural teeth. I have recommended your work very highly to my friends.

With much respect,
HANNAH STUART.

BARTON, Vt., Nov. 8, 1858.

It affords me great pleasure to add my testimony in favor of your valuable medicine, the Magic Compound. I have been subject to a most distressing cough for more than five years, and had tried several remedies without receiving any real benefit. Hearing of your compound, I was induced to give it a trial. I have taken three bottles, and it has entirely cured me. I feel as well as ever in the night for the cough, and can now recommend it to my friends and the public as a most valuable medicine. Yours, respectfully, JAMES WHITE.
