

We would earnestly remind a large number of our patrons, that they are now running over four months into a new year's subscription of the DEMOCRAT, and have so far failed or forgotten to call at the office and plunk down the dough.

The Radicals smarting under the recent decisions of the Supreme Court are making the effort to virtually nullify the opinions of the Court and to prevent the rendition of any similar decisions in future.

A NEW SAW MILL.—We take great pleasure in calling particular attention to the advertisement of James S. Brady, who has taken charge of Major Seip's new Saw Mill, over the River, a short distance from our Town.

Up to the present writing no arrivals of any of the Saturday Steamers, although a good broad horn flatboat could have reached here in this time.

The mortal remains of General Albert Sidney Johnston, one of the purest of men and the ablest of officers of the Confederate army, have been removed to Austin, Texas, their last resting place.

The three companies of the 80th U. S. C. I., doing duty at this Post, since last June, leave in a few days to be mustered out of the service.

Once more we are blessed with beautiful, clear and cool weather.

The River still falls gradually, and soon the Bailey-dam will be visible.

The Legislature met on Monday, its regular annual session.

N. P. Willis, the poet-editor of the Home Journal, died at Idlewild, his country seat, near New York, a few days since.

St. Valentine's Day will soon be along. So let all take time by the forelock and go to Vie's Saloon and select their Valentines.

We learn that the Rev. Thos. E. Bacon, the Post Master of this Town, has been appointed Agent of the Freedmen's Bureau for the Parish of Winn.

The Steamer St. Nicholas will be here from New Orleans, on Saturday next; and will leave this Town on her down trip Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock.

In the course of a recent debate in the Senate, Mr. Cowan replied to a speech made recently by Mr. Sherman, in which the latter charged that there had been 2000 removals from office during the past year.

It is said that a Saxon lady—the wife of a barrister—her life having been insured for a very large sum, lately committed suicide, in order that her husband should get the insurance money, and free himself from his debt.

A CONVENTION.

We are pleased to observe that the people generally are looking forward to the passage of an act by the Legislature convening a sovereign State Convention at the earliest practicable moment.

The result has been as every one in his senses knew it would be, as we predicted time and again, for which opinion we incurred the last displeasure of those who could see in our warning only the captious objections of disorganizers.

The Legislature, therefore, might as well learn at once that the people have borne these things long enough, and that they will hold to a strict account those who shall be instrumental in perpetuating our present lamentable condition.

How soon forgotten.—So lately dead; so soon forgotten. By the way of the world. We flourish for a while. Men take us by the hand, and are anxious about the health of our bodies, and laugh at our jokes, and we really think, like the fly on the wheel, that we have something to do with the turning of the earth.

NEW ORLEANS CORRESPONDENCE.

NEW ORLEANS, January 24, 1867. Friend Democrat.—The story of a wedding, that almost took place, is furnishing considerable talk just now, and is a warning to all young ladies who are too trusting and to all young gents filled with extra confidence.

The markets have been very unsettled here for the past week—provisions and gold advancing to high figures.—Gold touched at 140, but is settling back a little, and is now quoted at 135 and 136 1/2.

Something like a quarter of a century ago, a marriage took place at Holly Springs, which, at the time, excited no little attention on account of the opposition manifested by the relatives of the lady.

When morning dawned, the lady discovered that she had been abandoned, a stranger among strangers, without friends and without money.

Just MARRIED.—There is a class of un-sophisticated tourists that daily catch the eye of the railroad conductor and old traveler.

Nothing strange about it, oh I Paritain Massachusetts! You sent them plundering "down South," encouraged them in it—and honored the biggest thief of all of them!

Nothing strange about it, oh I Paritain Massachusetts! You sent them plundering "down South," encouraged them in it—and honored the biggest thief of all of them!

FOURTEEN MEN KILLED DURING THE TIME.

A correspondent at Elizabethtown, Carter county, Tennessee, gives us the particulars of a terrible feud that has been raging for twenty years between two families of that county, and which was brought to an end by the bloody deaths of the sole surviving males of the warring tribes.

The two Johnsons laded vengeance upon the Rogers of their kind, and one of them, James, died night and day with but one object in view—to accumulate the means to purchase a rifle.

When morning dawned, the lady discovered that she had been abandoned, a stranger among strangers, without friends and without money.

When morning dawned, the lady discovered that she had been abandoned, a stranger among strangers, without friends and without money.

When morning dawned, the lady discovered that she had been abandoned, a stranger among strangers, without friends and without money.

When morning dawned, the lady discovered that she had been abandoned, a stranger among strangers, without friends and without money.

When morning dawned, the lady discovered that she had been abandoned, a stranger among strangers, without friends and without money.

When morning dawned, the lady discovered that she had been abandoned, a stranger among strangers, without friends and without money.

When morning dawned, the lady discovered that she had been abandoned, a stranger among strangers, without friends and without money.

When morning dawned, the lady discovered that she had been abandoned, a stranger among strangers, without friends and without money.

THE EXTREME PENALTY OF THE LAW.

A rather rapid young gentleman, often seen upon the streets of Middle, whom we shall call Smith, chiefly because it is not his name, went up to West Tennessee to spend the Christmas holidays with a young lady he used to sit up with before the war.

Smith states that while travelling through the most wild and barren of the Tennessee counties bordering on the State of Mississippi, he stopped to spend the night with an old gentleman in whose lot were piled some six or eight bales of cotton.

Smith, who is a fine, practical mathematician, estimates that Mr. Grimes uttered in two minutes and a half, a sufficient quantity of "no" and other imprecations to sink a flatboat.

Smith, who is a fine, practical mathematician, estimates that Mr. Grimes uttered in two minutes and a half, a sufficient quantity of "no" and other imprecations to sink a flatboat.

Smith, who is a fine, practical mathematician, estimates that Mr. Grimes uttered in two minutes and a half, a sufficient quantity of "no" and other imprecations to sink a flatboat.

Smith, who is a fine, practical mathematician, estimates that Mr. Grimes uttered in two minutes and a half, a sufficient quantity of "no" and other imprecations to sink a flatboat.

Smith, who is a fine, practical mathematician, estimates that Mr. Grimes uttered in two minutes and a half, a sufficient quantity of "no" and other imprecations to sink a flatboat.

Smith, who is a fine, practical mathematician, estimates that Mr. Grimes uttered in two minutes and a half, a sufficient quantity of "no" and other imprecations to sink a flatboat.

Smith, who is a fine, practical mathematician, estimates that Mr. Grimes uttered in two minutes and a half, a sufficient quantity of "no" and other imprecations to sink a flatboat.

Smith, who is a fine, practical mathematician, estimates that Mr. Grimes uttered in two minutes and a half, a sufficient quantity of "no" and other imprecations to sink a flatboat.

COMMUNICATED.

As in times of peace, prudent nations are wont to prepare for war—it will not be amiss for us to discuss questions of enterprise and improvement, in the time of great political and financial depression.

Alexandria, situated as she is, in one of the richest parishes of the State in point of soil, and great forests of fine timber, is destined at no distant day to be the center for the reciprocal distribution of a great export and import trade.

As in times of peace, prudent nations are wont to prepare for war—it will not be amiss for us to discuss questions of enterprise and improvement, in the time of great political and financial depression.

As in times of peace, prudent nations are wont to prepare for war—it will not be amiss for us to discuss questions of enterprise and improvement, in the time of great political and financial depression.

As in times of peace, prudent nations are wont to prepare for war—it will not be amiss for us to discuss questions of enterprise and improvement, in the time of great political and financial depression.

As in times of peace, prudent nations are wont to prepare for war—it will not be amiss for us to discuss questions of enterprise and improvement, in the time of great political and financial depression.

As in times of peace, prudent nations are wont to prepare for war—it will not be amiss for us to discuss questions of enterprise and improvement, in the time of great political and financial depression.

As in times of peace, prudent nations are wont to prepare for war—it will not be amiss for us to discuss questions of enterprise and improvement, in the time of great political and financial depression.

As in times of peace, prudent nations are wont to prepare for war—it will not be amiss for us to discuss questions of enterprise and improvement, in the time of great political and financial depression.

As in times of peace, prudent nations are wont to prepare for war—it will not be amiss for us to discuss questions of enterprise and improvement, in the time of great political and financial depression.

COMMUNICATED.

As in times of peace, prudent nations are wont to prepare for war—it will not be amiss for us to discuss questions of enterprise and improvement, in the time of great political and financial depression.

As in times of peace, prudent nations are wont to prepare for war—it will not be amiss for us to discuss questions of enterprise and improvement, in the time of great political and financial depression.

As in times of peace, prudent nations are wont to prepare for war—it will not be amiss for us to discuss questions of enterprise and improvement, in the time of great political and financial depression.

As in times of peace, prudent nations are wont to prepare for war—it will not be amiss for us to discuss questions of enterprise and improvement, in the time of great political and financial depression.

As in times of peace, prudent nations are wont to prepare for war—it will not be amiss for us to discuss questions of enterprise and improvement, in the time of great political and financial depression.

As in times of peace, prudent nations are wont to prepare for war—it will not be amiss for us to discuss questions of enterprise and improvement, in the time of great political and financial depression.

As in times of peace, prudent nations are wont to prepare for war—it will not be amiss for us to discuss questions of enterprise and improvement, in the time of great political and financial depression.

As in times of peace, prudent nations are wont to prepare for war—it will not be amiss for us to discuss questions of enterprise and improvement, in the time of great political and financial depression.

As in times of peace, prudent nations are wont to prepare for war—it will not be amiss for us to discuss questions of enterprise and improvement, in the time of great political and financial depression.

As in times of peace, prudent nations are wont to prepare for war—it will not be amiss for us to discuss questions of enterprise and improvement, in the time of great political and financial depression.