A SOCIAL FAVORITE

MARRIED LAST NIGHT AT CALVARY CHURCH

In the Presence of a Very Large and Fashionable Audience—Reception at the Peabody.

All things considered, Christmas week is perhaps the best time to get married, for the essential joyousness of the occasion is enhanced a hundred fold by the holiday character of the season's environment. This fact was pleasingly impressed upon all who waited in Calvary Church last night for the bridal party to appear. The chancel and its approaches were already arrayed in their holiday garb of holly and evergreen and the perfume exhaled by these fragrant accessories carried with them a suggestion of festivity and merriment and rejoicing that was reflected in legible characters upon the joyous faces of the vast assemblage. Rows upon rows of the loveliest and most fashionable women in Memphis were there, some in full evening dress, in readiness to attend the wedding reception, and others not less attractive in becoming street dress of stylish make and costly texture, attracted by the fame of the bride's beauty and the high social character of the participants in the ceremony. There were others, too, no less lovely, of humbler degree and simpler station in life, who came merely to see or to be seen, or possibly impelled by the irresistible attraction that the spectacle of a fashionable wedding always seems to exercise upon the feminine mind. There were, too, a large delegation of men, many of them prominent in the walks of commerce, and whose presence at a wedding can only be construed as a special compliment to the bride as rare as it was deserved. It goes without saying that every available seat was occupied long before 7:30 o'clock p.m., the hour announced for the ceremony to begin. The church was not only packed to its utmost capacity, but all the avenues of approach were so thickly peopled that when the bridal party did appear a pathway had to be cleared for them through a dense mass of gaping humanity, mostly of the colored race. There was an absence of the tedious waiting incident to such occasions, however, and it was only a few minutes after 7:30 when the appearance of the Rev. David Sessums at the vestry door apprised the expectant multitude that

THE BRIDAL PARTY HAD COME.

Prof. Levy, who had been regaling the audience with light and airy melodies, at once accepted the signal, and the "Concert March," by Ketterer, burst from the organ in a flood of harmony and rolled through the building with increasing volume as if conscious of its mission of welcome. Slowly down the center aisle marched the bridal party in the following order: The groomsmen in double file, Messrs. Lamar Chappell, T. Freeman, C. B. Galloway, jr., J. H. Reis, R. G. Morrow, J. W. Fulmer, J. McReynolds, S. Pepper and J. Walker. These gentlemen ascended to the chancel and divided into two parties, facing each other. There was a craning of necks to see what came next, and the sight was well worth the effort.

It was a vision of loveliness that might well baffle a painter's skill. At first sight and through the intervening haze of distance it looked like a procession of lovely faces floating on clouds of fleecy pink and green and white. But soon these airy forms assumed shape, and proved to be something more tangible than clouds and infinitely more satisfactory, nothing less, in fact, than the bridesmaids an bride coming down the aisle with a grace of motion that might easily account for the illusion above recorded.

First came Miss Annie Lee Polk, of Helena, and Miss Gertie Alcorn, of Mississippi, in pink surah and tulle, green ribbons. Following at a distance of a few feet was a trio composed of Misses Jennie Day and Ida Bruce, with Miss Jessie Alcorn, of Mississippi, between them. Misses Day and Bruce wore pink surah and tulle, and Miss Alcorn green of the same material, the contrasting colors producing a very happy effect.

Behind these ladies came Mrs. Alice Summers, of Louisville, and Miss Maggie Macrae, in green surah and tulle, and following them in white surah and tulle, Miss M. E. Galloway and Miss Carrie Grosvenor, leading between

THE LOVELY BRIDE,

Miss Lottie O. Galloway, in white satin en train, tulle veile and snowballs. The bridal costume was a marvel of the dressmaker's art, and would tax the descriptive eloquence of a fashion writer. Conspicuous in the trimming that adorned it was a profusion of artificial snow balls, furnishing a most appropriate and rich setting to the gem they enclosed. At the foot of the chancel steps Mr. Richard E. Morris, the groom, awaited his bride, and together they mounted the steps and advanced to the chancel rail, where the Rev. Sessums, in immaculate surplice, stood in readiness.

The group that confronted the reverend gentleman was a picture that will countless linger in the memory of those who witnessed it. On either side a row of groomsmen in black dress suits. In front of them two bridesmaids in pink, two in green and one in white. In the center the bride and groom, and to the left of the former the bride's father. Take it all in all, it would be hard to imagine anything more effectively picturesque. The rare beauty of the bride, the undeniable loveliness of the bridesmaids, who seemed to have been selected with especial regard to their personal beauty, the brilliant coloring of the bridesmaids' dresses, and the artistic grouping of the whole, all combined to present a scene that has, perhaps, never been equaled at a similar occasion in this city.

THE CEREMONY,

delivered with the impressive eloquence habitual to the Rev. Sessums, was soon over, and to the enchanting strains of the prelude to the bridal chorus in "Lohengrin," the bridal party soon faded out of sight. The perfect attention to detail that was everywhere manifest was the subject of unanimous commendation. There was no delay, no hitch in the proceedings, no flaw in the splendid spectacle, for such indeed it was. Months of preparation could not have effected happier results, and all concerned are to be congratulated upon having contributed to so brilliant a success.

A RECEPTION AT THE PEABODY

followed, at which the elite of Memphis society was present, as the names published herewith will indicate. The supper, which was served continuously from 9 to 12 o'clock, embraced, of course, an array of delicacies that it would be tedious to enumerate. It is sufficient to say that the chief of this famous hotel eclipsed all his former achievements in the preparation of the banquet. Dancing was, of course, the order of the evening, and as Arnold's Band contributed the music and the great dining hall was converted into a ball room, it is needless to enlarge upon the delightful time that was had. Tracy seemed to have taken special pains to prepare a dancing tablet in keeping with the occasion, and succeeded.

In an apartment set apart for the purpose was an

that attested, if anything were needed to do so, the popularity of the bride. The room could scarcely hold the treasures of the jeweler's art that friendly hands had placed there. Added to these were costly china tea sets, a profusion of silver table ware, bric-a-brac of every description, from the costly bronze and Jeglis porcelain to the polished Venetian mirrors in frames of hammered brass. But why particularize. A list of presents would seem like a catalogue at an art sale, hence we must content ourselves with saying that the donors were numbered by hundreds, and their gifts were all the very choicest specimens of the art they represented.

The bride and groom need only to be named to be recognized by the majority of the readers. The bride has long been a favorite in social circles, where her personal beauty, her amiable manners, her sweet womanly temper have won her a host of life-long friends. The groom, Mr. Morris, is cashier in the counting room of Porter & Macrae, and has won a high place in the esteem of the mercantile community by his fine commercial equipment, aptitude for business and faithful attention to his duties. He is above the medium height, rather good looking, and a fit mate for the fair bride he has won. Among the ladies and gentlemen present at the reception were:

THE RECORD OFFICE FIRE

DESTRUCTION OF A JOURNAL DEVOTED TO LABOR'S CAUSE.

A Blaze on Second Street Caused by an Incendiary—Slight Fire on Market Street.

At midnight fire was discovered in the two-story building, No. 20 Jefferson street. An alarm was sent in from Box 6, and the department was soon on the ground. The fire was found to be located in the second floor, and Engine Company No. 1 and the Babcock extinguished it after the building had been damaged about $300 worth. The building is owned by Mr. A. Gluck, but whether or not he had any insurance could not be learned last night. The ground floor is occupied by M. Isaac as a tailoring establishment, and his place was filled with water, which came through the floor above. His loss will be slight, as his goods were promptly covered with tarpaulins. The second floor is occupied by Buckham & Shroyer as a job office, and also by J. P. Hanson and C. E. Gebhardt, who are the owners of the Southern, or Weekly Record. All the type used in its publication was set up there, and of course it was all knocked into "pi" by the streams of water thrown into the building. There are three job presses in the place, and they were damaged. Messrs. Buckham & Shroyer are insured for $800, while Messrs. Hanson & Gebhardt carry a policy for $500 on newspaper material. The insurance is all placed in Gilbert Raine's agencies. The stock on the second floor was valued at $2100, and the total loss will amount to about $500. Mr. H. P. Hanson, who rents and runs the job office, was in the room when the fire started. He says a burning coal fell from the stove and set fire to a lot of loose paper on the floor. He tried to extinguish the blaze, but was unsuccessful and he gave the alarm.

At 3 o'clock yesterday morning a negro man discovered fire in one of the rooms on the third floor of the four story brick building, No. 258 Second street. An alarm was immediately turned in from Box 6, to which the department promptly responded. They got quickly to work, and extinguished the fire after the building and other property had sustained damage estimated at $400. When the firemen arrived they found the building on fire in several places on the third floor. The fire had already gained considerable headway, and but for prompt and efficient work the entire block might have been destroyed. The third floor was occupied as a lodge or meeting room by a colored secret organization known as the "Independent Order of Immaculates." All their books, papers and other paraphernalia were destroyed, and their loss will foot up about $150. The Knights of Labor and Justice Buttenburg also had rooms in the building, and their effects were slightly damaged by water. Messrs. D. H. Baldwin & Co., dealers in pianos and organs, occupied the lower floor, but they suffered no loss, as the hook and ladder men covered their stock with tarpaulins. They carry $2500 insurance on their stock. The Knights of Labor are insured for $400. The building, which is owned by James Boro, was damaged about $250 worth, and is insured for $6000. The fire was of incendiary origin, and a negro is suspected of having done the work.

The alarm from Box 4, at 7:15 last night, was caused by the burning of a tent at the southwest corner of Market and Main streets. The tent was old and worthless and the loss trifling.

THE THEATER.

Miss Rose Coghlan as "Pauline."

Miss Coghlan appeared last night for the second time on the Memphis stage, and was warmly received by a most appreciative audience, being called before the curtain at the close of every act. The play was Bulwer's well worn Lady of Lyons. It was admirably put upon the stage, the settings being appropriate and the costumes rich as the period of the play would permit. The following was the cast:

Claude Melnotte...Mr. Frederick de Belleville
Col. Damas...Mr. Charles Walcot
Mons. Beausseant...Mr. A. S. Lipman
Mons. Glavis...Mr. G. Herbert Leonard
Gaspar...Mr. Malcolm Bradley
Landlord...Mr. Charles Rawin
Mons. Deschapelles...Mr. Verner Clarges
Capt. Dupont...Mr. Chester Barnes
Major Desmouling...Mr. Adolph Bernard
Notary...Mr. W. Masnichol
Widow Melnotte...Miss Clyde Harron
Madame Deschapelles...Mrs. Charles Peters
Rose Coghlan...Pauline

Miss Coghlan, as "Pauline," made a new impression as of an artiste whose resources are rich in all the qualities essential to the portrayal of the many-sided characters that lie between the deepest passion and the lightest gaiety. She gave a most charming presentation of the character, her surprise, disappointment and chagrin in the third act being quite equaled by her disdain of the overtures of "Beausseant" in the fourth. All the fine qualities of a noble nature were fittingly portrayed. And the strength of an honorable passion, the tenderness and sweetness of love, were never more beautifully depicted than in the closing act when the soldier husband was restored to the arms of his bride, made more lovely by her trials and sorrows. Mr. DeBelleville made a very good "Claude," a little too heavy in appearance and manner, and wanting in the debonnair air that is the traditional and becoming manner of "Melnotte" in the love making scenes. He delivered the famous "Lake Como" scenes with effect, and in the fourth act, where he parted with his wife to join the army, he was most effective. Mr. Charles Wolcot, always the artist, was, as "Col. Damas," the very beau ideal of a bluff old soldier, and Mr. Lipman gave an excellent portrait of "Mons. Beausseant." The "Mons. Deschapelles" of Mr. Vernon Clarges, was as painstaking and clever a performance as his "Sir Oliver" in the School for Scandal. The rest of the company did admirably and the performance was a decided success. Tonight Miss Coghlan appears as "Peg Woffington," in the play of Masks and Faces, a character which she plays con amore, the announcement of which ought to fill the house. As on last night, and on Monday a theater-party will fill the boxes in honor of the favorite artiste and her unexcelled company of comedians.
