THE CALEDONIAN.

Farm, Garden and Kitchen.

The Potato.

Within a few days disease has made its appearance in many potato fields. In this region the calamity seems likely to be quite as severe as it was last year. The loss will be severely felt. Thousands of families depend largely on this excellent for their sustenance, and there is not a household that would willingly dispense with it. If we regard it only in a pecuniary respect, the damage is immense. Is there no remedy for this great evil? The question is one that interests every farmer, and should receive his careful consideration.

It is a fact well settled that some are specially predisposing to the potato disease. This is the case with stiff clay lands and particularly with wet soils. Ground which has long been under culture seems less conducive to health in the potato, than that which has been just brought to. There is also a choice of manures in this respect. Experience has shown that the best fertilizers for the potato are those which are dry and absorbent,—such as lime plaster bone-dust and the superphosphates. In England ashes are regarded as highly effective in the prevention of potato disease.

But our chief hope and dependence must undoubtedly be in the constant production of new varieties. The propagation of the potato from the tuber is a process similar in character to that of the tree-grafting. The tree indeed lasts a good while, but no care or culture can prevent its ultimate decay and final extinction. There seems to be no reason for supposing that the most vigorous stock can impart to its engrafted and engrossing parasite an enduring vitality not possessed by the parent tree. In the potato the tendency to degenerate soon appears. How many kinds, once greatly prized, have ran entirely out! They become weak, and not only lose their excellence as articles of food, but like feeble animals, they become the ready subjects of disease. The Jackson White, which our experience of this season and of the last has shown to be so liable to rot, was distinguished in the first years of its use for exemption from such tendency. It has been asserted—and so far as I am aware, has not been denied—that those new varieties to which the world is indebted to the late Rev. Chauncey E. Goodrich, have, as yet, suffered from the potato malady. Had he given us only the "Harrison" later, no one who has witnessed its health and productiveness in the field, or who has tested its excellence on the table, would hesitate to bless his memory. It is from one of his varieties that the "Early Rose" was obtained—a potato which is actually making the fortune of those gardeners who had the courage to pay a price for their seed, such as had never been mentioned of before. The example of Mr. Goodrich commends itself to our imitation. There should be many such experimenters.—Boston Advertiser.

A New Plan for Top Dressing.—Last Fall I tried an experiment with which I am so well pleased that I take my pen in hand to write a short article for your valuable paper. For several years past I have been thinking about the amount of manure lost every year by allowing sheep to lie in the pasture at night. My pasture has been used for over thirty years, and as the sheep occupy the same resting places nearly every night, those spots have become like a farm-yard, and I determined to contrive some plan to distribute these droppings over my mowing lot.

Commencing as soon as I got through haying—and I think no man ought to do any haying after July—I made a movable pen by nailing three boards, fourteen feet in length, to three pieces of two-inch scantling, projecting at the bottom for stakes. For one hundred and ten sheep I found it necessary to use two length of these boards for each side of my pen, and one length for each end. I used an iron bar to make the holes for the stakes, and fastened the tops with straps. I think a lighter and more convenient fence might be made, but as mine is, one man will remove the panels, one at a time, and set them in a new place in twenty minutes. By keeping a small trough or two in the pen, and putting into them a little salt or corn, the sheep will learn in three days to run for the pen as soon as let out of the pasture. Last Fall they were yarded on the poorest part of mowing. The first night they were put on a moss grown knoll. One night in a place is sufficient. The effect, as observed this 10th day of June, is wonderful. I am sure there is threefold more grass wherever the sheep were thus yarded than where they were not: it already being knee high, and beginning to head out. Even on the old mossy knoll the grass is a sight to behold, marking by its vigorous growth the exact space on which they were yarded.—Letter from Vermont to New England Farmer.

Another New Potato.—Albert Breese of Hubbardton, Vt., the originator of the Early Rose has brought out another seedling that he calls No. 4. It was exhibited at the Horticultural Fair in Boston, and he was awarded a silver medal. Mr. B. claims that it is even superior to the Early Rose, and two of them have been sold for $50 each by persons who stole them from his field, he refusing to sell them at any price. He will plant next spring all that he has grown, and none will be put into the market under two years. If this proves to be what is claimed for it, Mr. Breese will be entitled to a medal as a benefactor of the human race, as there is certainly nothing that contributes more to the comfort and health of man, than good potatoes.—Homestead.

Better Still.—C. H. Harvey of Newport writes us that he purchased of W. W. Beckett twelve quarts of the Goodrich, Harrison, and Sebec varieties of potatoes, which were planted on 8 rods of ground—yield, thirty-two bushels of as fine potatoes as he ever saw, at the rate of 640 bushels to the acre. They were planted in the middle of a field which yielded at the rate of 300 bushels to the acre, the land being all of same quality. The largest yield was from the Harrison at the rate of 600 bulshels to the acre.—Sherbrooke Gazette.

The editor of the Providence Press relates the following incident: "A family were dining when the conversation turned upon an excursion about to take place. A clergyman at the table spoke to the little girl and asked her if she could repeat the alphabet backward. She said, 'No, sir,' when the gentleman remarked: 'Then you can't go on the excursion.' She looked very demure for a moment, when she asked: 'Can you say the Lord's prayer backward?' 'No, dear.' 'Then,' replied the little girl, 'you can't go to Heaven.'"

NOTICE TO FARMERS.

POTATOES FOR SEED.

I have a limited supply of the celebrated GOODRICH CHINA POTATOES, the Harrison, Early Goodrich and Gardner Chief, which I offer the farmers in the vicinity in quantities sufficient to get them into the seed.

The "Goodrich Seedlings," so called, were raised from the wild potatoes of South America, and after the production of years of careful study and cultivation by the late Rev. Chauncey E. Goodrich, of this place. Twelve varieties in all, of marked superiority, he selected as the sorts of varieties were ordained as worthy of cultivation; and these are remarkable, yet, for vigorous productiveness, 22. Great perfection, 24. Early Goodrich, 26.

It is well known that the vast tribe of potatoes so long cultivated in this section have become "run out" that where, or and she be liable to the same was some only a fair yield, but liable to rot in a bad season. Besides, the common kinds are frequently so affected by disease as to be a great loss to the producer. The Goodrich Seedling have never been known to rot.

Farmers cannot now afford to raise the ordinary kinds of potatoes, for even if they escape the disease, yet they yield so little and at such expense of cultivation. With the same cultivation, or labor, the Goodrich seedlings will produce so much that will be profitable. Let farmers try the experiment and see for themselves.

THE EARLY ROSE.

The Early Rose potato is a seedling from the Jackson White, and has proved the most productive variety, and is noticed the past season not to decay in eight weeks. Remarkably productive, early, and free from disease, the stock was exhausted last spring at the price of $1 per bushel.

I offer for sale this fall the same potatoes at the following prices:

Early Goodrich—A large mottled, white potato—early, a great producer, and large for a good table. With good cultivation, yields from 400 to 600 bushels per acre. Formerly Gardner of Orwell, Vt., raised the crop at the rate of 600 bushels per acre, on 10 rods in field—at the rate of 400 bushels per acre. John Gardner, Gardner Chief—raised the seedling and have plenty from the potatoes.

Price, 25 cents a peck, $1 a bushel.

The Harrison—This is the very best potato known for a field crop. Large, smooth, mottled, white. Early and hardy, it has run the Jackson White out of the house. It is a great producer, and yields the finest table potatoes. J. P. Elliot of Hadlyme, Mass., raised 600 bushels from one bushel planted seed.

Price, $1 a peck, $3 a bushel.

Garden Chief.—A large, red potato, enormous producer, and good table potato, great. Price, one a bushel.

For "Early Rose."—A limited supply of this famous potato, large size, fine, mealy, solid, white. Not withstanding drouth, it is the leading cultivation. I raise it on Rose of Kirby soil. It is one potato of the present season.

The Early Rose will be sent by mail when cash accompanies order.

GREAT EXCITEMENT IN LYNDON!

Teeth Extracted without Pain!

By a simple process which benumbs, in two or three minutes, the teeth and gums, and deprives them of all feeling, and the teeth are removed without pain and with no inconvenience to the patient, who sits and looks on in perfect astonishment to see how easy their teeth are taken out. Also, nerve killed, and sensitive teeth excavated, without pain, filled, and thus made to last for years.

Hundreds have tried the process, and millions will try it. There is no Chloroform, Ether, Gas or danger about it. DR. G. W. MILES is the only one in this part of the State who uses the imposed apparatus.

All other DENTAL OPERATIONS performed in usual. Lyndon, Sept. 17, 1868 39tf
